Famed for his seven accurate prophecies about the course of the present war, Henry Peterson, who has been described by William Arthur Deacon as having personality, breadth of experience and an amazing grip on facts, will be in the city on Friday to address a meeting of the Women's Canadian Club. The son of a Danish father and Chinese mother, Mr. Peterson has an Oxford education, has travelled extensively and has been interested in a variety of occupations that include professional boxing in New York and being Canadian foreman for General Motors in Detroit.

A veteran of the last war, he served for eighteen months in the trenches and later with the R.A.F. First-hand knowledge of conditions in three continents give Mr. Peterson marks authority. His startling prophecies grow naturally out of a not extremely analytical mind that has digested exactly the right material and his lecture should be one of absorbing interest.

Talks on Conditions in Casablanca And China Heard by Rotary Club

Trenton —(Special)— With the International Committee, under Chairman Thomas Bain, in charge of the weekly meeting of the Trenton Rotary Club, and with 30 members and their friends present, the second of the series of talks on "Our R.C.A.F. station in Africa by Mr. Mainer, and one on China by Squadron Leader Cowley, of the Trenton R.C.A.F. station.

Mr. Mainer, who was introduced by Mr. Bain, and who was a charter member of the Rotary Club, Casablanka, Rotary Club, and is now associated with the Bata Shoe Co. in the export department, spent a considerable time in Casablanca, North Africa, having been there in 1940. His address dealt with social and economical conditions in that part of the country and was particularly interesting to his listeners in view of the present interest in events there.

Squadron Leader Cowper was introduced to Rotary by Mr. W. W. Smith, and his address dealt with the people of China with whom he had become familiar. He spoke of the untiring effort which these people are putting today and of how they have been fighting and struggling for years past to keep their country free from the hordes of their youth and educate them to take up the heritage of civil life and action. "Today," said the speaker, "China is fighting a war and is taking their university classes in caves and huts, far away from the good fortune which is unusual to say the least, included Messrs. William Hall and Charles Andrews, Jack Armstrong and William Curran all of Stirling, Malcolm King of Frankford, Gordon Ross, Port Hope, William Tower, Tuttff Ontario, and Maurice Adams, Deseronto.

Numbering nine in the party each was successful in securing a deer and all were back in Stirling before the season ended with storage and processing, which is the topic of conversation for many days to come. The buck deer bagged by this party upped the scales at 180 and 200 lbs. respectively. Not given to boasting the boys simply said upon their return "We had fun" and the season which is putting it a bit mild. Nine hunters and nine deer is more than fair luck in the eyes of many hunters, who didn't do so well.

SPAIN'S ACTION SEEN AS EFFORT TO AVOID FIGHTING

Private Advices Reaching New York So Interpret Mobilization Move

WORDING OF ORDER

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Spain's move to insure of her position of total 3,000,000 soldiers is generally accepted in Europe and Hispanic quarters as a bona fide effort to avoid fighting, rather than any step toward military co-operation with her Axis friends, it was indicated in reliable private advices reaching New York Wednesday.

With German military might stirring firmly on his northern doorstep and powerful Allied forces arrayed across the narrow Gibraltar Strait to the south, Gen. Francisco Franco has ordered mobilization of his land air and sea forces, it was disclosed yesterday in Madrid.

Instead of using the more forthright—and possibly alarming—term "mobilization," the announcement said merely that heads of the three armed services are being allowed to call up the necessary men to reinforce their commands.

This cautious wording was accepted as typical of the care with which the Spanish leader is treading to avoid making his long-neglected battle-scarred country a battleground again.

Even while the foreign ministry of Ramon Serrano Suner, his Axis-loving brother-in-law, was in power could be brought fully into the Rome-Berlin fold and he declined to become a full partner after the fall of France so it is unlikely he would do so now with Allied fortunes mounting.

Since Suner shuffled last summer, Count Francisco Gomez-Jordana, the new foreign minister, has been steering toward true neutrality rather than the pro-Axis non - belligerency which Suner maintained. He has told all diplomats in Madrid that that is his purpose.

Brussels is Fined 5,000 Bicycles!

From the Belgian Information Centre, (New York).

Americans may be mechanically minded, but there is one thing about which they are entirely inhorant—the bicycle. The American can nonchalantly look with a mixture of wonder and horror at the heavy, clumsy contraptions on which American messenger boys catagolt through traffic, in defiance of all laws and common sense. He knows that for a bicycle the height of elegance is to be as light, as serial, as possible. A bicycle must be a dragon fly, as thin and as invisibly muscular as this insect. The American bicycle looks to him like a ponderous, over-fed drone.

This difference in type and build might be explained by scholarly theories on the influences of arty surroundings. In the United States, the bicycle automatically suggests a messenger boy, but Holland your first thought would be of Her Majesty Queen Wilhelmina herself, pedalling around over her flat countryside.

Much has been said about our need for "escape." Everybody, in every latitude, tries to get away from his daily routine from time to time. He generally does it in a way which roughly suggests the romantic scenes of the past. Instead of a swinging sleed he uses a powerful car, and in Europe he must often resorts to the services of his humble but faithful servant the bicycle.

No people in Europe were more bicycle-minded than the Belgians. With a population of 8,250,000 people, they had nearly 3,000,000 bicycles which must have been a record, with the possible exception of Holland, where even the ministers ride to Cabinet meetings on that vehicle.

But if the Belgians were outclassed in numbers they were the only Europeans who could get the utmost production from their bicycles. They had become the Paganini's of the bicycle, the Heifetz's of the velocipede—because they did not consider it essentially an easy means of locomotion, but a rapid means of transportation. The Dutch sit on their bicycles as if they were riding a thoroughbred, dignified and erect; but the Belgians crouch over it, straddling themselves, and nobody therefore can beat a Belgian guy on a bicycle as far as speed is concerned. The flat country of Flanders with the strong winds blowing in from the sea became the training ground of champions. There was never a village carnival without its cycling contest and every year all Belgians followed the "Flandriens" who were defending the national colors in the famous Tour de France winning every stretch in the flat country fighting like devils in the Lure of Pyrenees Mountains.

When the Germans invaded Belgium for the second time in May, 1940, the photographs of the scenes which clogged the roads to France showed thousands of cyclists—files among the stream of vehicles. The 3,000,000 bicycles had taken the road en masse. The most incredible stories of speed and endurance have been told about Belgians who reached the farthest corners of France on their bicycles.

Gradually the Germans took over all of the automotive vehicles in Belgium until practically no private individual was allowed to use a car. As usual they tried to camouflage the motives for their actions in order to hide the true principle of their policy. Of course, they needed all the Belgian cars they could lay their hands on, but by withholding them they told the populace that this had to be done in punishment for some "crime" or other, committed by Belgian motorists.

Recently, however, they unmasked their batteries a little more and gave proof of how hard up they are for means of transportation. They punished the city of Leige a few weeks ago as reprisal for an act of sabotage. As a rule the German commander used to impose a heavy fine on the city—from one to five million francs ($30,000 to $150,000). But after all these cities do afford the individual citizen much. If the city has to pay a fine, he feels it. Only last year an increased taxation and certainly every citizen of Liege or Brussels would gladly pay a few dollars if this sum were to pay for the blowing up of the Kommandantur or to condone for the death of a traitor.

After two years of study—and everybody knows that the Germans are very conscientious students—they found a new means of punishing the recalcitrant Belgian. Their discovery was based on the fact that, as everywhere in the world, the little people in Belgium were also those who resisted Nazi interference most effectively. They should be taught a lesson. The Germans had already taken their food, leaving them on starvation rations; they had already slowed down and decreased railway transportation.

They had a sudden brain wave, a stroke of genius: they ordered Liege to deliver up 300 bicycles, and a few days later they imposed a fine of 5,000 bicycles on Brussels.

By so doing they punish the little people who depend on their bicycles to go to work, who use them to go into the country to get supplementary food, who have only their bicycles as a means of escape from the drudgery of life under the occupation.

There is, however, one significant side to this action. The Germans apparently have no regard for Belgian money which they have underrated through all kinds of inflationary measures. They want real values things that are worth while. Among the few things which were left to the Belgians, besides the sunshine and some rain, was the bicycle for which the sports writers had, in times of peace, invented such a poetic and endearing a term as "petite reine de la route", the little queen of the road.

It is a strange thing that in the midst of a world upheaval, this silly, enthusiastic, sentimental nickname, invented by the sports writers, should suddenly acquire significance and even justification.

"Here's How I Keep Feeling Fit and Well"

Several Years Ago was Feeling Rundown. Had Aches and Pains, Dizziness and Couldn't Sleep. Found Synotone Gave Him Prompt Relief. "Take It Now Whenever I feel Out of Sorts," He Says.

MR. S. SEYMOUR

Thousands of Ontario men and women have found Symiona Herbal Compound, Mint Compound, for occasional disorders of stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and relieving indigestion, nervousness, loss of appetite, dizziness, headache and rheumatic aches and pains. Many of them, like Mr. S. Seymour, 165 Fourteen Street South, are so fast to say it is the best medicine they ever used and are constantly recommending it to friends and neighbors.

My experience with Symiona began several years ago when I was badly rundown and having a lot of rheumatic aches and pains in my arms and limbs," said Mr. Seymour. "My back was sore and weak, my eyes were needing running glasses and I was troubled with slight-headed feelings. I rarely got proper sleep at night and felt fatigued and listless all the time.

After finishing a short treatment of Symiona the aches and pains had gone away and I was enjoying the first good night's rest I had in months. I awakened and picked up and I felt full of energetic. It also got my bowels moving more regularly and the dizziness, together with that tired listless feeling disappeared. Since then I have been using Symiona as a tonic and find Symiona whenever I feel out of sorts. It is my favorite medicine and am more than glad to help out. ## Mechanized Forces Clash With Nazi Armored Vehicles

17 in Detachment, 11 of Them Tanks, Destroyed and Prisoners Taken

PETAIN ACTIVE

By E. C. DANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 20—(AP)—Heavy fighting has developed in Tunisia with the first-round going to British and American mechanized teams driving toward Bizerte and Tunis from several directions, one of a spokesman at the Allied headquarters in North Africa said today that a third of one Nazi panzer column had been destroyed and two other columns hurled back.

In Libya, the Germans gave up Benghazi, Marshal Rommel's first escape port short of Tripoli.

Allied mechanized forces which drove through the coastal spur of the Atlas Mountains gave the Germans their first major drubbing of the winter campaign in Tunisia, 10-40 miles from the big Bizerte naval base while pushing at least half way to Bizerte from the Algerian border.

Petain Still Leases Light

Allied losses were described as small although the Nazis used their best medium tanks in the fight and supported them with the dive-bombers. The two-thirds of the panzer column which still remained in the area of battle also fell back before the Allied onsweep.

The other two Nazi columns were reported in engagements to the south.

It appears that the Germans are digging in about 20 miles southwest of Bizerte and in the Tunis area they are preparing to make their stand there," a spokesman at the Allied headquarters said. He added that "although the French situation is extremely confused, it appears that almost all the real Tunisian elements are troubled by pro-Allied French garrisons or occupied by the Allies themselves.

"German losses in yesterday's clashes were quite heavy, but they have no pursuing in reserves and it looks like we are in for considerable fighting."

REPORT FRANCO GIVES WARNING

He is Said to Have Warned If Axis Bases Seized He Would Accept Aid From Other Side

New York, Nov. 20 — (AP) — Having burst in his unstraitling line, Gen. Francisco Franco has warned both Axis and Allies that any seizure of Spanish bases would force Spain to accept aid immediately from the other side, Berne from informed European sources said today.

There were unconfirmed reports in Madrid and elsewhere abroad that Germany and Italy had asked and been refused use of Spanish bases on the Mediterranean coast and the Balearic Islands. Accompanying these reports were other unconfirmed but persistent, that Franco had delivered his warning to Berlin and Rome before any request could be made.

Usually reliable sources, who could not be named, said that this qualification had been delivered to the Axis capitals by virtue of the backing of a majority of his generals and that it stems logically from the determination of the Spanish leader to maintain true neutrality, according to the attitude slanted non-belligerency that was Spain's when the Allied powers erupted so forcefully at her African doorsill.

These advices came while Spain was in the process of effecting the partial mobilization ordered by Franco early this week, which may double or triple her army of 500,000 men.

Newsman Reports Exciting Trip To Tobruk Harbor After Foe Leaves

(By EDWARD H. CROCKETT)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Aboard a British Destroyer in Tobruk Harbor, Nov. 16, (Delayed) (AP)—We have been in the bomb-splattered harbor a few minutes and the Germans have gone, but only the last two days this flotilla has been busy.

The job of these ships is to clear the sea lanes for merchant traffic, and to keep the harbor clear of damage the cargo vessels.

That job, therefore, the way for eventual juncture with Anglo-American forces driving from the Mediterranean, establishing complete mastery of this sea.

A British destroyer's vessels to enter Tobruk Harbor since the reoccupation.

The town looks much the same as it did when I was here by land with the army early last June—very few buildings left but more than that a few more now couldn't make any difference.

But the harbor is even more the harbor of wrecked ships.

There were 43 wrecks ranging from a former Italian liner and a major Italian cruiser to tugboats, when I last saw the port. Now there are many more. Some are partly out of the water. Most are on the bottom but visible in a clear day, and a few are not. Italian merchant ships, destroyers, Axis submarines and Axis wrecks.

But now this vital harbor again is in British hands and already is being used to supply the Forces which have driven the Nazis from Libya and the Allied armies in the west.

We boarded this vessel on Friday the 13th and sailed in the early hours of the 14th. A few hours after daylight we saw our first Axis plane—but it went down before we could reach it.

Throughout the day Italian torpedo bombers approached from starboard and the port. Each time they dropped two torpedoes and then turned off. The ship's commander stepped close by our stern and expended harmlessly in the sea. We cleared damaged.

The Solomons naval battle which cost the United States two light cruisers, four destroyers, also brought death to an estimated 20,000 or 30,000 Japanese troops when eight transports were sunk or bottled.

The enemy transports presumably carried much fighting equipment.

As a result of these naval experts predicted the battered foe would be forced to take at least three weeks to recover enough strength for another full-scale assault at the strategic island.

The Japanese have admitted loss of a battleship in the conflict, a cruiser and three destroyers but claimed that eight American cruisers were sunk, one transport and four or five destroyers.

AXIS EVACUATES BENGASI, GERMAN COMMAND STATES

Forces of Allies Begin Bombardment of Bottleneck at Agheila by Air

TANKS CAPTURED

Cairo, Nov. 20 (AP)—The Allies have begun the aerial bombarding of the El Agheila bottleneck, next possible stopping place in the retreat of Marshal Erwin Rommel, while closing in on Bengasi (which the German high command said had been evacuated by Axis forces), the Axis claimed today.

Determined that there will be no stopping this time in the 30-mile wide corridor where the Axis twice in previous campaigns has disastrous retreat to a halt, American airmen hammered an airfield south of El Agheila while Gen. Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army drove up from Bengasi from both north and south.

Scores of war material were added to British booty as the northern column advanced along the coast.

Twenty-eight tanks, 34 guns and 40 vehicles have been taken or destroyed in a 70-mile stretch between Bengasi and Ghuza, Lieut. Gen. Montgomery's communique claims is 96 miles northeast of Benghazi.

A U.S. army communique said American fighter planes attacked Marcun airfield, about 100 miles south of El Agheila in the passage between salt marshes and the sea where the Axis apparently has been able to nurse its wounds for comparative safety. Six enemy planes were destroyed.

With the fall of Bengasi, Marshal Rommel would have no easily defensible position short of this corridor, 161 miles southwest of Bengasi.

British forces twice before — in February and in December, 1941— captured Bengazi, the seaside town which Italy had developed to make the centre of a model colony of Victoria Italy.

Axis Abandons Town Third Time

Fresh Australian troops were among indications that the Axis was getting ready to abandon the town for a third time. Australian fires were noted there, apparently the Axis "scorched earth" policy which were burning in the harbor in an apparent attempt to block the entrance.

First Duty of Allies To Watch Over Victory When War Is Won

Churchill

New York, Nov. 20 — (CP) — When the war is won it will be the first duty of the United Nations to "watch over the victory we have gained and ensure that no new tyranny is again allowed to loose tragedy upon the world," Prime Minister Churchill said last night.

In a message to the first anniversary dinner of Freedom House, Mr. Churchill declared:

"It is not too soon for those who are now beating down these tyrants and who are preparing the instance which will defend the rights and liberties which our arms will have rescued and restored."

A message from President Roosevelt said in part:

"The problems of victory and peace are immediate and pressing. They are one our doorsteps today. They are on our doorsteps today. They are on our doorsteps today. They are on our doorsteps today. They are on our doorsteps today. They are on all the citizens of this democracy, banded together by a common danger and a common purpose."

W. Averell Harriman, United States Minister to Great Britain and Mr. Roosevelt's representative on lend-lease in British and Russia, told the dinner gathering that Mr. Churchill and President Joseph Stalin last August of the plans for a North African front.

Discussions Were Frank

"I participated in these discussions," he said, "and can assure you they were frank and blunt—both men spoke their minds."

It is easy to understand that Stalin was disappointed that an offensive could not be undertaken at once to take off the backs of the Red Army some of the strength of the German attack directed at Stalingrad and the Volga. He explained: to us in detail the number of German divisions which over-balanced the Allied strength.

"It was his expectation that we could launch earlier an offensive which would force Hitler to draw off this determining forces. Nevertheless he made it plain that the Russians would fight on with unwavering courage and determination."

Of the determining military strategy of the war Harriman, said, "I have had personal experience that Churchill won't sacrifice his troops to satisfy popular clamor and the pressure which his policy by allowing the date of the North African occupation to be fixed by military considerations—not by election-day results."

Millies U.S. Men Overseas by Spring

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson said that "by the end of 1943 we will have more than 1,000,000 men overseas."

Discussing the United States' shipping problem, Patterson said, "the submarine menace must and can be stepped up, and the day will finally come, as it was in 1918, when our crews will refuse to go down into submarines."

Stating that there is no plan to send the entire army abroad," Patterson declared: "We have created vast base of operations from which men and ships will be sent all over the world. A substantial part of our army must be retained here for defense of supply, for training, for our defence commands, for the security of this hemisphere and for a strategic reserve to meet emergencies and to exploit successes."

JAPANESE LOST 28 NAVAL SHIPS IN SEA BATTLE

Victory in Solomons Grows In Magnitude as New Losses Reported

10 SHIPS DAMAGED

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—Japanese losses in last week's Solomon day sea battle have now reached the staggering proportions of 28 ships destroyed and 10 more damaged.

This setback, believed to have cost the Nipponese two battleships, six heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, 18 destroyers and 13 transports and cargo ships, became even more crushing when Admiral Nimitz also reported bombers sent another cruiser and a transport to the bottom last night.

The victory in the Solomons grew in magnitude last night when the navy's delayed report on Saturday night's battle off the Guadalcanal island told of the sinking of a Japanese battleship, a heavy cruiser, three large cruisers and a destroyer.

United States battleships, mentioned for the first time in a navy communique in the Southwest Pacific war, exchanged long-range salvos last night with the foe to turn stern and flee northward.

New Jersey Sunken

While citing the sinking of the two warships, both damaged of a another battleship, cruiser and a destroyer, the navy cautioned "this report of damage may include some of the damage already reported."

First reported sunk by torpedo from Nov. 13 to 15 on Monday told of the destruction of 21 Japanese vessels including a battleship and three heavy cruisers. Seven others, including a heavy cruiser, were declared damaged.

The Solomons naval battle which cost the United States two light cruisers, four destroyers, also brought death to an estimated 20,000 or 30,000 Japanese troops when eight transports were sunk or bottled.

The enemy transports presumably carried much fighting equipment.

As a result of these naval experts predicted the battered foe would be forced to take at least three weeks to recover enough strength for another full-scale assault at the strategic island.

The Japanese have admitted loss of a battleship in the conflict, a cruiser and three destroyers but claimed that eight American cruisers were sunk, one transport and four or five destroyers.

20 YEAR TERMS, 30 LASHES GIVEN IN ROBBERY CASE

Two Soldiers and Negro Convicted for Robbing and Assaulting Kingston White Mechanic

SEVERELY INJURED

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 20. —(CP)— Convicted of what the court termed "one of the most brutal crimes," two soldiers from St. Luke Road Barracks and a Windsor Negro were sentenced by Judge J. J. Coughlin to 20 years each in penitentiary and 30 lashes each by Judges Court today and in addition were ordered to pay the victim $100.

The trio, Pte. Norman L. Johnson, 28, Jackson St., Hebden, Ont., Pte. Richard Grant, 28, the latter Negro, heard their sentences calmly. They were convicted following the court they had nothing to say and afterwards left the court room found guilty of robbery with violence of Pte. Frederick Wigle, 27, severely injured in a vicious beating given Lloyd Wigle, 27, year-old Kingston mechanic, on a lonely spot just outside Windsor on the night of Oct. 7.

Pte. Wigle was severely injured that he was found an hour later by a passing motorist, with his clothes all ripped off but his neckband, by the railway tracks of the Michigan Central Railway yards. His automobile was found parked in a pocket book containing $15 and a cigaret lighter was missing.

All three accused admitted seeing Wigle at a beverage room of a local hotel on the night in question, but emphatically denied his charge. They claimed they made an offer of a ride home and then proceeded to beat him and rob him of his money. They pleaded a case of mistaken identity.

"It would be difficult for even a magician to find substitutes for these men," Judge Coughlin declares as you," His Honor observed, stating that he was fully satisfied from the evidence that there was no case of mistaken identity. "Wigle had plenty of opportunity to observe all three of you and there can be no possibly could be mistaken," he said.

45,000 GERMANS ROUTED BY REDS IN MAJOR BATTLE

Pressure Eased On Great Grozny Oil Fields Near The Caspian Sea

RETAKE POSITIONS

(By EDDY GILMORE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Nov. 20. (AP)—Red Army units spared land after defeating Germans in the deep Caucasus today, following up a major victory that eased Nazi pressure on the great Grozny oil fields near the Caspian Sea, but still left the way road leading south into the Caucasus Caucasus.

Latest front-line reports here out of the winter campaign in the area for Fascist force—possibly four divisions of 45,000 men—was routed in the Nalchik area and in the approaches to Ordzhonikilze.

Special Communique

A special communique brought front news of the triumph last night recording 5,000 of the enemy killed, several times that many wounded and vast military booty captured.

Today's added details confirmed the Red Army's grip on the situation and spread joy among the Russian people whose hope and confidence have been rising as temperatures have fallen under the impact of the winter.

Today's mid-day communique brought good news from the front to the north where the German assaulting forces are at 5,000 over a three-day period of futile attacks in an attempt to take a powerful by-captured town on the Volkhov sector of the Leningrad front.

"There are bitter complaints that people in suburban stations have few chances of getting away. Train after train passes without stopping, already loaded up, amid shouts and curses."

The dispatch added that the Genoa newspaper Corriere Della Mercantine published a story saying "railway salvation is the first every means at their disposal for the speediest possible evacuation of civilians."

Canadian Navy Man 2nd in Command Of Sub Which Torpedoed U-Boats

(By ALLAN NICKLESON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A British Port, Nov. 20 (CP)— Handsome young fellow who claims he has college books to read on the navy and wound up in a submarine is a Canadian lieutenant, Peter Forbes, of Wolfville, N.S., can boast "special commendation" from admiralty. The underwater craft in which he is second in command torpedoed two U-boats.

It isn't often one sub sinks another, let alone two, but these were exceptional days for the crew of the light. Keith said that "we happened to be there."

One of the few Canadians on submarine service with the Royal Navy, 22-year-old Keith came to this port when his craft was in for refitting after 14 months in the Mediterranean and Adriatic. He was "resting" when I found him between "weeks of boredom" and besides his own exploits, his craft damaged, at least, several supply ships on their way to reinforce Rommel.

Member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve on loan to the Royal Navy, Keith, as second in command of an R. N. captain, was manning the periscope when the first U-boat, "Keith—said. "Away down there with Nazis skating you up."

Enemy Cruiser And Destroyer Sunk at Buna

Sea and Air Relief Thrust to Reinforce Japanese Base Completely Smashed

ALLIES CLOSE IN

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Nov. 20—(AP)—Australian and American jungle fighters pinned the Japanese into a narrow coastal doy along the Papuan coast between Buna and Gona today after Allied airmen had smashed an enemy sea and air relief thrust, sinking a cruiser and destroyer and shooting down three planes.

Today's communique said that Allied ground forces were fighting in the outskirts of Buna and Gona. The settlement about 30 miles northwest along the coast where the Japanese made their initial landing in this region last July 22.

After days of withdrawal with little or no resistance, the Japanese apparently decided to make a stand at Buna and Gona in an effort to prevent expulsion from the sector from which they launched the drive that menaced Port Moresby on the Australian side of New Guinea, only last September.

Under the command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of Allied forces in the South Pacific, the Allies seemed close to the climax of the counter-offensive which his driven the enemy back along his own path over the Owen-Stanley mountains and down to the coastal jungles in about seven weeks.

5 MEN KILLED AS STEEL PLANT ROOF COLLAPSES

25 Others in Hospital at Welland and a Number Still Trapped in Debris

NO DETAILS GIVEN

Welland, Ont., Nov. 20 — (CP)— Five men were killed, 25 others were in hospital and from one to 10 men were still trapped in the wreckage of a building which collapsed today at the plant of Welland Steel Company.

Names of the men were not immediately available but it was believed that most were from outside Welland. All are employees of the Piggott Construction Co. of Hamilton which was erecting the building for Atlas Steel.

Workmen were still digging in the debris of the three-storey reinforced concrete building in an effort to reach those who were said to be still trapped. Estimates of the number still under the debris ran from one to 10 persons.

Between 30 and 40 men were caught when the roof of the building fell down and pulled the walls with it. Six men were said to have been rescued and three of these were rushed to the hospital in ambulances, many autos also even dump trucks. Ambulances from points as far as Catharines were also called. All doctors at Welland and nearby Niagara Peninsula points were called to the hospital.

It was believed that the men still trapped in the wreckage might not be finally reached until tomorrow and there was little hope that they would be found alive.

The building collapsed at 1 p.m.

Life in a Mining Camp, 400 Miles North Of Winnipeg, Told by Former Belleville Boy, Harry Hurley, Assistant Mine Manager

Little Community Has Its Own School, Hospital, Church Missions, Hotel And Movie Theatre Also Million Dollar Hydro Plant—Passenger Traffic Is Handled by Plane Service

FISH PLENTIFUL BUT GAME SCARCE

(By GEORGE H. CARVER)

Four hundred miles north of Winnipeg, in a setting as beautiful as its name suggests, is the location of the God's Lake Gold Mines Limited.

In this lake-studded virgin region beyond the fringe of human activities, lies this little community boasting the prominence of not more than the "outside" except by the sky lanes, and in winter time a tortu ous road of its own construction.

Here is the picturesque beauty that is Canada's northwest hinterland's alone. A place, where some three hundred miles south of Hudson Bay, 140 men live, some with their families, wresting gold ore from the fastnesses of subterranean earth.

But that's in the Ontario Intelligencer today. He is a former well-known resident of this city, and at present assistant manager of the God's Lake Gold Mines Ltd., who is spending a week here with his mother, Mrs. Thomas H. Hurley, Ann Street.

For ten years, deep in the heart of a fishing and trapping paradise remote from the artificial veneer of metropolitan centres, the community has gone about its daily tasks, its skylines the rugged beauty of timbered woodlands; its cathedral the vist dome of blue above and its suburban areas, the natural terrain, jewel-studded with beautiful lakes. God's Lake itself is 70 miles long by 30 miles wide.

Self-Contained Community —

It is an entity in itself. It has its own school and teacher, with some 30 pupils in attendance; its own hospital with X-ray equipment, and doctor; a store, movie theatre and Roman Catholic and United Church Missions.

Automobiles, gasoline and tire restrictions do not bother the God's Lake employees, for there is no road to Ilford, 135 miles to the north, they go by the shortest route—by air.

Train service is available to a point 75 miles south of Ilford, but from that point the God's Lake resident or visitor will find himself in the fuselage of a plane, to quote Mr. Hurley, "alongside a bale of skins, packages of freight, or perhaps a baby on his lap, while assuring some passenger with her family."

The plane service runs on schedule and you can usually catch the plane if you have $75 in cash for the fare, one way.

Wintertime Road

In the wintertime, however, the company utilizes its $80,000 D-8 freighting equipment, namely heavy tractors and 100 sleighs form a wintertime convoy that travels over 135 miles of torturous road built through the wilderness, and across ice-covered lakes, to bring in a year's requirements of supplies for personnel and the mine.

Winter Comes Early

Winter comes early in this part of Canada. God's Lake miners enjoyed their first lake skating this year on October 6th, Mr. Hurley said. The temperature drops sometimes to fifty below, but the average winter mercury hovers around the "twenty below" mark. Rainfall is not heavy, from six to four feet in depth, for thickness in the summertime lakes, however, it ranges from four to five feet some years.

The summer season is short. Vegetables growth is rapid but brief, so no planting is worth while before June 15. But at that, residents have a fair garden and kind in raising staple lines. About June 1st there is ice immediately around on the lakes; some years an August frost ruins gardens.

There is an abundance of wild fruit life. The heaviest yield comes from the low-bush blueberries. Other varieties are wild strawberries, and blueberries.

The 250 inhabitants do not lack for entertainment in the long evenings, although a great part of the crew is on shift, work nights and seven days a week. The community has its dances, entertainments, etc., while many inter-family functions are held. It has had its hockey and softball teams. In the latter it also states and has its ice pleasures.

Liquid Refreshment Expensive

There is a small hotel in the community, and also its "outside" counterparts, it has its beverage rooms. Liquid refreshment retails at small profit. It the celebrant desires his cheer in Scotch or other forms, he can buy it at the company store at God's Lake. Airplane companies charge 30c the pound for freight, and the extra "cheer" weighs about 8 pounds, Mr. Hurley said.

God's Lake and its drainage stream, God's Lake, flows north to Lake of the Woods, Mr. Hurley said. In the deep depths of the lake lurk the grey trout which weigh up to 40 pounds each. In the river are found the speckled trout besides averaging up to four and a half pounds each. Commercial fishing nets have yet to find their way into these waters, but the government issues special permits to trappers who use dog-teams, to use nets in order to procure feed for their animals.

Beaver, otter and muskrat are plentiful in the district and many Cree Indians and also a number of Ojibway Indians are employed in these fur-bearing animals. Game is scarce, Partridge in the early days and a occasional duck or wild goose is noticed. Deer are rare but sometimes a moose is seen.

Community Health Good —

The health of the community is of a high standard. Mr. Hurley said. Compulsory inoculation and vaccination is in force and the doctor (he is the only one) sees that good food are some of the main factors in the rarity of major illness. Drinking water is chlorinated.

Families of the community live in private houses while the single men live in groups in houses of their own, smaller dormitories. The cost of living, Mr. Hurley said, apart from fresh fruits and vegetables, is only slightly higher than that of the cities.

Light and power for the community is furnished by its own hydro plant, erected some 40 miles distant at cost of about a million dollars. It develops 1,900 horsepower.

Labor Shortage

Like other communities of the Dominion, the spectre of shortage of labor skilled and otherwise has had an effect on the operations of the mines. So serious has been it, some that the company is considering the possibility of closing down for the summer for the duration. At present it is working under the handicap of a shortage of fifty men and in a number of cases Cree Indian labor has been utilized. Many of its former employees have left to join the R.C.A.F. and the army, Mr. Hurley said. No employee has yet been killed in service, but this is one of the main contributing factors to the present labor shortage of skilled labor and other manpower.

Mr. Hurley stated that his company feels that they will be a big factor in development in gold mines. Already large mining concerns are making preparations for greater activities.

Develop War Metals

The God's Lake Gold Mines Company, he said, through its president, Mr. R. Jowsey, Toronto, has been active in the search for and development of strategic war metals. One of these is the development of magnesium. The Dominion, reducing considerable tonnage daily at a plant in Haley Station, Ont.

During the past few months diamonds of large crystal formation have been made 100 miles north of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Mr. Hurley said, is making every effort to test out the diamond deposits, and its possibilities of the deposit, said to be the largest in Canada are such that it will be a big factor in the entire chrome needs of the North American continent. Hitherto the United States and Canada got great quantities of its chrome supply from Turkey, Rhodesia and Madagascar.

Mr. Hurley has been associated with the God's Lake Gold Mines Ltd. since its inception in 1927, and for the past six years has been assistant manager.

Airplane Used In Search For Missing Hunter

Again futile efforts to locate 81-year-old Charles Wannamaker, Stockdale hunter, who has been lost in the Tweed district of Bancroft for fifty days, ended today (Friday) after three hours when the Trenton R.C.A.F. station flew the Bancroft area for over three consecutive time yesterday afternoon in a fruitless search for the missing man. No hope of finding the aged hunter alive is entertained being held by Provincial Police authorities.

Accompanied by Provincial Constable Stanley Palmafler, of Bancroft, the airplane from the Trenton Air Station scoured the entire district near Tweed and Centreville for over three hours Thursday without finding traces of the missing hunter, who has been missing from his hunting camp since Wednesday, October 7.

Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., constable Palmafler, Dr. S. McGill, officer commanding the Trenton Air Station, requesting the use of a plane for the search. Commodore McGill readily agreed to provide whatever assistance was possible.

B.C.I. Student Actors Excel In Presentation of "Our Town"

The annual play of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, Vocational and High School has always been a dramatic presentation of high standards, but the play, "Our Town", witnessed Thursday evening, the 1942 production of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" exceeded any previous effort. This is a three-act modern drama, which brought an entirely new technique to the Belleville stage, with an enterprising choice for the young actors. Through the ability of real actors, but these in minor roles, the excellent direction of Miss Jean Mackintosh and Mrs. J. B. Reed, the producer, the perfect synchronization of lighting and sound effects, the play became a convincing and pulsing production of the playwright's conception of any small town.

Easy Mastery In Key Role

The play depended for its effectiveness on the actor playing the character of the "Stage Manager." He commanded the narrative, and linked together the scenes. His manner gave the tempo of the play. In this role, the director had made an admirable choice in Wm. Marsh, junior member of the Merchant Marine. Without which the play would have been 100 miles north of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Mr. Hurley said, is making every effort to test out the development, and its possibilities of the deposit, said to be the largest in Canada are such that it will be a big factor in the entire chrome needs of the North American continent. Hitherto the United States and Canada got great quantities of its chrome supply from Turkey, Rhodesia and Madagascar.

Without their fine support, the play would not have achieved the success it did.

The costumes were perfect for the period and added greatly to the interest of the play. The unit set, designed by Miss Mackintosh and the stage manager making the play effective. The large appreciative audience if they had any questions they would like to ask about "Our Town", and responding to the many queries and the actions of the brilliant players through the auditorium very well carried out.

Others in the cast were:

The Choir—Joan Whalen, Beth Robertson, Yvonne Kester, Barbara Dawson.

The Dead—Jim Watson, Bob Dickens, Lorna Ogilvie, Caroline Mooney, Phyllis Tweedale, Neil Price, Elinor Keynes.

In this play the mechanics play an important role and those behind the scenes in this play when they were responsible for the smoothness of the ensemble were:

Sound Effects—Bruce Bishop, Don Leslie, Hugh Simpson, Bill Dawson.

Prompter—Pat Thurston.

Stage Staff Adviser; Mr. Robinson; Stage Manager: Kaye Martin.

Assistants—Philip Flagler, Jack Carefoot, Gordon Long.

The three new appointees and Senator Thomas Vien will take their seats after being sworn by L.G. Moyer, Clerk of the Upper House, in the Senate. This ceremony will take place next January when Parliament meets again.

Mr. Vien, formerly Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, was named to the Senate last month when Mr. King reshuffled his administration.

Whitefish Catch Reported Light

Point Traverse, Nov. 20 — Fall shore fishing for whitefish has commenced on the shore of Lake Ontario. Although catches are only fair, Mr. Haken from about 14 days of the month, commercial fishermen made over the week-end, according to their work for twenty-two days.

Rare Owls

Two rare white Arctic owls have made their appearance in this vicinity, and are disporting about in fine style. A scarcity of feed in the far north, is said to be the reason for their seeking their way so far south.

Operations Ceased

Commercial fishing operations at the Main Duck Island, 12 miles off here, have terminated for the season, according to word reaching here. Catches of all kinds of fish taken from local waters were very light during the season, according to fishermen, who operated from the island colony this year.

Minister

The appearance in this vicinity of a number of snow birds, is considered more commonly known as snow birds, is considered by fishermen as an indication of an early winter in this area.

Strawberries Bloom

Despite two days of winter weather which hit this area last week several specimens of wild strawberries in bloom, were found here yesterday. Dandelions are also in bloom.

News Brief

Lance Corporal Howard Bongard is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bongard.

Messrs. Cecil Bongard and Willis Metcalfe have returned from a hunting trip near Griffith, Ont.

Several members of the R.A.F. Marine Craft Section have been granted leave from quarters.

Winter's first cold snap over the week-end, formed ice over the local harbour.

MECHANIZED

As the Allied pincers closed on the last 600 miles of North African coast in Axis hands, Italy began to see her fate. Italy's foreign minister said North Africa was the springboard from which the Allies "certain would pounce upon Europe, and declared: "Italy's hour has struck."

The Allied drive into Tunisia was said to have been speeded when Axis had way from the Algerian border to Bizerte, and the first clashes of the developing fight cost Germany 17 armored vehicles, 11 of them tanks.

"The Anglo-American vanguard of Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Anderson's eastward army is pretty far into Tunisia," a spokesman said at Allied headquarters in North Africa.

Field dispatches indicated that the Allies, fighting off challenging frontier toward Bizerte, were continuing to push on coastal roads and inland by air from the Algerian frontier toward Bizerte.

Vichy radio said a battle was the Nazis are expected to attempt a stand.

"The Morocco radio said Allied troops had driven eight of 30 German tanks engaged in North Tunisia Tuesday; that three had broken down and that the other encountered which led to a German rout; and that the last plane of the Vichy French air force had been flown across Africa.

Unofficial accounts supplied by Axis Power politics blended with action-at-arms in the vast struggle for control of the Mediterranean.

Fresh Evidence Seen

Marshall Petain again called on all Frenchmen in North Africa to help the Germans "repulse aggression" and—although the repetition of the theme tended to lose its effectiveness—his appeals in the past—fighting French sources in London said this was fresh evidence of Dictator Pierre Laval's efforts to ally the French people with Berlin.

Informed European diplomatic sources said Gen. Francisco Franco of Spain had consulted both the Axis and the United Nations that Spain—poised between Gibraltar and German-occupied France—would accept aid immediately from the other side if either seized any of her sea and air bases. Backed by the German army, the regime of Generalissimo Franco was reported sitting tight on a policy of watchful waiting.

Berlin radio, for some propaganda purpose of its own, said the tweeter of German military quarters in commenting on the North African situation was to be regarded by some observers as an indication that a surprise was in the air. The nature wasn't hinted.

Hungarians Move to Greece

Reuters News Agency reported from Ankara, however, that 10 Hungarian divisions had left home barracks for Greece and 13 German divisions were moving from the Russian front toward the Balkans in general strengthening of the Axis positions on that southeastern flank.

Although Field Marshal Erwin Rommel is hurried by Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's British 8th Army in his retreat toward the El Agheila Corridor, the Berlin radio asserted that his movements "become ever more exemplary in their disciplined cooperation."

It was announced in Cairo that the R. A. F. had acted more than 130 Axis landing grounds in Cirenaika (Eastern Libya) and more than 350 enemy aircraft destroyed damaged or captured intact on the ground.

French Garrisons Get Jump

Overnight reports were lacking on the progress of the Allied force pitilessly reported striking northward toward the Mediterranean from the Fighting French bases at Lake Chad, French equatorial Africa.

Other dispatches and the unofficial broadcasts of the Moroccan radio built up the picture of Allied progress in Tunisia.

Bone, Algerian port, moved east by train as part of Gen. Henri Honore Giraud's command to join the Allies in the fight for Tunisia.

French troops of Gen. Jean Estebet's Tunisian Infiltration Force of German and Italian forces flamed to a successful offensive at dawn yesterday as Gen. Barre, commander of the predecessor, got the jump on Colonel Gen. Walter Nehring, who had ordered him to withdraw from Tunisia or join the Axis.

Capture Town Hall

Despite resistance, however, the Germans were reported to have captured the town hall and barracks of Gabes, landing several light tanks and 300 infantry-supported at that strategic port 200 miles south of Tunis and 200-miles west of Tripoli. Gabes is near the top of the Mareth fortifications, a little maginot line west of the Libya-Tunisia frontier.

The Germans also moved a few heavy tanks ashore at Bizerte, it was said, but the 10-tonners previously brought in by the first of the invasion parties.

The R.A.F. bombed German holdings at both Tunis and Bizerte again with strikes overnight Tuesday by Algerian and Maltese air fields and were reported to have added about at least five Axis bombers seeking to snap Allied communications lines yesterday. Two British planes were lost in the sky battles.

45,000 GERMANS

Ammunition Dump Blown

In continuation of a reconnaissance operation to the south, the communique said "one ammunition dump was blown up and 18 anti-tank batteries and 12 mortars silenced. After completing its main task, our unit fell back to its previous position."

The communique said that in the Stalingrad area last night in one sector German infantry and tanks broke through to the rear of two Russian units but a fierce counter-thrust restored the line, killing 170 Germans and destroying five tanks.

The rest of the overnight picture was one of stabilized lines and relatively little activity except near Tuapse along the Black Sea coast where the Germans were reported driven back in efforts to re-take positions recently won by the Russians.

The Germans for weeks had been eyeing Ordzhonikidze which is at the junction of the Tuapse and Baku military highway winding south through the Caucasus mountains to the Black Sea. If they could have seized it they could have struck southward toward the Transcaucasian oil eastward toward Grozny's oil.

Front-line German army sought to smash through southeast from Malkhir or Ordzhonikidze and tried to drive from Mondok southward to the city.

Piling up large forces of men and machines southeast of Nalchik in the Caucasus foothills, the German offensive that nedged deeply into Red lines and reached the actual approaches to Ordzhonikidze.

Prepare for Winter

At this point the Red Army turned on the invaders and balled them with heavy losses in men and tanks. German persisted in their pressure on the military highway sector.

While the Russians were tearing into the advanced lines of the offensive counter-thrusts, Soviet commanders prepared another blow in a new sector.

The army newspaper Red Star said that when this battle was over the German group was cut off and forced into a fight for its existence. The German conversion of its fortifications into strong points of resistance was being accelerated and driven up on the slopes of lofty mountains where Soviet artillery and trench mortars had held them for five days.

Pressed against the mountains, the Nazis lost heavily and then the ..... rushed one of the strong points from the north and another from the northeast and the Axis began to withdraw toward the gorge, chik, abandoning many machines as they fled, Red Star dispatches reasounded.

Easily Buried Back

Occasionally the retreating Germans and Rumanians tried to make a stand but were buried back by persistent Russian pressure and the pace of the retreat was accelerated after the main battle was over with many of the disorganized fascists fleeing into the mountains and forests of the Caucasus.

That sizable forces were involved was shown by the midnight communique in saying:

"Our troops routed the German 16th tank division, the Brandine Burgee Regiment, the 45th Bicycle Battalion, the 19th Sapper Battalion, the 525th Anti-Tank Regiment, one battalion of the German 1st Alpine Regiment and the 3rd Rumanian Cavalry Division."

The booty count included 140 tanks, seven armored cars, 70 guns, 85 mortars, 84 machine-guns, 2,350 trucks, 183 motorcycles, 1,000 rifles and cartridges, two ammunition dumps, supply dumps and other loot.

Scheme Did Not Work

Concerning the Ordzhonikidze victory, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said the invaders employed a special shock group of forces under a special command and his objective was to break through the Soviet defences, create panic, demoralize the ranks of the defenders of the Caucasus, causing a complete breakdown.

The German air force fiercely bombed Russian positions during the German advance and on three 3 things were most serious, but then the Russians counter-attacked and threw them, Pravda said.

More than 300 shells poured in on the shock-troop concentration, battering and slashing them until they broke and fled in disorder, abandoning munitions and machines, it added.

A front-line dispatch on the Ordzhonikidze victory reported that German cartridge cases "are of iron, mostly German-made in 1941. It is reported that German munition makers are lacking in copper." Unexploded mines are also of 1941 type the Russians also were said to be of poor quality.

Today's mid-day communique estimated that Germans had been killed in the last 24 hours in the Stalingrad area, with nothing to show for it except the occupation of three destroyed houses in one sector.

Latest dispatches indicated the initiative remained largely in Russian hands in the Tuapse area.

"Z" Project

London, Nov. 20. (CP)—On the eve of Parliament, it is known only as the "Z" project.

But it is a great community built in 12 weeks with a complete airplane assembly plant, an airport with two 6,000 foot runways, dormitories for workers and virtually all the utilities required for a modern city.

The whole project was constructed with British labor and materials to provide a new "Detroit" for Britain's war effort—built in the United States and shipped in parts—that could not be seen from above across the Atlantic.

"Z" Project was one of the myriad things born out of the reciprocal Atlantic conference between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt last year.

Mr. Churchill put down Britain's essential needs. One was for a certain type of aircraft that could be delivered in the numbers required. Only 12 were assembled in Britain. He promised the necessary labor and materials.

A Brief Paragraphs

Last March the plan was outlined to him in brief paragraphs and handed over to the Director of Works, Ministry of Labor factories at the British Ministry of Aircraft Production.

Expanded, the four brief paragraphs called for a site with two 6,000 runways for everything from fighters to the largest bombers. Dormitories to accommodations for ground and flying personnel and a complete community like central and operations rooms.

In addition, the factory would have assembly sheds, machine shops and repair and overhaul facilities for thousands of highly skilled civilian workers and service personnel in hospital, even a cinema. In fact an entire community the size of Detroit had to be created.

In 11 weeks, American workers were beginning to assemble planes at the "Z" project. The site was finished, steel from Scotland, glass from Lancashire and bricks from Pollwell. The plot upon which the garage is intended to be erected is in restricted territory.

ENEMY CRUISER

Naval Force Surprised

A light cruiser and two destroyers stood in to shore near Gona under cover of darkness, the Allied communique said, and were meeting landing barges when they were attacked and driven off by bombers dodging through rain squalls and under clouds that the enemy evidently was counting on for concealment.

Using flares to guide them, the bombers drove in low, quickly setting a fire that left the bank of the cruiser and planting another bulls-eye shot which left the stern of the destroyers which spilt in two after a second explosion.

The remaining destroyer was damaged and left on fire and then were bombed and strafed. In the accompanying action the enemy sent eight fighters were shot down.

Ground Forces Close In

The main Australian ground forces closing in for the kill opened the Allied counter-offensive on the south side of the Gona River and the Japanese army had advanced to forthaws only 32 airline miles from Buna, the Allied guard ian port for northern Australia.

While the Australians consolidated and outsmarted the Japanese back along the mountain trails, United States troops made a difficult flanking move from the south through the coastal jungle behind their Allies before Buna last week.

Today's official report did not indicate whether the barge renderezvous which the bombers turned into a disaster was an attempt to withdraw some of the Japanese army troops or to reinforce them.

The nearest other Japanese-held bases are at Lae and Salamaua, 150-odd miles to the northwest of New Guinea, and the sea offers the only feasible line of escape for the trapped Japanese.

An Australian war correspondent in a report from Port Moresby, Melbourne said there was insufficient information on which to base a reliable opinion whether the cruiser and destroyer bombed and damaged off the Papuan coast belong in part to forces reinforcing the Japanese invasion.

That war bulletin told of eight Japanese destroyers damaged off the Buna-Gona area.

During the latest attack, the correspondent said, a number of small boats filled with troops were seen between the warships and the shore but it was difficult to determine whether they were bound toward the ships or land.

"Z" Council to Check Advertising Signs In the Corporation

City council will check all advertising signs in the city, notate their locations and inquire if they have been placed under authority provided for by the city by-laws. This was decided at the regular committee meeting of council held Monday night when City Engineer Charles Mott was requested to report all signs located in the city.

The question of inquiring into the legality of all advertising signs in the city arose out of the recent order of council to have the J. M. Wood sign on Brock Front Street removed, owing to the objection of residents in the district, the list of signs to be reported by the city engineer does not include those of fire names in the business section of the city especially those on Front Street from Dundas to the upper bridge, unless such signs have been built without the proper authority.

A committee of Alderman Clapp, Foster and Poller was appointed to meet representatives of employees of Dundas Canning Co. regarding assistance in obtaining satisfactory accommodation. This report. Several requests have been made to council for extension of the Trenton station with regard to obtaining transportation to and from work.

The offer of Meade Johnston and Co. to purchase part of the lot on the east side of Bleecker Avenue, south of Dundas Street, for the sum of $400 was accepted by the council. The lot was owned by the city. Council also agreed to sell to Mrs. Jamie Malvey a plot of land on the river bank opposite the residence of the late Mayor Hanna. Council specified that the land was to be erected on the plot without the consent of council.

Application of George Greatrix for a building permit to erect a garage costing $300 on Turnbull Street was referred to a committee of Aldermen Armstrong, Clapp and Pollwell. The plot upon which the garage is intended to be erected is in restricted territory.

Conviction Dismissed Against Coffee Thrower

"This young man was very instructed at the time", assured Crown Attorney J. G. Duncan K.C. after Pte. Vernon E. Ramsay of the Volunteer military camp, had appeared in city police court here today charged with assaulting a postal help by throwing a cup of coffee in her face. Magistrate J. T. Wilson, who acquitted the accused Ramsay was given three days, the time he had served since being arrested.

"He is absent without leave from his unit now on account of being held for trial here and he's in enough trouble as it is", commented Mr. Duncan.

"He was drinking my coffee and I asked him to give it to me. He did—right in the face", the complainant stated today.

His Worship warned Ramsay against such practices. "Don't try to be smart, people do not appreciate a smart-aleck", assured Magistrate Lloyd as he allowed Ramsay to go to his unit.

John L. Bygott was convicted of speeding and fined $5 and costs in another case concluded the proceedings.

Trouble for Quisling

Quisling himself has given one of the best signs of the weakness of his rule in Norway. He has ordered that Luther's famous hymn "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," shall not be sung in Norwegian churches because Quisling has suspicions of "dangerous words," for the Norwegians, just as the Netherlanders, have merry sport in making fun of the Huns as well as of Quisling and his party.

The stanza in the hymn which caused the ban on the use of the hymn in the Norwegian church service is as follows:

"And were the world with devils filled,
All watching to devour us,
Our souls to fear we need not yield,
They cannot overpower us;
Their dreaded prince no more
Can harm us as of yore;
His rage we can endure,
For, lo! his doom is sure.
A word shall overthrow him."

Quisling has left that by the words "devils" and "their prince" the Norwegian singers mean the Germans and their Hitler. For the similar reason Quisling has prohibited all newspaper mention of Oslo's current rat-extermination campaign because two years ago one of the city's newspapers seemingly became so enthusiastic in support of the campaign that it came out with a powerful editorial "Out With the Rats!" Of course readers could and did substitute for the word "rats" the word "Germans" and there was no end of the delight and mockery of the Huns by the Norwegians. It was plain that the editorial writer had planned it that way. To make matters even worse the heavy-headed Quisling editors of the Quisling official sheet caught on and wrote an indignant editorial in reply, all adding to the amusement of the Norwegian people.

Indian Summer

Gentle Indian Summer has an elusive quality which sometimes makes it impossible to determine when it has come. Yet there have been the first frost and touch of winter with snow but a part of the country may now be enjoying Indian Summer, that hazy and quiet season set between late autumn and the inevitable winter. Autumn is now two-thirds gone and such mild days with the soft haze and light hovering clouds suspended across the sky may be the season of St. Martin's Summer or Indian Summer as it is known in Canada.

The season is not always definitely outlined. Sometimes it appears to have skipped its turn and in other years it is very late or it may even be hesitation and doubt about which of two mild spells may be Indian Summer.

The rich coloring of the autumn has gone, the fallen leaves of deep colorings have faded under the rains and through the branches of silver grey and the floating clouds the paling sun plays at hide and seek. Birds are silent for the songsters have long since migrated. The fruits and the crops of the field are gathered in. Over all is the sky with its delicate tracery of clouds when the sun shines. There is no sighing in the trees. All seems at rest in nature, waiting as it were for the transition to winter. Yet in many seasons, after the spell of Indian Summer is passed, the autumn lingers on and slowly merges into winter.

For the Greeks

More food and medicines are on the way now from Montreal to Piraeus, the port of Athens, under an agreement. The gifts for the Greek people include wheat from the Canadian Government and 36 tons of powdered milk and cases of drugs and medicines sent from the Greek War Relief Fund raised in Canada.

Shipments, the British Government is satisfied, are not being diverted by the Germans and Italians. Distributions have taken place under the eyes of a delegate of the International Red Cross.

It is good news that the food and medicines are going to the suffering people of this noble Ally of the democratic nations.

I will have a care of being a slave to myself, for it is a perpetual, a shameful and the heaviest of all servitudes; and this may be done by uncontrolled desires.

WILL HISTORY REPEAT

Today's news despatches to the effect that Hitler's generals are purposely irking the Moustached Menace so they will be dismissed and thus not be included in the war-guilt lineup after an Allied victory seems to substantiate Walter Monfried writing in the Milwaukee Journal that "when the time comes for abdication, it will not be Adolf Hitler who makes the decision."

Monfried quotes Hitler who shouted "I will not leave my country and go abroad if things go wrong as the Kaiser did in 1918," in a recent Munich speech.

That's all very well, but Schicklegruber should remember that the Kaiser refused up to the last minute to abdicate and he was kidnapped, in the end, and given command of a woodpile in Doorn, Holland.

But perhaps Adolf knows what will happen to him if he does leave his country. For there is scarcely a country in the world today which does not harbor people who would willingly transform the former paperhanger into not-so-choice hamburg, or minute steaks, merely for the pleasure of doing it. He shouldn't be thrown to the dogs, for after all, a dog is a decent animal and should not be killed in such a manner.

Let's see, where could he go?

He could go to Poland, where the relatives of tortured, murdered Poles would afford a fine reception for him. He could fraternize with the ghosts of murdered babies; of Polish patriots whose end came with gaunt emaciated bodies swinging from roadside telephone poles.

He could go to Czecho-Slovakia, where the ghost town of Lidice would 'welcome' him.

He could go to Norway, where he could be the central figure in a Quisling reception.

He could go to occupied France, where he could impress "chaingang" loyal Frenchmen of the benefits of enforced slavery in German factories.

He could go to Moscow, or other parts of Russia, where vengeful Russians would tender him a "cordial welcome."

He could get through the ranks of German guards and their finger-pointed scorn.

He could go anywhere and be ruler of the only thing he could not conquer, his own mental ambitious maniacal lust for power.

Adolf speaks the truth for once. He will not leave his country. And Adolf Hitler knows the real reason why.

A YANK OR A JERK

Some months ago American ladies of the more buxom type, says Walter Davenport of Colliers, who had trouble with their girdles and wanted to co-operate with the government in its daily solutions of the rubber shortage, wrote to the OPA and received an official document which is now history.

The answer to the request to how to remove the article was: "It can be removed by a good strong yank."

But only a few of these letters got abroad. A bright official feared the indirection was open to ribaldry. So they changed it to: "It can be removed by a good strong jerk."

Well, if we know our American slang — — —

MATHEMATICS

Recently a Canadian editor was in a gunplant where extremely fine tooling operations were being carried on.

"What are your tolerances on this jog?" he asked a man at a lathe.

"One five-thousandth of an inch," replied the workman.

The figure conveyed little to the editor. He asked, "How fine is that?"

The workman, too, seemed puzzled. He called to his neighbor on the next machine: "Bill, how many five-thousandths are there in an inch?"

Bill scratched his head. "Gee, I don't know. But there must be millions of them."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

NOVEMBER 20, 1922

Mr. Stephen Licence has returned home after spending several days in New York on business.

The Sons of Scotland will attend service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Ed. Baldree has returned home from Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Donovan of Peterboro, are visiting the former's parents in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Gordon, Chatham Street, have left Belleville to reside in London, Ont.

The familiar figure of "Santa" the thirty-three-year old mare which Dr. Baker has driven about the streets of Belleville and which was formerly the property of the Rev. Mr. Pope, will be seen no more, as she died this morning. For twenty-five years the horse travelled the streets of this city, and was well known to citizens.

30 YEARS AGO

NOVEMBER 20th., 1912

Holloway Street Methodist Church, of which Rev. A. R. Sanderson is pastor was re-opened on Sunday after being closed for some months while extensive alterations and improvements were made. Bridge Street Church cancelled the morning service in order that the congregation might join with the congregation of Holloway Street Church in the happy event and the pastor of Bridge Street Church, the Rev. H. S. Osborne, assisted in the service. The special preacher for the occasion were the Rev. Dr. Williamson of Niagara Falls, and the Rev. R. Greatrix of Oshawa, a former pastor.

An old fashioned tea was held at John Street Presbyterian Church last evening and was a most enjoyable affair.

Mr. David Harrison and wife of Bowmanville, are visiting relatives here. Mr. Harrison is a former resident of Belleville.

40 YEARS AGO

NOV. 20TH, 1902

His Honor Judge Dean of Lindsay is in the city to participate in a reunion of the members of a Sunday School class which was organized by him thirty-three years ago. The reunion will take place this evening. In Bridge Street Methodist Church. It is expected that a number of the old members will be present.

The many friends of the Rev. Father O'Brien will regret to learn that he will leave Belleville shortly.

The Rev. Dr. Crothers, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, will preach in Kingston on Sunday.

50 YEARS AGO

NOV. 20TH, 1892.

The generosity of the genial member for West Hastings Mr. H. Corby, is known to the whole community. His steam yacht Oneida has been in constant use during the summer entertaining his friends. Among the many pleasant parties of the past season on the Oneida was a trip to Oshawa to witness the regatta at that port. The trip lasted for two days, and so hospitably were the guests entertained and so thoroughly was the trip enjoyed that the gentlemen who composed the party resolved to mark their appreciation of it by presenting Mr. Corby a souvenir of it. Accordingly they assembled in the office of Mr. Corby and presented him with a very handsome binnacle, suitably inscribed, for the Oneida. There was no formal address, but Mr. W. L. Hamilton on behalf of the subscribers made the presentation in a neat speech. The following are the names of the subscribers: Messrs. John Taylor, W. A. Hungerford, Geo. F. Hope, R. A. Gibson, W. L. Hamilton, M. M. Thompson, Joseph D. Clarke, W. H. Biggar, W. W. Pope, John C. Clark, L. A. Appleby, John H. Lasier, James Jenkins, George P. Thompson, M. M. Waters and James H. Starling.

FACTORY WOMEN

Well, I never thought to see it:
women pouring through the gate
And hurrying down the hallway lest the clock shall mark them late,
The women of the country at the factory carrying on
In the places of their men folk who to freedom's war have gone.

That's a prettier box they carry than the ugly thing of tin
Which the men of years have toted, and a daintier lunch within.

But they tell me once they've practiced and have learned the method through
They are keeping up production as the men-folk used to do.

I watch them in the morning and I watch them homeward bound,
And I think as they go by me, here is pluck which won't be downed!
Here is pure determination! Here the spirit that we crave
In the places of their men folk who have bitterer work to do.

More on the Same Theme

New York, Nov. 20. — It is without the slightest desire to embarrass the State Department or to criticize, but to detract one iota from the brilliant exploit of the United States military in North Africa that this column continues to discuss the basic political principles involved in our occupation of that territory.

For the issue is absolutely fundamental. What political action do we take when we reconquer the territory? On what principles do we act? Do we have the decision to the military, as a matter of military expediency? Does the President improvise a political modus vivendi? Or is the whole State Department decide on the matter, more or less arbitrarily, on the spot?

All these things happened in North Africa. And what happened in North Africa can become a model for procedure in whatever territory we reconquer in the course of this war. What happens in North Africa is weighted with the most intense interest, by all the political leaders of the French underground movements. It is also watched by our Allies.

Obviously, we need not only a United States policy, but a United Nations policy.

A Department of France

Let us leave for the moment, personalities out of account. Algeria is not a part of the United States. It is a Department of France, as much a part of France as the State of Maine is a part of the United States. It was, until the fall of France, governed by the French Constitution. It had Deputies and Senators, elected in the usual manner, to represent it in the government of that department.

We have not liberated it. That is to say, we have liberated an integral part of France itself, and the question what we do there will be considered a pattern for what we do in Vichy France is not the question is: Are we going to rule it? Or are we going to restore the Constitution of France?

Everything is made clearer by taking a homely analogy. Suppose that the whole of Maine, and Maine alone, were occupied by Nazis and Japanese. Suppose that Maine had found local Quislings and Lavals, who had abolished the Constitution and taken over the administration, and were ruling—as Laval now is in France but with more decrees, resting on Nazi-Japanese bayonets. Now suppose that the United States can expeditionary force had landed in Maine, taken over the government and established themselves. What would they do politically? What call would they send out to the people of the United States? Would they arbitrarily pick an administrator, or would they then and there call upon the United States Constitution, govern under it, and summon from the people of the nation that legitimate United States government which the people, had been re-established on one bit of United States soil?

The analogy is exact. Mr. Lippmann, pleading for the application of principles in this war, has considered a distinct service to clarity. Facts Press for decision.

Three facts oblige us to consider an immediate solution. First, Admiral Darlan derived his power from hitler, which he has used to fill Wednesday, governing under—fiction of constitutionality. On Wednesday de Gaulle denounced and positively suspended the last vestiges of constitutional law handing over to Laval the power to set up a complete Fascist regime by personal and arbitrary decrees. Therefore, Admiral Darlan, is now shorn of every fiction of legitimacy. He represents nobody, i.e., himself.

Laval is a Fascist leader ruling in German bayonets, and Darlan is a dubious leader, resting on United States bayonets. No principles except expediency are involved in either case.

If Darlan's authority, secondly, is only established by the backing of the United States, it is, first, no French Government, and second he has fully lost its authority for the declaration of Roosevelt, forecasting Darlan's doom.

Third, we learned on Thursday that fighting French troops are moving northward from French Equatorial Africa. If, as we presume, they arrive in due time in North Africa, what Government will they bring with them? They will bring with them the Constitution of France, under which General de Gaulle has faithfully conducted his movement. But who is to be the constitution to announce to France that the Constitution has been restored in one spot of French territory? Again, merely Presidential?

Why Not Herriot, Too?

If it was possible to get General Giraud out of metropolitan France one wonders why it was not possible to spirit a man like Herriot out to be there to declare the dawn of liberation.

No policy can be made by rule of thumb, by improvisations, however brilliant. Tomorrow there will be a problem of what to do with Libya.

And, incidentally, what is the Congress of the United States doing? The British Parliament, recognizing that a basic principle is involved, is debating it. But the United States Congress can't find anything time to do than filibuster on the poll tax.

The greatest political tasks of our generation lie ahead of us. Let us think about them.

ANIMALS ON ARK

How many of each species did Noah take into the ark?

Most people will answer this question correctly at once by saying, "Two: a male and a female of each species."

According to Genesis 7:2-3, God said to Noah: "Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens, the male and his female: and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female. Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth."

In other words, one pair of every species of unclean animals and seven pairs of every species of clean beasts were to be taken into the ark. The clean animals were to be taken for sacrificing the ark.

This is the first mention in the Bible of clean and unclean animals and the passage as translated into English seems to be at variance with the context: for in Genesis 6:19-20 God had commanded Noah: "And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female. Of fowls after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind, two of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive."

Genesis 7: 8-9 says: "Of clean beasts and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth, there went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and the female as God had commanded Noah." Again, in Genesis 7:15 we read: "And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life." And then in verse 16 we read: "And they that went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him; and the Lord shut him in."

In Genesis 8:20 we are told that one of the first things Noah did after the flood was to build an altar to the Lord and offer on it burnt offerings of every clean beast and every clean fowl. If Noah had only one pair of each kind of animal and bird he certainly would not have had any of them for sacrificial purposes. Therefore he must have taken more than two of each species into the ark or they himself would have starved during the voyage.

Now this refers to a period long before the promulgation of the Mosaic law dealing with sacrifices and defining clean and unclean animals, some authorities suppose that the references to clean and unclean creatures were inserted in the ancient story by some editor of the original account was written.

Considered in ancient history, however, tell us that the distinction between clean and unclean animals and the sacrificial purposes antedates the Mosaic law, and was observed by the Egyptians, and other parts of the world centuries before Moses lived. The apparent conflict between the quoted passages in Genesis may be explained by the fact that few species of animals and fowls were used for sacrifice and that only date and the author of the ancient narrative did not consider it necessary to mention clean and unclean beasts and fowls in every instance, in which reference to the subject is made.

PERSONALS

The condition of Mrs. Lyle Weese (nee Verna Dermott), Carrying Place, who is a patient at Belleville General Hospital, following a serious operation is favorable.

Mrs. Vera Lyons and son, Everett, Foxboro, spent the weekend in Toronto, the guest of the former's sister, Mrs. S. Benn.

An interesting photograph appeared recently in the Rochester Times-Union headed "Same Name—Same Aim" showing John D. Hayes, (son of Mr. Patrick Hayes of this city), Myron Hayes and Henry W. Hayes. The caption read "The Columbus Youth Association believes in making "Hayes" while the campaign sun shines. That may explain the presence of the Hayes triumvirate on the special committee of Catholics, Jews and Protestants soliciting membership for deserving boys and girls, the three mentioned men, representing the three faiths on the committee".

PRESENTATION

A delightful kitchen shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Bedell, Sidney Township on Wednesday evening, November 18, in honor of their daughter's coming marriage to Mr. Charles Wood.

During the evening an address was read by Mrs. Norman Meldrum and was signed on behalf of the community and friends of the young couple, wishing them much happiness in their future home.

Following this Bruce Bedell and Carl Brickman carried in a basket laden with gifts, which was refilled twice. They were presented to the prospective bride and groom.

Evelyn and Charlie thanked them very graciously for their gifts, and the evening closed with a delightful lunch and the singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows", and "The More We Get Together".

Previous to this the members of Deacon's "Dee Bee" Club presented Evelyn with a lovely table lamp.

The members of the "Sunshine Circle" of Holloway Street Church also presented her with a lovely silver casserole.

Home Lessons in Designing Clothes

Starting With Own Dresses

Do friends admire your taste in clothes? Dress designing may be your hidden talent!

Why not see if you can't design something for yourself? Our home instruction book shows how professional designers go about it.

You may start your design with just an idea and a straight piece of muslin. This muslin you pin to half a dress form and cut out at neck and arms to form a foundation pattern.

Then comes the creative part! On the foundation you suggest becoming lines with pins and colored thread, moving them around until you're satisfied.

To add height you might indicate diagonal pockets or plan on vertical lines or stripes.

And, if you can design clothes for yourself, you can do it for others if you like! Designers are paid well!

Our 24-page instruction book tells how to make an original design, take measurements, cut foundation and working patterns. Tells how to market your ability.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Why Some Individuals Suffer With Meniere's Disease

Just why some individuals suffer from hay fever due to irritation of the lining of the nose with ragweed pollen and others, breathing in these same spiked pollen, do not, is explained by the fact that hay fever sufferers are sensitive or allergic to ragweed pollen. There is something about their blood or tissues that "invites" the ragweed pollen to enter the body and cause symptoms.

There appears to be more cases of Meniere's disease now than in previous years or else the symptoms are more clearly recognized. The symptoms are partial loss of hearing, dizziness, head noises, or ringing in ears, nausea and vomiting.

It is thought that the symptoms are due to pressure in the ear tissues, the pressure being due to swollen tissues, and salt causing the tissues to hold more water. Accordingly cutting down on table salt—sodium chloride—eating foods containing only small amounts of sodium and using daily doses of ammonium chloride to drive salt out of tissues is now the recognized treatment.

Why does not everybody suffer with Meniere's disease who uses a large amount of salt in and on his food or who eats foods containing a large amount of sodium?

The explanation is given by Drs. A. C. Furstenberg, and George Richardson, Ann Arbour, and F. D. Lathrop, Boston, in Archives of Otolaryngology. These physicians state that observations of more than 150 patients has suggested that the tissues of these patients invite or can hold more sodium within them than can the tissues of others. Thus as sodium holds water in tissues, these tissues will swell and cause pressure on portions of the ear that affect balance, which in turn affects the nerve supplying stomach, accounting for nausea and vomiting.

Of the 150 patients treated, the record of 35 was followed closely. The average length of treatment of this 35 was 32 months. Each patient had all the above symptoms with sometimes a more or less constant movement of the eyes sideways (mystagmus). The patients were given a diet low in salt and also large doses of ammonium chloride daily.

As to results. Twenty patients (57 per cent) have been free of the dizziness, nausea and vomiting from five months to four years; one patient lose the head noises, and three noticed improvement in hearing.

It should be remembered that salt is absolutely necessary to the health of the body tissues but just as with ragweed pollen, some individuals are sensitive to "too much" salt.

HEALTH CHATS

President, Chicago Board of Health.

Early Diagnosis, and Where it is Located Factors in Cancer Cure

One of the most baffling disease problems facing civilized man is that of cancer, and statistics seem to show that more persons have the disease at the present time than at any other period. Perhaps this is due to more persons living past middle age than ever before.

We are making some progress with emphasis on early diagnosis. Yet, the problem today of treatment of cancer is to give relief from pain and to increase comfort.

Whether or not certain types of cancer can be cured, of course, will depend upon how early a diagnosis is made and upon where the cancer is located.

In regard to cancer of the breast if the glands in the armpit have not been involved by the cancer, with proper treatment the chances for cure are very good.

Following the removal of the cancer by surgery, treatment with X-ray treatment should be given to keep the growth from spreading.

Sometimes the cancer spreads to bones and X-ray treatments also may be helpful in bringing relief from pain in these cases.

Cancers affecting the mouth usually cannot be treated satisfactorily by surgery because the surgery does not cure the patient, and produces a great deal of damage to the tissues.

The best method of treatment for cancer of the mouth, according to Dr. William H. Graham Jessop of England, is the use of X-ray. If the X-ray is skilfully used, the cancer can be cured. If not sufficient X-ray treatment is given, the growth will recur. On the other hand, if too much X-ray is used, sores and ulcers will form. Thus, the treatment must be skilfully carried out in order to gain the best results without doing any damage.

Following the treatment, the mouth often is sore and there is difficulty in swallowing. Therefore, the diet must be planned so that it supplies food in a concentrated form that is easily digested and used by the body. Various mouth washes may be used to relieve the pain and also aid in keeping the mouth clean.

If the cancer has already invaded the bones in the face and jaw, treatment with X-ray or radium is not advisable, because the treatment will cause death of the bone tissue and the condition will become worse instead of better.

Cancers in the mouth quickly spread to the lymph glands. Hence, the chances for a cure of mouth cancer are lessened unless the diagnosis is made early, and treatment started at once. Much hope can be offered to the patients suffering from cancer if they will only go to their doctor early and follow his advice.

Some Safe Ways To Reduce Weight

By HELEN FOLLETT

WALKING IS a delightful form of exercise, but it won't do much to reduce the heavyweight until she fares far at a brisk step. The thought of that sickens her soul because she has so much adipose baggage to carry.

A highly energized woman will burn up about 500 calories in a walk of six or seven miles. She may consume between 2,000 and 3,000 calories a day. It's easier to cut down on the good chow. It is no hardship after the first few weeks. The appetite adjusts itself to changes in the diet.

The demon coffee drinker who adds plenty of cream and sugar will lose weight if she will take coffee clear. After a time she will prefer it that way. A small deprivation, considering that it will lessen her bumps, help her to get into frocks one size smaller.

No doubt she loves butter, starches of all kinds, potatoes; most plumpies do. She can have half a pat of butter at each meal, and no more. Fried foods are out. So are sweet desserts. An egg for breakfast and a serving of lean meat once a day is enough to supply protein.

Foods For Reducing

There are all sorts of good things for the reducer to eat—green salads, string beans, onions, celery, tomatoes, cabbage, spinach. She can have all kinds of fruits, but must not add sugar. The citrus fruits are highly recommended. Buttermilk is good for what ails her, so is cottage cheese.

Once a week she should have broiled chicken, once a week a sea food.

There must be no falling off the diet wagon. Dieting, without any special exercises, will lop off six pounds a month, and that's going fast enough along the road to slenderness. All that is necessary is determination to stick!

Obesity interferes with normal activities. As for appearance—why mention that? The mirror rebukes the lady who has expanded beyond reason.

Baked Fish Fillets That Appear Fried, Simple, Tasty Dish

Many families prefer their fish fried to any other method of cooking, but sometimes complain of its indigestibility. Remember that fish itself, is an easily digested food but if improperly fried may be less digestible.

Instead of frying or sauteing, demonstrators of the Department of Fisheries suggest using the Spencer method for cooking dressed fillets.

A cup of milk is required for two or three pounds of fillets, a tablespoon of salt and finely sifted bread crumbs.

Cut the fillets into portions, three to a pound. Soak in salted milk three minutes, then cover with sifted crumbs, using one hand for the Bake in a hot oven, 450 to 500 F. This will not take over 10 minutes for a piece of fish one inch thick. Grated cheese may be sprinkled over the top just before removing from the oven.

Secret of the golden brown appearance of this dish lies in the preparation of the crumbs which can be made up any time before hand. Place dry bread, crusts and all, in the oven when it is moderately hot after a baking operation, and leave till crisp and golden. Put through meat chopper and store in a glass jar with cover of cotton. Crumbs will keep indefinitely when prepared in this way.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dress For Formal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My cousin is to be married soon at a formal church wedding.

1.—Would it be proper for me to wear a black suit which has a white trim and black accessories?

2.—Is it all right for me to deliver the wedding gift in person to my cousin's home? If this is correct when should I deliver the gift?

R. L. A.

1.—Yes, a woman guest at a day-time wedding may correctly wear a black suit with accessories that contrast. But I suggest you wear white rather than black gloves.

However, as the bride's cousin, it might be more interesting and appropriate for you to wear, if possible, an afternoon dress of a less sombre shade than black.

2. Yes, it is quite proper for you to deliver your wedding gift in person to your cousin . . . about two weeks before the wedding date.

Too Shy For Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My daughter has just become engaged. My husband and I are devoted to our future son and thoroughly approve of the engagement. However, my daughter has always been terribly shy, and now, although she is extremely happy, apparently she is too shy even to tell her relatives and friends of her engagement. Would you please give me your good advice as to how we could make it easy for her to tell of her engagement?

Mother

Suggest to your daughter that she write notes to her relatives and friends to tell them of her engagement. As a matter of fact, this is what the engaged girl usually does before her engagement is publicly announced, and so she will not need to feel that she is doing something out of the ordinary. Then, when her relatives and friends begin to tell her their good wishes for her happiness I am sure her shyness will gradually disappear.

Informal Christmas Cards Are Friendly

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it good form to send printed Christmas cards? I have always had mine engraved, but I am wondering if this year it would be correct to have them printed.

Mary B.

Engraved Christmas cards are, of course, formal, But why not this year make your cards informal greetings to your friends? Buy the ones with the greetings already engraved or printed on them, and then add a few words of greeting and sign your informal name. Almost everyone prefers to receive the informal type of card—they're more friendly and intimate.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Enabling Heart Patients to Live For Many Years

Perhaps you wonder why the physician insists upon six weeks' rest in bed for a patient who has had a heart attack? The explanation is that a heart at rest the individual lying quietly in bed for all this time, can call on its "reserve power" (and every heart has some) to come to the help of its tired muscle by not asking them to do much work. And even after the six weeks' rest in bed has been taken, the patient is advised "to take things easy" for a further period. After this the physician advises him to avoid vigorous exercise, eat small meals, and get extra rest. A heart tired by pumping blood through partly closed blood-vessels needs rest.

By resting more, with very little demand on the heart for work, the heart can make up from its reserve, some of its lost strength. It is like removing a battery from a car—no energy being used— and getting it recharged.

Some idea of the demands made on the heart when it is not given rest, and how much heart strength is saved when it is given rest can be gained from the following:

A heart at complete rest, that is when we are lying down completely relaxed, pumps about 3 to 4 quarts per minute. If we sit up in bed the heart must pump 6 to 8 quarts a minute, if we stand, about 12 to 15, if we walk 15 to 20, and if we take vigorous exercise as high as 30 quarts must be pumped within a minute.

In many cases of heart stroke where the patient has followed his doctor's orders as to rest, eating and exercise, heart specialists tell us that the heart is practically as strong as before the attack. And even when real damage has been done, the structures of the heart tissues rendered permanently weaker, the individual may last for 20 to 40 years, or as long as he would have lived had he not had the heart disease.

The old illustration of the bridge still holds true. A bridge that was built to carry ten tons may be damaged by use, by accidents, by floods so that it can no longer carry ten tons, but it can safely carry five tons.

Similarly with the heart. Heart specialists by careful examination of the effects of exercise and by the use of the fluoroscope (X-rays) and the electrocardiograph are able to prescribe a plan of life—rest, food, exercise,—that will enable the heart patient to live a useful life for years.

Chicago Black Hawks Score Third Straight N.H.L. Victory By Defeating Detroit Wings

Pull Into First-Place Tie With Detroit and Look Like Team to Beat

LEAFS TAKE RANGERS

By The Canadian Press

Three straight victories for Chicago Black Hawks demonstrate that National Hockey League scoring was overlooked a bet when they failed to translate Hawks as dangerous contenders this season.

The wooly city representatives flashed by two straight victories over Toronto Maple Leafs, looked like a Stanley Cup club in the making last night as they conquered Detroit Red Wings 6-2 before 19,035 fans to pull into a first-place tie with their beaten rivals. Leafs are over second spot, one point behind the joint leaders, with a 7-3 conquest over New York Rangers on New York ice.

Doug Bentley was the scoring hero at Chicago with three goals, but an even greater factor might have been the defensive display of goalie Paul Gardiner and veteran defenceman Earl Seibert, the Wings had plenty of chances but they couldn't beat that pair when goals were needed most.

Chicago scored two goals a period for their surprising verdict. Pete Horeck, Bentley and Gardiner with the sixth Chicago goal credited to George Allen. Detroit counters were Sid Abel (total) Bruneteau and Joe Carveth.

Schriner Scores Two

Rangers headed Leafs 1-0 at the end of the first period in the New York engagement before Toronto dynamite started to explode. Two quick goals by Sweeney Schriner featured Leafs second-period attack and before the game ended New York fans slopped encouraging Rangers and were applauding the visitors. Syl Apps and Bucko McDonald were accorded a special ovation as they left the game.

Bob Davidson scored his first goal of the season and Bud Pollo counted on a major penalty shot. Apps and Gaye Stewart singled the other two Leaf goals, Lynn Patrick advanced to the head of the individual pointgetting race by potting two of the Ranger counters. Linemate Phil Watson got the other.

Rangers suffered double trouble. Shortly before game time, manager Lester Patrick announced that rookie centre Jim Bend had been called by the Canadian Armed Forces, leaving him with only Joe Bell of the Portage La Prairie rookie line. Then Goodwin's case now is under review by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

FOOTBALL FEVER GRIPS FANS ON EVE OF SHOWDOWN

Saturday Doubleheader is Expected to Unravel Situation

FINALS IN DOUBT

By The Canadian Press

The climax of one of the straight case of football fever the Ontario Union has seen this season comes to a head on the eve of three league games which may decide the fate of the Eastern and Western classic.

At Varsity Stadium in Toronto a near-capacity crowd was expected for a doubleheader expected to produce two champs and maybe bewildering grid situations that Eastern Canada —and perhaps the Dominion—has not seen in years. Briefly, here's the setup:

Toronto Balmy Beach could move into sudden-death playoffs against the winner of the O. A. F. Brantford-by — a Beach loss and a Hamilton Wildcats victory would create such obstacles which have left the playing of a Dominion championship in doubt.

Negotiations Bog Down

Reliance 2 points: D. Adams 530; A. Croll 577; Brooks 670; T. Holway 591; D. Tobe 540—2777.

5 I.T.S. 2 points: Douglas 581; Jackson 581; Hamilton 577; Bell 618; Samuels 361; Lavallee 310—2907.

Negotiations Bog Down

Behind the scenes at the All-Canada classic apparently bogged down following an R. C. A. F. offer to play the Dominion title game complete in football competition after Dec. 1 and an O. R. F. U. announcement that Eastern schedules cannot be speeded up sufficiently to declare an Eastern finalist before that time. But the O. R. F. U. still believes the finalist in the Eastern title chase will be presently contingent upon a speedy solution of the Union's playoff picture.

O. R. F. U. secretary Harold Bellay said yesterday he hoped arrangements can be made for the Union's champion to meet the R. C. A. F. in a two-game championship series. Bellay said he would not grant Air Force members of the Winnipeg R. C. A. F. contract permission to play in the tern championship in a national final game. Accordingly, this arrangement would involve a mid-week game before Nov. 28 between the first two R. C. A. F. clubs.

Meanwhile, Toronto Indians found themselves suddenly in the spotlight, following their surprise 15-6 victory over the hitherto undefeated R. C. A. F. Hamilton Flyers. The Indians members were confident Indians could repeat the performance Beach-es and leave the playoff issue strictly up to Hamilton and Navy.

Here's what the rival coaches say:

Jack Dyer, Indians: "We beat the Hurricanes, so we can beat the Beach. The people expect it. We can do it. I think we will."

Alex Ponikon, Beaches: "We've still got a good team and we're going to win this game."

Ted Morris, Navy: "We'll spend the night with Niagara Falls Cadets, then wax ruled Portage propcorny and now has started back up the hill. Frank Sargent, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president, announces Gooden has been released by Portage and Calarects rects get him, Bill's next step is an okay from selective service so he can rejoin Rangers. That would be something — junior to the National League in one step, then down to senior amateur, farther down to Junior amateur, back to senior and then to the N. H. L. again. It's a merry-go-round and the N. H. L. is the brass ring Gooden is trying to spear as he goes by.

The Expert Says:

Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson: "It's hard to believe but the Leafs having lost a couple of games, Toronto experts are starting to hound Sylvanus Apps, erstwhile darling of the Toronto fans and-tirned by Jack Adams hockey's greatest all-time centre. Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle says that Lionel (Gerry Dutton (of Montreal Canadians) is making it look as if the Leafs should have sold Apps down the river and kept him! . . . . Seems that 'down the river' crack to begin with but having rapidly buried the resentment, now will alarm the safety of the Toronto sports writer cutting up unfavorable observations upon the hallowed person of Sylvanus . . ."

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP) — While the tide of controversy over possible O. R. F. U. playoff games final ebbed and flowed, another national football play-off was considered and rejected without fanfare. Regina's Navy footballers, who lost 13-6 in the Western final to Winnipeg R. C. A. F. Rombers, challenged Toronto Navy of the Ontario Union for the Canadian Navy Championship. Regina suggested the game be played in Toronto late this month but the Toronto Tars, who retain a chance for the O. R. F. U. play-off, regretfully decided lateness of the season after completion of the regular schedule would prohibit such a game.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.)

New York, Nov. 20—(AP)—Reading the papers: What may be one of the season's most significant news items, from the financial-point of sports in the United States was noted in the Oklahoma City paper the other day. It told of the University of Oklahoma regretfully discussing the conversion of the institution's "war college" and contained a prediction by President Joseph B. Brandt that the change would take place within a few months. . . . Oklahoma is only one of a number of colleges that may go on a total war basis.

While it's hard to tell what effect this would have on college sports programs, Oklahoma plans call for turning the field into a dormitory for 600 men.

Centenary Centennial:

On the same page in the Boston Globe there recently appeared a story that Hugh W. Ellis, Springfield Mass., banker, would miss his 100th consecutive football game in 67 years tomorrow, "because he doesn't think college football teams should be playing when there's a war on," and a letter-to Columnist Jerry Mason from a former colleague stationed somewhere "in the South Pacific" war zone, describing a boxing tournament staged by Japanese soldiers. . . . In the imagined bouts, Patsy Giovanelli, now under the nom de guerre of Pvt. Joe Nolan and Cpl. Joe Stachelek beat Pvt. McKenna. "The troops wet really up and cheering wrote Lt.-Col. Barney Landers.

Service Department:

Wheat City Cliff Holmgren, former St. Paul baseball press agent, got promoted to dropping a line from Ireland to Lou McGenna, the Saints' business manager. he wrote: "I have met only one McKenna since being stationed in Ireland. He was a street cleaner."

EARL McCREADY BEATS MARTINEZ IN STRAIGHT FALLS

Referee Lawson Awards First Fall to Champion Over Pedro

KATAN WINS

Several unbelievable things occurred at the Stone arena last night, but the biggest matter Tuesday's collection of strange and weird happenings is provided by two matches, first and foremost there was some question of the decking into a wrestling rule book (but who ever heard of rassers reading rule books?) as to whether the contestants, but rather Referee Phil Lawson, who supplied one surprise, the second shook a wrestling finger towards Pedro (Boo) Martinez and later disqualified the Senor for violations (but, tut) of the rules. But the biggest surprise of all was when blood was actually shed in the semi-windup. There has been some question as to whether rassers are actually humane and have the red cell particles of the blood' streams. Well, it was proved to be a definite fact last night, when John Katan clipped Ivan (the Great) Martinez across the nose and the claret flowed quite freely. That should be about enough for Doctor-not-for-rassers to alight, but hold up that stranger, Promoter Frank Tumpane stepped in the act by announcing he had persuaded the "Swedish Angel" to return to Belleville next Wednesday.. Surprised?

Patrons Delighted

Wrestling's faithful, however, were on hand at the Stone arena again last night and only the first match of the night McCready wallop Pedro Martinez, that referee Lawson and Promoter McCready accommodated, but he was materially assisted by Referee Phil Lawson, who, as mentioned before, blazed fans. Maybe the "Mad Mexican" was right, at that. He's not a stranger in a strange land because he's been here on a contract. Illegal attack, not mentioned in the heretofore mentioned rule book, was the cause of Referee Phil Lawson's disqualification of the Senor, who stopped the proceedings rather suddenly to administer the first fall to McCready, disqualifying the chagrined Martinez. Returning to the ring, Lawson was hailed by the patrons by reverting to some questionable strategy himself, and one could almost hear Pedro bellow for mercy. The only explanation is received was a heavy slam to the canvas and as he lay on the mat quite disgusted with proceedings in general McCready applied a press and Referee Lawson was over along about ten-thirty.

Katan Wins Second

In the curtain-raiser Jan Golch assumed the advantage of a referee's club of this will be that he can be released to the Leafs by Frankie Boucher, the Dodgers having to pay his salary for a full season. Boucher's term of office was not disclosed, but Rickey said he was signed for one year without any bonus provisions. Last season Durocher's contract was understood to be worth $12,500 plus bonuses.

In discussing training plans and prospects for the 1943 season, the Dodgers' would set up camp at West Palm Beach, Fla., March 1.

As for leading prospects, Rickey said, "well I figure I have just picked up a pretty good ball club in getting Durocher back into the lineup. The war situation will, of course, have a great influence on our efforts to put through deals. In the main, however, we have a mighty good ball players, but Leo and I both are anxious not to do dismay of any players until we can get some that are better. We prefer to hold on to what we have.

Rickey said the club will have only two coaches instead of the three or four the Dodgers have had in recent years.

DUROCHER HIRED TO HEAD DODGERS NEXT SEASON

New York, Nov. 20—(AP)—The Brooklyn baseball fans who find Burlesque in town—the take-off of baseball known as the Flatbush Follies—will be on hand for the return of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Branch Rickey, the new president of the beloved bums, announced yesterday that Leo Ernest Durocher had signed a contract to manage the Dodgers for his fifth baseball season. It is said to mean that things will be different around Ebbets Field next year.

Rickey will be the Coach Charley Dressen will be gone and with him, presumably, many of the turious feuds the club has waged with all its rivals. Coach Leo Durocher, Coach Fred Fitzsimmons probably will be gone. . . .Perhaps the Dodgers will even get a chance to hit their to Durocher's throne. Several of the star players will be gone.

In fact, it might well be wondered who will be left of Rickey's fiery answer to this was to say that Durocher will be backed in the lineup as an active player.

He will be the manager, Rickey said, but he will be signed to a player's contract, not a manager's. One of the advantages of the club of this will be that he can be released to the Leafs by Frankie Boucher, the Dodgers having to pay his salary for a full season. The amount of his salary was not disclosed, but Rickey said he was signed for one year without any bonus provisions. Last season Durocher's contract was understood to be worth $12,500 plus bonuses.

PROVIDENCE WINS

(By The Canadian Press)

Ab Demarco, Providence Reds' centre, continues his scoring attack again last night as the Reds defeated New Haven Blades for the second straight night 6-0.

By winning, the Reds moved to within one point of Hershey Bears, leaders of the eastern division of the American Hockey League.

Demarco, who had three goals and two assists against the Eagles at New Haven Wednesday night, started Providence on its way last night with a goal late in the first period. Before the game was over, Demarco added two assists and brought his two-night total of points to eight.

Providence let loose in the second frame with three goals in three minutes and 23 seconds. The Reds added two points for good measure in the final session.

Goaltender Mike Karakas of the Reds became the third netminder in the circuit to register a shut-out as Providence team to turn in a shutout.

In the only other game, the rampaging Buffalo Bisons, western half leaders, came from behind in a row as they downed Indianapolis Capitals 3-1.

The Cap's only goal came in the first period at 6:35 off the stick of Art Weaver.

Buffalo tied the score near the end of the first period and went ahead in the second period on a goal by Percy Reid. Bill Thoms' final point came at 12:13 of the third period on assists by Herb Lewis pulled Coach Floyd Perna of Indianapolis from the ice in a row in a vain effort to even the score.

CASUAL COMMENT

By K.J.C.

He was such a swell guy . . .

Quiet, modest and unassuming . . . Gene Sproule, 20, who was describing the attributes of F/O George Pepper, D. F. C., who was killed in action while courageously fighting the Nazis Tuesday.

As though it was yesterday we recall George Pepper shaking hands with this correspondent and in his modest manner merely stating "I'll give them all I've got and try to repay some of the people of Belleville for your confidence in me," that was when George was leaving for England in the spring of 1938 to compete in the Island Isle of Man motorcycle race. Now George has died defending what he believed and knew was most right—freedom—to live as free men desire.

It was only a few short days ago he was decorated for bravery and received the Distinguished Flying Cross and how proud his parents must have been. Now they only have his memory and the heartfelt sympathy of every person who ever knew George Pepper.

It only seems a short time ago this department received a telegram from George — "Broke American record for 200 C.C. class" . . . and that was back in February of 1938 when George went to Daytona Beach, Fla., where he not only won outstanding recognition as a motorcycle rider, but established a record.

It was while at Daytona Beach Sir Malcolm Campbell visited George Pepper's pits. Later Sir Malcolm invited us he was quite thrilled and had sought racing advice from Sir Malcolm. However, we later learned, from an unimpeachable source, that Sir Malcolm had actually visited Pepper's pits to seek knowledge regarding a certain style of driving himself. But that was George Pepper — modest and unassuming.

Then he returned home and practically alone staged the 1938 200-mile Canadian motorcycle championship race here in Belleville, which he thrilled his own townsfolk by winning this honor before 12,000 spectators. However, when the race was over he visited this office and would accept no pologies, but insisted the credit for the spectacle be given to his associates then in the Quinte Motorcycle Club. That was George Pepper.

Came 1937 and an urge to compete in the Isle of Man race, the greatest motorcycle racing event in the world. Citizens rallied behind George and he went to England with hope in his heart, but realizing he was facing the strongest opposition possible. When former out of the race due to engine trouble at the 250 mile mark, George was right and received honorable mention in subsequent news dispatches. English motorcyclisten recognized the qualities of young Pepper and immediately he was signed to ride professionally and within a few months was not only captain of the Newcastle team, but was riding internationally.

Came the war and George Pepper felt his mechanical ability was needed by his country and he joined the Royal Air Force. Receiving his wings, F/O Pepper proved as courageous flying as he had on the race tracks of the world and was soon in heavy action over the North Sea fighter plane and received the D. F. C. To those who didn't know George Pepper it is their loss, as he was an inspiration to all who came in contact with him. Thorough in his undertakings, George Pepper was the type of young man and who was a born leader and although quiet, unassuming and modest, he commanded the respect of not only his elders, but was an idol of the young, who could well take pattern from his simplicity. To the bereaved family the sporting fraternity of Belleville extend deepest sympathy.

Remember when the New York Athletic Commission ruled '18 years old' today that a boxer was no longer a neutral corner after mocking down an opponent. The ruling followed a protest made when Jack Dempsey stood over Louis Angel Firpo as a referee counted the Argentine out.

Senor Pedro Martinez, the self-styled 'rastin' villain, found out there are others who can play the unorthodox ring applications and one is Ike Hamilton, who decided a goodly number of patrons at the Rizzo Arena last night to help the talented Montreal boy along. Hamilton's right McCready was willing to wrestle, but Martinez elected to slug matters and lost. The semi-final bout was poorly matched and Ike Kaiser, another, another accepted ring villain literally play with Ivan Kalmikoff, the wrestling champion of Russia, but the bone of the House of David cult. Ike Kalmikoff wished he was back with his bearded brethren last night. However, Promoter Frank Provizzano will rather tough for Kalan when he signed him to meet the undefeated "Greek Angel" here next Wednesday night. The Hamilton ogre has only appeared twice before in Canada, once in Belleville and once in Montreal.

THIS AND THAT — Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers for the past four years, was re-named to that position for 1943 by President Branch Rickey and Durocher . . . However, there's more to the re-signing of Durocher than meets the eye. . . . Pres. Rickey insisted that Durocher sign a playing-manager's contract, thus giving the Dodgers the value of his 30-year-old Lip's playing ability, a player who played under Rickey at St. Louis back in '38 and Rickey knows the value as a player, to say nothing of the shortage of material during the war period. . . . In the meantime Coaches Chuck Dressen and Fresco Thompson were kept on the Dodger coaching roll. . . . Pat Friddy was offered the managerial post at Dodger's farm team at Montreal, but declined . . . Jimmy Brown will train at Lakewurth, Fla., next spring when the Dodgers all train from Beach. . . . Seven major league pitchers have won three 20-game seasons in one year, viz: Hoyser, no pitcher had done the trick since Dazzy Vance did it . . . Iron-armed Pete, who threw for the Cardinals over the Dodgers in 1930. . . . They're quite happy down in Kingston after learning that Lieut. Phil Mailes, former Cornwall goalkeeper, had been transferred to the Limestone City. . . . Mailes has had pro hockey experience with Pittsburgh and Springfield in the American hockey loop. . . . Off the board.—

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 19—(CP)—When Cpl. Arnold Sturgess puts his mind to it, he's a fair sort of fighter. But when he's off duty, he's just the Montreal negro can look mighty bad.

Soldier of the Canadian Army Overseas light-heavyweight boxing champion, Cpl. Sturgess' fracas against Jack Smith, a Worcester lad who hasn't had a bout fight since he came out of Dunkerque, and took an eight-round decision at London's Stadium Military All-Services Club . For Arnold, who put up a disappointing show in the quarter-finals of the British Army Championships at Aldershot last month, this was perhaps his most convincing display on this side of the ocean.

Smith, regarded as a comer before the war was over, was floored by a shattering body with one stiff right to the jaw, but was out of practice and couldn't take quite with the rushing, swinging tactics of his grim opponent.

An uppercut that began near the canvas won the main bout of the card for Eric Boon, British lightweight champion, who knocked out Jake Kilrain of Glasgow in the second round. . . . Referee Sherry counted over the unpopular, surprise finish to a "Hit that starter on a slow, cautious note.

Kilrain, former British welter king engaged in a cautious, crouched on the floor, writhing in pain from the blow, and the crowd booed, believing the thrust low. The packed house also vented disapproval of the attack in the opening heat when the fighters were twice called to a halt and warned against holding.

Kilrain was convinced the knockout blow was low; Boon found it one of the finest boby blows he ever scored.

Previous to the ma in match there were eight rounds of constrained fisty encounter between Jim Wilde, the doctor from Swansea, Wales and Sapper George Muir of the Royal Canadian Army. Muir gave the Welsh heavyweight title, arm a 30-pound edge in weight and took the decision on the strength of a great last-round finish.

Both went to the floor in the first round and Wilde hit the deck again in the second round. Muir came out of the scrap with a severely cut eye.

Oddity In The News: Blame this on the war, but Tottenham Hotspur commenced their football season to carry players' baggage from the railway station to the ground for a League South football match with Reading.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Strictly in the Greeve"

Even in its wildest and woolliest era the west never saw anything as merrily maddening as Tinsel Belasly laugh loaded musical "Strictly in the Groove," now on the McCarthy Theatre screen.

The story, a rapid-fire concoction of romance, jive and dude-ranch excitement, proves a logical vehicle for its trio of outstanding comedians, namely Leon "rubber legs" Errol, Shemp Howard and Franklin Pangborn.

Grace Hamilton, Mary Healy and Martha Tilton have the leading feminine roles, Richard Davies is attractive as the leading man and other headline entertainers include the Dinning Sisters, The Diamond Solid-Aires and the celebrated Jimmie Wakely Trio.

Surprise Appearance

Surprise event of the program is the appearance of Jimmie "You Are My Sunshine" Davis. Jimmie sings the famous composition.

Ossie Nelson, the bandleader, has a conspicuous acting role, and his orchestra furnishes grand accompaniment to the various vocal and dancing sequences which follow each other throughout the picture.

Charles Starrett

Charles Starrett, one of Hollywood's most popular western stars in the latest action-packed musical western, "Thunder Over the Prairie" is good for a second feature at the McCarthy, making up a weekend program that is a very good one will thoroughly enjoy. Saturday performances will be continuous with matinee prices until six o'clock. Mothers send the kiddies to this matinee, matron in charge.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Forbidden Trails"

What is probably one of Hollywood's fastest moving westerns for many seasons is now on the screen at the Capitol theatre in the person of the Rough Riders in their latest adventure, "Forbidden Trails" with Buck Jones, Tim McCoy, Raymond Hatton and Tom "Silver" Keene, excellent team of hard-riding and hard-fighting men who have been featured in this trio, with a good portion of humor supplied by the antics of comedian Raymond Hatton.

Laurel and Hardy

It was a hits on the blues last night at the Capitol theatre. Those two nitwits of the silent Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, the first new night audience howling at their antics in 20th Century-Fox's "Great Guns."

They were the target in target practice. They were the revel in revelle. They were the pain in the sergeant's neck. They had the whole army balmy.

"Great Guns" is Stan and Ollie's first film in more than a year, and it is the funniest they have made. Some of the gags, from start to finish, the film is the comics' best vehicle yet.

For a laff fest—be sure to see "Great Guns."

A funny cartoon and the "Perils of Nyoka" complete a swell double feature program.

AT THE BELLE

"Cairo"

Hollywood Jibes Hollywood in "Cairo," Jeanette MacDonald's latest musical film, now closing at the Bella Theatre.

The adventure comedy is an amusing, farcical version of the hackneyed spy story told gaily and replete with one of the most enjoyable musical scores ever to hit the screen.

Sharing top honors with Miss MacDonald is Robert Young, who is teemed with her for the first time, and the "Show" singing star Ethel Waters.

Surprise Prophecies of Nostradamus

The further Prophecies of Nostradamus, the master seer of the 16th Century, whose predictions of coming World events down the centuries have aroused universal interest to everyone with "Bliss Wolf," 1942's most timely color cartoon will be presented on the same program.

Bugs Bunn Hands in "Iceland"

Already hailed as one of the musical must-see of the season, 20th Century-Fox's "Iceland," "Sonja Henie" makes its debut locally this weekend at the Belle Theatre. Having the same starring team that helped make "Sun Valley Serenade" a box-office sensation, the film has added to this duo of Sonja Henie and John Payne, the laugh-provoking antics of Jack Oakie and the celebrated music of Sammy Kaye and his orchestra. Nor must we forget the addition of a new crop of hit tunes by songwriters Mack Gordon and Harry Warren, including "You Can Say No in Seven Languages, I Soldier," "Lovers' Knot," "Let's Bring New Glory to Old Glory," "There Won't Be Another You," and "I Like a Military Man."

"Iceland," lavishly produced by William Leberson and directed by Bruce Humberstone, two of Hollywood's best, is said to have the finest skating scenes ever shown on the screen. Nothing was left undone —including even a new dance which already gives promise of national popularity, the "Lovers' Knot Hop."

AT THE BELLE

Robert Young and Jeanette MacDonald are the screen's newest romantic team in "Cairo," M.G.M. musical spy drama, now on the Bella Theatre screen.

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, I'm sure I'm the last to be the first to criticize anybody, I mean there's always something good you can say on a person's credit side, she said.

Tell me some nice things about myself, pop said. The more understanding I get from you the more eagerly served they are the more eagerly I'll lap them up, he said, and ma said, I was thinking of Mrs. Rooster, the woman who plays such gassy bridge. If there's a single mistake in bidding that she doesn't make, it's not known to science, and when it comes to playing her cards she's way down in a class by herself with no prizes in sight.

You're not knocking her, are you? pop said, and ma said, no, I'm just trying to give you a few mote idea of her gaslitsess so you can understand my charitable view point. What I mean is, she's so unspeakable that she makes my overbridge shine by contrast, so whenever I play with her I feel like Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson, and I assure you it's a mighty pleasant sensation, especially on the days when I'm otherwise be conscious of the fact that I'm playing slightly under par. So that's what I give her credit for. It's powerful that nobody can be more useful than the person who gives you a pleasant glow on your way through life, pop said, that's what Mrs. Rooster does for me when I come up against her. She's unfortunately every woman isn't so philosophical. For instance I couldn't get Blanche Hipple to see my point at all. She was just rude with sarcasm at Mrs. Rooster's expense, ma said.

Why not? Mrs. Rooster your partner? pop said, and ma said, No, she was Blanche's, and what's so funny about that?

Meaning on account of pop laughing, and pop claimed he just happened to think of something funny that happened down at his office.

CHAPTER XI

Ebbitt's Caravan

Dickson, suddenly relaxed, resumed his servant's air, and said: "Yes, sir, no, sir—but I'm in a hurry, sir. It's out! I couldn't sleep for thinking of it. You think I did any harm, sir?"

"To whom?"

"To either of them—my lady, or Mr. Herrick?"

"Well, Dickson, you see, Mr. Herrick was arrested because they thought he was deeply in love with Mrs. McCleod, and killed her in a lover's quarrel—but you know he was not in love with—her, or he would not have been annoyed with her attentions. So—you think no more about it, and trust me to do what is right."

"I am only too glad to do that, Mr. Stone. Will I leave, sir, now?"

"No, I'm going now. It may be that I shall want to see you again. Can I manage it, without troubling Mr. McCleod?"

"You can send me a note in care of my brother. He works for a caterer on Seventh Avenue. I will give you a card."

Dickson produced a card of a well-known caterer's shop.

A further caution kept around the room convinced Stone of the hopelessness of looking for clues there.

"About that new bracelet Mrs. McCleod received that night, do you know anything about that?" he asked. "Linda, Mrs. McCleod's maid, who is engaged to me, knows about it. Mr. McCleod gave it to his sister. But Linda knows that it was new to Mrs. McCleod that night, and she didn't buy it herself because—if she had she would have put it on when she dressed. If she had bought it herself, there would have been the box that it came in. But there was no sign of it. And here's another thing. Linda found, right in this room on the floor behind the couch, a bunch of crumpled white tissue paper. She says the bracelet was brought here in it."

"That seems to me an important find."

"You want to see any more rooms, sir?"

"No, I think not. Where is Mr. McCleod?"

"He's up in his father's apartment.

"Mr. McCleod hasn't any favorites among those four young women, that I've seen. I've proved that Mr. Herrick was innocent—and one of the others guilty, Mr. McCleod wouldn't mind, would he?"

"I don't think he would care, sir. But the young man that did that murder was a sly one, Mr. Herrick, he is anything but sly! Mr. Murray, he's the slyest, and Mr. Barnard, too. The queer actor, Martin Delevan—well, he's sly, but he did not have any motive."

"Say nothing to any one, Dickson, of what we have talked about."

"Mr. Stone, no one shall hear a word from me, sir."

Leaving the house, Stone walked along Park Avenue, for he had time in his career as he was conscious of a clash of duties. He wanted to engage in the tracking down of Alma McCleod's murderer, and he wanted to put all his energies to work on a speedy and successful trial for Jason Webb's young granddaughter.

He rented that both endeavors and went to benefit Brand Herrick, and went to benefit Brand Herrick, and it ought to be possible to combine his efforts. But he couldn't see it that way. One investigation must start and probably finish in New York City. The other must start in Michigan and finish—he knew not where!

There was no connection between the two, except as they both affected Herrick. The murder of murder had nothing to do with the death of old Jason Webb. Stone planned to take care of the latter cases at once.

That evening he was with Herrick for some time before Miss Ellis came. To his fine credit, he, Herrick," he said, watching the face of his friend, "by the time have three months to hunt up the somewhat mythical young lady we want; but by right procedure, I am told we can count on about a month. I hope that my night will be enough for all. The police plan to attend to that, because it is much more important to keep you alive than to get your murderer.

"Now, my plan is to send Bliss, as we have let him go now, two things stand, attend the funeral, look into the matter of the missing granddaughter, and I will lay my plans for balking the intentions police. Then Clarence will return, look after you, and the business, and do a few bits of sleuthing for me, and I will heard the bone in the hitching post all night by you!"

"Yes," Brand said, but with no brightening of his despondent face.

"I don't blame you, old chap, for not feeling gay, but I do with you'd show a bit hopefuller. I tried to see three young men this afternoon, one of which I hope to have for your successor in the legacy of this room. But of the three I found only one at home, and he was far from a hopeful suspect. It was Delevan, and somehow I can't see him committing murder any more than I can see you. That leaves two with Haynes and Murray, and I am ready to say they are the most likely the lot. The Little I've heard of them is not entirely in their favor but not damning.

"Murray, maybe," Brand said, wearily, "but not Yes, I think—"

"Don't think. Leave that to me for the present. And here comes Mr. Bliss.

Clarence came in, full of enthusiasm.

"Behold me," he said, "a brave adventurer, starting for Ebbitt's Corners, an unknown wild, where lilies as not there are no flowers heads do grow beneath their shoulders."

"Going tonight?" Brand said, with a touch of interest.

"All right, my boy," said Stone. "Now, what do you plan to do when you get there, Bliss?"

Bliss became serious.

"What do you think of this schedule?" he said. "I'll leave New York at midnight, get to Detroit in the dawning of the morning. Go from Detroit, dancing when the time serves and lift The Corners, at a civilized hour for decent people."

"That sounds fine," said Stone.

"I thought first I'd go to the post office, and find out where the late Mr. Webb had lived. Also, I'd discover the hideout of his lawyer, if any. And by that time I count on having made myself so charming that I can ask anything I want to know, like who are the nearest neighbors or friends of the deceased, and how the gendeman was held in the villagers' estimation."

Stone said, "You'll probably find servants at the house, old retainers, possibly, and I'll trust you to make good with them."

"Yes, I daresay. Brand, what shall I tell the lawyer of your attitude? Shall I say if the missing girl can be found you are willing to marry her, if she is willing?"

"Yes," Brand spoke heavily. "I'll say that. I've thought it over, and if they find her I think it's my duty to go through the marriage ceremony, if she wants it, and if it can be arranged for me. Then I could make a will, leaving the money to her, or—if I get out of here, free—I would let her divorce me.

"Well, you're banking on the fact that you're an undesirable husband," Bliss observed. "But I'll tell them that as far as I find it necessary. Perhaps they've already got the girl. She might be willing to accept you, though didn't want to go there while the old man was alive."

"I'll leave it all to you, Clarence," Brand sighed wearily.

The confinement and anxiety were telling on him, and, although brave, he was losing weight and buoyancy.

"Now, my buddy," Bliss said. Soon he had to leave.

"Adieu, chap, Bliss," Fleming Stone said, after he had gone, and then turned Herrick's attention to other matters.

"That waif of McCleod's is a smart one," he said. "He is sure you're not the one the police ought to have down."

"Yes, Dickson knows a lot about that night," Brand said.

"He has sized up the situation somewhat, and he's no fool, either.

"Look here, Stone, we're not going to go South are we?"

"Yes, if it's necessary to our work."

"I'm with you; and I'm sorry."

"Well, Dickson told me he said you and the lady in the small elevator and in the hall where the murder was done."

"Yes, I glimpsed him there in the hall. Then Alma came between us and I thought he went away."

"Why, I think he moved while facing two. Per he told me frankly that you were not to blame, that he was latching her handkerchiefs on you. He didn't use those long words, but I got his idea."

"Yes, it's the truth. I suppose I showed no reason why I shouldn't admit it. She was using all her charm to fetch me to make love to her. I hate that sort of thing, and though I had admired her before then, and like her, I didn't kill her."

"Of course, you didn't, and with Clarence and me, more energetic help, we're going to prove it."

"Thanks, old chap," said Brand Herrick emphatically.

Clarence Bliss carried out his schedule, as planned, and next morning after a good breakfast at a lunching hotel, he found a taximan to take him to Ebbitt's Corners. The driver seemed amazed that any one so smart-looking as Clarence should want to go to that blot on the landscape.

"You know folks there?" he asked.

"Do you?" Bliss countered.

"Well, I did, but he's gone now. Old Jason Webb, he was, and a good man but a poor citizen."

"As how?" They were now on their way.

"Oh, gruff, grouchy, and grumbly. Nobody liked him. It was his fault. But rich! Golly, that man had the spondulics! I wonder what will become of his wealth?"

"I can't imagine. There's all sorts of reports about that. Some say he left it all to the place, The Corners, you know. It ain't even a village, and they got Webb's money, they could have trustees and a president and be a village, and call it Ebbittsville. That's what they're hopin' for."

"And what's against it?"

"I don't rightly know. But there's some objection, I can't find, or somethin' of that sort. You goin' to look it over?"

"Maybe," Bliss said. "Drive on." Reaching the hamlet, he asked to be put out at the post office, and was landed in front of a small grocery shop. He entered, and, after a few words with Brand and dismissed him.

THE WAR TODAY

(By GLENN BARR)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The Japanese are taking punishing, costly defeats at the farthest points of their line of conquest.

Both in the Solomons and on and around New Guinea Island they are paying dearly for desperate efforts to check the turning of the tide. The Tokyo radio's reports leave little doubt that their illstarred adventure on the Guadalcanal Peninsula, which two months ago menaced Port Moresby and represented the high tide of the drive toward Australia, is near an ignominious end.

The land troops are pinned back in a narrow area on the north coast of Buna and Gona and efforts to reembark them from the sea have only added to the toll exacted from the Japanese navy in the battle of the Solomons, with Pacific.

In the Solomons, Japanese forces suffered a disastrous, if not complete, defeat.

The United States navy now adds another ship to the already formidable list of enemy losses, suggesting that the Japanese fleet's losses in the Solomons and there in the

DEFENCE DEP'T TO CALL ALL B-1, B-2 CATEGORIES

Between 60,000 and 65,000 Men Now Subject to Service

Ottawa, Nov. 20 — (CP) — The defence department has decided to extend the call-up of National Resources by accepting men in medical categories B-1 and B-2 for service immediately, it was learned today.

Up to now only men placed in "A" category after medical examination have been called into the army under defence duties.

Between 60,000 and 65,000 men in the two categories will be called up for service by 19 to 40 years inclusive — have been placed in the categories B-1 and B-2 by the medical officers, it was stated.

What proportion of this number would be available for the army cannot be determined with any degree of accuracy, officials said, because some men in these groups volunteered for active service, others are engaged in war work from which they cannot be spared, and still others are farmers who are eligible for deferment on assignment of call-up.

Subject to the call in the eligible age groups are men who were single or childless widowers at July 15, 1942.

A fortnight ago it was said at the war services department that no decision had been made in hand for the defence department, one for 19,585 men who were ordered to report for the other for 14,452 between Dec. 7 and Dec. 14.

Those figures indicated upwards of 34,800 men would be called into the army by the end of the year. Both the regulations were supplementary to the July 15 proclamation of the summer months.

They were believed to indicate to some degree the extent by which the number of men obtained during the summer fell short of the requisition. The normal requisitions for July, August and September and October totalled 78,000, with the largest single one being that of August—35,000.

How soon the B-1 and B-2 category men would be called upon to report for training and subsequent overseas service in defence of territorial waters was not immediately apparent.

It was recently was extended to 19-year-olds and friendly aliens to help with defence work.

Informed circles believed at that time that a good many would be available to carry the call-up machinery into effect. Selective National Service is scheduled to take over the job now handled by the army.

Extension of the call to men in 19 year old groups, it was also said, was estimated to provide an additional 135,000 men for service. The latest new extension to men of B-1 and B-2 medical category thus raised the total additional manpower made available since last month to approximately 200,000.

The categories B-1 and B-2 are the highest in the "C" or unfit medical category. The army uses these men on jobs of duty, office and other jobs which it considers can be carried out efficiently by men who are not in the peak of condition.

Dressed Poultry Prices Maintain Steady Tone

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP) — The dressed poultry market maintained a very steady tone during the past week although some slight change in prices of individual birds were in evidence. Receipts of chicken and fowl were plentiful and showed improved quality.

Arrivals of turkeys, ducks and geese were light, turkeys finding a ready outlet although some complaints for turkeys from U. S. points for the United States Thanksgiving.

The local demand for poultry was at the peak of pre-Christmas movement was considerably below the previous week's shipments but enquiries for chicken coming in from the Maritimes and other points indicated a healthy interest for the market for the coming week.

A fair supply of receipts is being packed for storms. A few broilers arrived from producers specializing in this kind of poultry, costing 26 and 28 cents lb. for grade A milk-fed birds.

RED ARMY STAGES VIOLENT ATTACKS GERMANS DECLARE

Tell of Actions in Caucasus, Don, South of Leningrad and in North

New York, Nov. 20 (AP) — The German high command declared today that the resurgent Red army has gone from defensive to offensive in violent attacks in the Caucasus, along the Don, south of Leningrad and on the Rybachi peninsula at the northern-most end of the Russian-Finnish frontier.

The Berlin radio broadcast of the communique from Hitler's headquarters claimed the attacks had been repulsed, but suggested that Monday night be the prelude for a new winter comeback drive by the Soviet army.

The only advantage the Germans claimed was in Tuapse, port on the eastern Black Sea coast of the Caucasus, where the communique said a Russian attack had been cut off and destroyed, and in the air battle nearby heavy losses were claimed to have been inflicted upon the invading army by German and Rumanian fighters and bombers.

"Violent counter-attacks by the Bolshevists east of Angelin (in the central Caucasus) were bloodily repulsed, the communique said. It said German artillery and air attacks were directed against Russian troop concentrations in that area where the Don and Stalingrad fronts join and that the Caucasus had been turned back.

"In Stalingrad, shock troops are in fighting," the communique in its only reference to that long-contested address of the Volga.

"On the Don front, Rumanian troops fought off several attacks in the course of which the Rumanian air forces inflicted considerable losses on the enemy."

New Fighting on Don

The Don front was more than just a continuation of the month's of manoeuvring for position there, the communique emphasized. "New fighting is going on there," it declared.

"Attacks repeatedly made by the enemy in the night of Rybachi (Fisher) peninsula were repulsed, the communique said.

"Off the Volkhov River from south of Leningrad it reported:—

"In heavy defensive fighting of the past days an Alpine division from Berchtesgaden, employed at Volkhov, particularly excelled."

Hitler headquarters made no secret, however, that the Russians had the initiative, and were striking in force.

"In this sector", the communique said "the enemy attacked, employing nine infantry battalions supported by tanks, strong artillery and battle planes, against a position defended by troops of various German regions.

"After four days of incessant, ferocious, man-to-man fighting in altered battle position, all enemy attacks collapsed".

Says Franco Refuses Aff, Naval Bases To Germans

London, Nov. 20—(CP)—A Reuters news agency dispatch from Ankara quoted diplomatic sources in the Turkish capital Saturday as saying that Gen. Francisco Franco of Spain had refused to grant Germany naval and air bases.

Spain, wedged between the Allies on Gibraltar and across the narrow strait in Africa on one side and Germany and her southern front ier on the other, apparently is trying to remain strictly neutral.

Although the Franco government is friendly with the Axis, which helped it gain power in its civil war, Spain's partial mobilization, announced two days ago, has been interpreted in informed European quarters as an effort to avoid fighting.

Eire is expected to produce between 14,000,000 and 17,000,000 pounds of wool this year although about 224,000 fewer sheep have been raised than last year.

Raymond Massey Appointed Major In Canadian Army

Ottawa, Nov. 20. (AP)—Appointment of Raymond Massey, actor, to the rank of major, to special duties in the Adjutant-General's Branch of the army, with the rank of major, was announced by Defence Minister Ralston today. Mr. Massey himself said he was joining the army "as a private, a sapper soldier or nothing."

Maj. Massey was a lieutenant in the Canadian Field Artillery at 19, and saw action during the last war. He was badly wounded at Ypres in 1916, and while convalescing published his first book, Hate and Princeton Universities as Honorary Fellow.

He served in Siberia.

Parents Receive Diary Of Airman Son Who Was Killed in Egypt

Picton, Nov. 20 — A diary kept by Flt.-Sgt. Wilson Burd for several months before his death in Egypt last June 4, was just been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Burd, Main St., Picton, following the death of the young airman, who was killed when personal effects were taken in charge by a fellow member of the squadron, and flown to Egypt, en route to Vancouver, posted the parcel in Canada.

In the diary, Flt.-Sgt. Burd gives a day by day account of his experiences from the time he left for Egypt last New Years as captain of a bomber crew, until a short time later he achieved his highest ambition when he was given command of a specially adapted Liberator, which he was flying at the time of his death.

Mention is made in the diary of many raids, the flights over the Mediterranean looking for convoys, flights in the dim light of the moon, the perilous night flights to and from Malta. Trip very hectic. At dawn we were lost and pin-pointed on the coast of Sicily. Tracers were not shot down I do not know," reads one entry.

"At Malta today and experienced four air falls in five hours. Weather very bad over Mediterranean," reads another entry.

"Operations last night. Target, Cyrene. Severe electrical storm. Dropped bombs on military camp at Gazala.

"Hornsh. Night flying tonight. Same target. Liberator working lovely. Went hunting today and killed five scorpions."

Strangely enough, the last entry in the diary, written April 17, tells of his first letter arriving from home. Flt.-Sgt. Wilson burd met death at dawn on the 18th.

POLICE COURT

Motor vehicle speeders enriched the coffers of the county police court here Thursday when several charges of speeding were entered under the War Measures Act, were fined by Magistrate E. C. Lloyd.

James Boneham, Trenton, Cecil Crawford, Belleville, Fred C. Cone, Cannifton and R. H. Hall, Toronto, all paid $15.00 and costs after being convicted of the above charges, while Fred Burtch, Picton, was assessed $22.50, including costs, after being convicted of speeding in a truck within the necessary commercial vehicle licence.

Ernest Wilson, Picton, and Wm. Hamilton, R. R. No. 2 Belleville, was fined ten dollars and costs after being apprehended driving a motor vehicle with inadequate brakes, while Ora Soldenton, Trenton, fattened the court's coffers $4.50 after pleading guilty to failing to observe a traffic stop light. Percy J. Stanley, Trenton, was fined a similar amount after being apprehended driving a motor vehicle not equipped with the proper lights.

When Walter Kemp and Douglas Wannamaker, both of Trenton, appeared on charges of having in their possession tires, known to be stolen, Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Roberston requested a further enlargement and admitted the pair to bail. The Routine Prices and Trade Board have additional charges to prefer against these men and I find it necessary to ask for a remand," stated Mr. Robertson.

The charges of alleged violations of the Wartime Rental Regulations were to have been heard against Andrew Somberg, Station St., but at the request of W. P. B. Officials this case was also deferred one week.

HUNT JAP FORCE OF DESTROYERS OFF NEW GUINEA

Heavy Australian Bombers Conduct Search Through Night by Moonlight

POUND SALAMAUA

By C. YATES MCDANIEL

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Nov. 20 (AP)—Heavy bombers from the Solomons, weather Thursday for a Japanese destroyer force off the New Guinea coast at Buna while Allied ground forces closed within 25 miles of that Papuan beachhead.

Reports from New Guinea are not indicative what job may have been assigned to the eight destroyers, deploying off Buna, although the noon communique said they apparently planned to aid the battered landing force was taken off at dawn Tuesday.

Observers recalled that in past operations the enemy generally has tried to hold positions until the moment of actual evacuation when hard-pressed.

The communique, however, was the entrance of a similar destroyer squadron into Milne Bay at the southeastern tip of New Guinea last September when some transports there were being battered landing force was taken off at dawn Tuesday.

Observers recalled that in past operations the enemy generally has tried to hold positions until the moment of actual evacuation when hard-pressed.

The communique, however, was the entrance of a similar destroyer squadron into Milne Bay at the southeastern tip of New Guinea last September when some transports there were being battered landing force was taken off at dawn Tuesday.

While the jungle fighters pushed cautiously forward against little or no opposition from positions outside Buna, Allied airmen hit the enemy hard and often throughout the southwestern Pacific theatre. Troop positions and installations were heavily bombed.

The airmen also renewed the attack on the Japanese base at Lae, Japanese bases farther to the north-west of the New Guinea coast from which the beleaguered Buna garrison might be reinforced.

Australian Beaufort American Hudsons struck at Baucau on Timor, 400 miles northwest of Darwin, and planes made a strafing sweep over Maobise on the same island. Heavy and medium bombers raided enemy airdromes on New Britain and on Lae, Salamaua and the much-bombed Rabaul and the medlums taking Gasmata as their targets.

P.O.G.C. Hooey, D.F.C., And Capt. A. Bowen Now Reported Dead

Trenton, (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. S. Hooey, Murphy St., received word that their grandson Pilot Officer Gilbert C. Hooey, D.F.C., who had previously been reported a prisoner of war, is now reported dead. Pilot Officer Hooey, who was born in Trenton, thirty-two years ago, and received his early education here and in Toronto is the son of Mrs. R. B. Hooey, of Belleville. His wife the former Miss Rene King and their four-year-old daughter, Carol, reside in Toronto.

Pilot Officer Hooey was decorated after a daylight raid on Augsburg last April, when his plane was one of five out of twelve which returned safely to its base in England. He was 21 years old.

Word has also been received by Mrs. Archie Bowen, Trenton, that her husband, Captain Archie Bowen, who was reported missing last March is now presumed dead.

Captain Bowen, whose convoy duty was on the way to Russia when his ship disappeared, since then has been reported a prisoner of war.

Mrs. Bowen, the former Beachnut Whitley, and their three children reside on Cedar Street, here.

Captain Bowen's family also lived on Marmora Street, two brothers, Captain Walter Bowen of the Lincoln and Welland Regiment, Canada, Ont., and two sisters, Miss Mary Bowen, Reg. N., and Miss Margaret also survive. One sister, Mrs. Goldsmith died just a few months ago.

Though his many friends, along with his family, will regret deeply the loss of Captain Archie Bowen, there still is a consolation of the fact that he died in the work he loved so well. He was a British Island, land and ocean waters since he was twenty years of age and had visited ports in many foreign countries. Sailing his initial trip with his father Captain Ben Bowen, he has sailed from the head of the Great Lakes to the Atlantic seaboard all his life and is still giving it his untiring service while his older son Captain Walter was in the Navy during the last war, sailed ever ever since, and is now on Active Duty.

Good News Emanates From All Fronts

By RIEKE L. SIMPSON

The announcement that British forces have reoccupied Benghazi may come at any moment in Washington's mid-afternoon, a full complement of fresh news dispatches from the battle fronts will be welcome to the Roosevelt administration.

This was written, the British 8th Army was reported to be within fifty miles of the town, with the coastal route and even closer among the desert tracks, behind the rugged Libyan hump. The troops had reached the coast of the Gulf of Sidra east of Benghazi. There seemed good prospect that some part of the Axis rearguard would be trapped or destroyed. Benghazi is a key communications stand in the El Agheila narrows would be reduced from two to one.

Benghazi formerly was a key position on the African chess board, but it is now a strategic key also for this time. The double-jawed Allied offensive, which has as its main objectives than clearing Libya of Axis forces, is well on its way toward clearing all Africa of both Axis troops and Axis sympathizers.

Middle East Pincers

London reports that a middle jaw of the Allied trap is developing. Fighting French forces are on the march from Fort Lamy, Lake Chad, 1,300 desert miles south. If that is true, the Free Frenchmen would hit more desert transport difficulties than Axis armed resistance. It is impossible to overestimate the has distant outposts on his desert flank. Fighting there may be and probably do more than the Axis to slow up the Allied drive to the end of the African hill.

The western jaw of the multiple Allied attack appears to be meeting more resistance than its Eastern complement, but that is the result of conjecture as yet, however. General Sir Bernard Montgomery still has his hand fully. His caution in regard to building up supplies for a diverse ratio to his daring and speed in action.

It look possible that Eisenhower's southern column is by-passing the fight for Northern Tunisia by striking at Bizerte and Tunis. If it has not done so already, the German opposition, it must be well on its way toward maintaining the forward progress of the 8th Army in Libya and gaining a position to strike at Tripoli from the south. Perfect a junction with the British forces.

Good news comes from the Allies from other fronts, too, than those on the Far Pacific. Believe it or not, it comes in both cases from Axis, not Allied sources.

Berlin admits Russian armies are now on the attack from the Caucasus to the Central Caucasus. Had doubt existed, Hitler's headquarters front was "stabilized"—which means halted—on the Stalingrad front, during a possible general withdrawal, the Berlin stress on Red offensive tends to confirm it.

Break Bad News Gently

And the German front is stabilized this winter on vastly more extended and deeper lines than a year when. Hitler has said, he escaped disaster by the skin of his teeth. Berlin seems to be trying to break bad news from Russia gently to the German people.

Tokyo spokesmen were less tactful—or more confident. Admiral Takahisa, J. former supreme naval commander, shattered the Tokyo version of a thumping Japanese naval victory in the Solomons by a single sentence. More heavy fighting there is coming, he said. That eliminates of the Tokyo claim that American naval and air power was crushed beyond possibility of action in recent engagements.

The admiral probably is a realist. He told his radio audience that the fighting in the Solomons was getting the best of the American drive to recapture the Dutch East Indies. That certainly is true although he could have included the Philippines, the Malay Peninsula, much of China, Burma and French Indo-China in that list. The United Nations purpose is not in doubt. It is only the timing and direction of the blow as a warning that are unknown.

Takahashi may also have been peopeling his home front for bad news. It is known, though a Japanese Dunkirk is coming up on New Guinea, that the logistical extension of a Japanese destroyer flotilla off Buna, 1,000 miles from its own home, the invaders hemmed in against the sea, is that they are standing by to ride as many troops as they can overnight.

RUMORS CURRENT SOME EXECUTIVES LIKELY TO RESIGN

Little, Before Leaving, Ex-pected to Name Selective Service Executives Would

MITCHELL'S CHARGE

Ottawa, Nov. 20—(CP) — Elliott M. Little, leaving unanswered Leonard Mitchell's charges that the former National Selective Service director against Little's appointment a few days yesterday for his Quebec City home without offering any explanation to critics revelled at him by Mr. Mitchell.

Mr. Little, whose resignation as Selective Service director was made public Wednesday, told reporters before leaving: "My letter of resignation, together with my recommendation memorandum, was my final word. I have nothing to add."

At a press conference yesterday, Labor Minister Mitchell replied to charges made against him by Mr. Little by saying his manpower proposals were "a reasonable and bureaucracy rampant," and announced that Mr. Little's resignation as associate deputy Minister of Labor would assume immediate effect. Mr. Little was Selective Service director.

Mr. Mitchell said no temporary breakdown in Selective Service was contemplated.

Reasons of Resignations

Rumors were current in Ottawa, however, that several Selective Service executives were likely to hand in resignations. Among them is Paul Goulet, associate director; Carl Reid, assistant director; Gerald E. Little; Claude Melanson, special assistant; Mrs. Margaret Gunn Wright, L. E. Westman and T. H. Robinson, all assistant directors, mentioned in this connection.

However, at his last meeting with the press, Leonard Mitchell, Labor Minister, Mr. Little expressed hope they would remain at their posts and Mr. Mitchell said yesterday that so did he. He had not received resignations of other Selective Service officials.

Resignation a "Bombshell"

At his press confegence, the Labor Minister termed Mr. Little's resignation "a bombshell." He said certain of Mr. Little's proposals and Mr. Little sought in his memorandum giving expression to "a basic issue," and would appear to over-ride the authority of the treasury board, the Civil Service Commission and the Governor-in-Council.

Mr. Mitchell said the manpower proposals were "so sweeping" that they required careful consideration by departmental officials, the Selective Service Advisory Committees of the labour.

He added he had given Mr. Little every opportunity and a free hand and had in no way interfered with the preparation of memoranda and proposals advanced by the director. Mr. Little's proposals received prompt consideration and any changes effected were made with Mr. Little's knowledge.

The minister said Mr. Little had requested, among other powers, the right to appoint and direct Selective Service exclusively, and authority to determine the salaries which officers, clerks and employees were to receive.

Says Little Asked Authority to Appoint

In addition, Mr. Little had asked for authority to remove or retire "at pleasure," the Selective Service officer or "any other official, employee or person."

"I don't know, but this looks like the powers of a dictator," the minister commented. He did not disclose whether a new director or associate director for Mr. Little will be named. Mr. MacNamara, Deputy Minister of National Selective Service, will retain his title of Associate Deputy Minister of Labor.

AXIS EVACUATES

Situated on the eastern side of the Gulf of Sirte, Agheila has proven to be an indecisive position, easily isolated and cut off from Benghazi by enemy forces across the Libyan hump.

The British 8th Army is said to have reached the area around Agheila, near the Tunisian-Algerian frontier, with strong forces, the German radio said.

"First skirmishes have taken place between advanced spearheads on both sides," it added.

"The descriptive "strong forces" suggest the main body of the army is at or across the border, led by the armored Assiachments which are reported by Allied sources to be within 35 miles of Bizerte, the Vichy French naval base.)

Tobruk stands at the railhead of a line leading to Bizerte and Tunis, and Agheila, the German account, if confirmed, would mean that LL-General Kenneth Anderson's army had crossed the Gulf of Sidra and was within 700 miles of Bizerte.)

Dr. J. C. Evans, hospital superintendent, said an analysis of the eggs served at dinner Wednesday night showed they contained a deadly poison (sodium fluoride) commonly used for exterminating roaches. It is believed the possibility that roach powder had been mixed in a cellar under the kitchen, was put into the eggs during their preparation instead of powdered egg, stored nearby. The powders are similar in appearance.

Rats used in a test by Dr. Frank Meane, University of Oregon bacteriologist, showed no ill effects after eating egg yolks taken directly from cans of frozen eggs, but died in three to five minutes after consuming left-over eggs from hospital dinner.

A total of 497 inmates who ate the eggs became violently ill in a matter of minutes. Some of them were nauseated, complained of stomach cramps, paralysis of the legs, find difficulty in breathing.

Dr. Evans said many still were critically ill and the number of the death toll might increase within the next week or two.

POWERFUL POISON NAMED AS CAUSE OF 47 DEATHS

Possibly Insecticide Mistaken for Powdered Milk in Preparing Food

Salem, Ore., Nov. 20—(AP)—A powerful poison, possibly an insecticide mistaken for powdered milk in the preparation of food, was responsible for the deaths of 47 insane asylum inmates, an investigation revealed today. Governor Charles A. Sprague termed the tragedy "mass murder."

The governor said he had directed the state police to "leave no stone unturned in their effort to affix responsibility for this mass murder." The possibility of homicide was studied.

Nothing was wrong with the frozen egg yolks supplied the Oregon State Hospital for the insane by the United States Agricultural Marketing Administration, Governor Sprague said. "The poison was evidently added in the preparation of the food."

Portuguese Timor Occupied by Japs

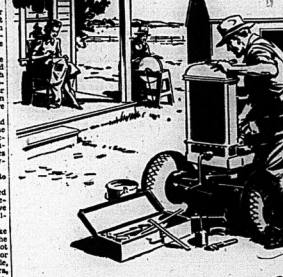
Canberra, Australia, Nov. 20 (AP) —The Japanese have completed occupation of all nine anchorages on the north coast of Portuguese Timor, less than 400 miles northwest of Australia, by mooring into Lautem, it was stated officially today.

At the same time Prime Minister John Curtin said he believed a battle would have to be fought in Timor and adjacent islands to protect Australia, just as a long-drawn fight is being waged in New Guinea and the Solomons to prevent invasion from that direction.

Timor and nearby islands are within the southwestern Pacific area and vital to the holding of Australia, he declared.



Japanese military activity in Timor had been expected since the occupation of Dutch Timor, northeast in New Guinea, where they appear to be fighting a battle similar to that being waged in the Solomons and New Guinea, in the Southwest Pacific.

Motor trucks are being assembled by the Japanese in Timor, it was learned.

Dili, the capital of Portuguese Timor, was occupied by Japanese early in their operations. They also have occupied the principal points in the Dutch part of the island.

BATTLE FOR TUNISIA GROWS IN IMPORTANCE

Axis Army Pressed Into a Narrow Coastal Stretch

Area Only 30 Miles Wide at Some Points Between Naval Base Of Bizerte and Tunis

ALLIES REINFORCED

(By E. C. DANIEL)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 21 (AP) — Allied armored forces streaming into Tunisia closed with German forces today in the opening phases of a full-scale assault on a Tobruk-like area of defenses within which the Axis has been herded with its backs to the sea, around Bizerta and Tunis.

British, United States and Fighting French troops were reported by North African radio stations to hold all of Tunisia except those two bridgeheads which the Axis, hurrying reinforcements to them by air, is defending behind barricades hastily flung up about 30 miles in a semi-circle about each port.

An Allied spokesman predicted that this struggle would grow in ferocity hourly and Axis reports indicated the enemy was throwing all the air and submarine resources at its command into the effort to block the closing circle of Allied steel and choke off its supplies.

Sir Armored Cars Destroyed

Reuters news agency said British forces had destroyed 15 Axis tanks and armored cars in the fighting in Tunisia and that in one clash British parachute troops also had destroyed six enemy armored cars.

The situation apparently was revolving about a German decision to give Axis resistance by a stiffening defence of Tunis and Bizerte but there was no official indication that Axis forces in Libya had been effectively isolated from those in Tunisia by strong British and American forces reaching the Mediterranean south of Gabes.

An Allied force from the Chad area deep in Central Africa, however, was reported by the Brazzaville radio to be thrusting north in an effort to cut off Marshal Rommel's line of retreat between El Agheila and Gabes.

A German broadcast reported initial major encounters between the Axis and the Allies in Tunisia were being directed yesterday in Allied dispatches. The Berlin radio, however, claimed that 12 Allied tanks and 18 armored cars had been destroyed on a railroad station seized east of Tebarka, near the Algeria border.

Lone Bandit Secures $800

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 21 (CP) — A lone bandit robbed the Belle River brewery's safe of between $700 and $800 this morning after locking the manager, Clarence Pratt, in a refrigerator.

Entering the premises shortly after it was opened, the bandit ordered the manager to "get back" into the refrigerator, holding his hand in his pocket as if he had a gun, Pratt said. Bracken complied as he locked the door and then rifled the till. Pratt then released himself in the refrigerator for half an hour when one of the drivers, Harry Leppan, entered the building and heard his shouts.

Direct Hits Scored On Supply Ships

London, Nov. 21 —(CP)— British torpedo planes bucked a heavy German fighter plane assault and anti-aircraft barrage over the North Sea yesterday to score torpedo hits on two supply ships and an escort vessel in the Ems estuary off the Netherlands coast, the Air Ministry announced.

Three British planes did not return. Of two which did, one had a shell-perforated fuselage and a smashed hydraulic system and another belly landed after a shell or flak shrapnel riff by a shell which ripped through the fuselage.

MARC CARRIERE HELD ON CHARGE

Arrested at Montreal Under Defence of Canada Regulations

Montreal, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Acting on orders of Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, Royal Canadian Mounted Police last night arrested 23-year-old Marc Carriere in the central committee rooms of Jean Drapeau, candidate in the Federal by-election in Outremont riding Nov. 30.

Lapointe, chief organizer for Mr. Drapeau who has termed himself the standard-bearer of conscription, was arrested under the War Measures Act. Officials would give no further information on his status but went so far as to say that he would not appear in court today.

Arrests made under the War Measures Act do not require a court appearance, although such an appearance may be made.

The arrest followed by two days statements made by Carriere at a campaign meeting on behalf of Mr. Drapeau, 26-year-old candidate opposing Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche, Minister of National War Services.

Carriere said at the meeting that he received mail-conscription notices years ago. I did not give a hoot about it. They may send me to jail or to an internment camp for it, but I will not don a uniform to serve a cause which is not Canada's."

The arrest came a short time after Raymond Ranger, divisional registrar, had clarified the situation in terms of Carriere's pronouncing that he was "in a medical category which is not at present fit enough for entrance into the army."

Mr. Ranger added that Carriere's case was first brought to light a year ago, had reported for medical examination and had been found unfit for service. He said a similar situation existed in regard to Mr. Drapeau.

Carriere is joint secretary of "La Ligue pour la Defense du Canada." (League for the Defence of Canada). Following his arrest a police search of several warrants to search his residence "and other premises" without making an immediate announcement of the results of the search.

GRIP ON ISLAND VERY SECURE SAYS NAVY SECRETARY

Drive Going Forward To Wipe Out Remaining Jap Bases in Solomons

ROUT 1,500 JAPS

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP) — A drive to wipe out remaining Japanese bases in the Solomon Islands appeared near at hand today as destruction of enemy troops and ships seemed to climb the United States' bold on Guadalcanal.

Announcement for the first time that the American grip on the island was "very secure" came from Navy Secretary Frank Knox, who reported further that half of a force of 1,500 Nipponese landed on Guadalcanal had been slaughtered and the rest routed.

Possibility of duplication in the near future of the naval ships lost in last week's sea victory also was suggested by Knox, who said the Japanese vessels had been sunk "three cornered" — a battleship, another battleship, one heavy cruiser, two light cruisers, three destroyers, a flotilla of transports and cargo ships. Ten more were damaged.

56 Combat Ships Lost

The reported American losses of two light cruisers and six destroyers in the battle brought the total of United States total of destroyer vessels in the Pacific war area to 20 and combat ships lost to 56, Knox said.

Announcements of the navy and allied headquarters boosted the total Japanese losses in the 16 months and 24 days since Pearl Harbor.

Meanwhile, Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, American naval officer to return to Pearl Harbor since defeat of the Japanese fleet at Midway, said that the fish's attempts to recapture Guadalcanal had cost the lives of perhaps 10,000 Nipponese on the island alone. From that total 8,000 more were believed killed in the sinking of eight loaded enemy transports.

Japanese Trapped Along Coast, Battle of Extermination Is Expected

By DEAN SCHEDLER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in New Guinea, Nov. 21—(AP)—Japanese forces trapped in a narrow coastal strip in the Buna-Gona district of New Guinea were reported today desperately today as Australian and American ground troops moved relentlessly to drive them into the sea or force their capitulation.

One Allied force was within a mile of Buna and engaged in heavy fighting, while another was attempting to wrest a landing field on the beachhead at Cape Sudest to aid defending Japanese. This second force was 12 miles from the Japanese-held strip but by no intention of the Japanese and the battle of extermination seemed to be in progress. At least 7,000 Japanese, both Australian and American troops were at close quarters with the enemy.

An Allied force mopping up in the jungle in the wake of the advanced units reported it had encountered a band of fleeing Japanese near Wairopi. Twenty-four Japanese were killed and 30 others were widely dispersed, it was said.

In Jaured, claims the German soldier is afraid to stand and fight.

What Rommel is trying to do is to race his shattered and battered forces westward, but he can make a junction with Axis colleagues now bent on stemming the Allied drive against Tunis and Bizerte. Present indications are that Hitler has no intention of causing North Africa to be abandoned without another fight.

Air power is becoming increasingly important as the battle swirls to a climax with the Allies pressing the Axis from west and south.

Hitler's hopes must depend largely on the air force and he is said to be sending all reinforcements into the battle.

The Allies, already superior in the air, are gaining strength as they advance. Their bombers, attacking from the Allied drive through Libya has resulted in the capture of some 150 landing fields and this numerically facilitates operations of the combined British and American air force which increasingly plaster Axis columns, troops and supply concentration.

At this crucial juncture, Lt.-Gen. Francis G. Andrews, famous air opponent, has arrived to take command of United States air forces in the Middle East. He undoubtedly has stepped into the midst of a situation to his liking.

I had an interesting chat with the commander of the Royal Air Force and he spoke him I came away with the impression that the Germans' experts are looking forward to the fascinating possibilities of bombing Tunis. Italy and German territory from North African airports as soon as the present drive is over.

Cairo More Confident As Battle Continues Across Libyan Desert

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Nov. 21 — (AP) — There is an air of solid confidence in both British and American Middle East headquarters on the Nile as the chase of the disorganized Axis forces continues westward across the Libyan desert into the crimson glow of Hitler's dying sun.

Now of course figures of speech are among the most overworked liars in the world, with great reason, but I hasten to add that it is with deliberation that I refer to the master gangster's sinking sun, for it need scarcely be passed in mention, considering all aspects of the European war.

Still, while confidence among our captains of the war is 100 per cent, there is not the slightest disposition to underrate the magnitude of the task ahead. The Boche has plenty of fight left in him and his striking power is great despite his losses.

It is true that the only way we can lose now is through Allied blunders in judgment, a major mistake might prove disastrous.

As regards the German wing of the great Allied North African show, we are in the midst of the battle. Unless the Germans unexpectedly step entirely out of China-Burma-India, I see no major battle in the offing.

In assaying the position we must recognize that Rommel's sensational flight, which is being carried on with exceptional speed, is impelled by tactical necessity rather than fear. He is a rash man who, even

BRITISH CONTACT RETREATING FOE NEAR AGEDABIA

Mass of Rommel's Broken Army Evidently Reached El Agheila Area

BRITISH IN BENGASI

Cairo, Nov. 21—(AP)—The triumphant British 8th Army raised the flag over Bengasi early yesterday and swift forward units, racing around the long curve, made contact with Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's retreating forces near Agedabia, about 100 miles south of Bengasi, British headquarters announced today.

The mass of the broken Axis army was reported to have left no favorable defensive positions prepared by its fugitive leader before Agheila area, some 70 miles further west, and the road south-west from Agedabia.

Those bundled remnants of the Axis army which escaped into Libya from Egypt to threaten the British naval base at Tobruk and the Allied air valley itself were again favored by flying weather which grounded and forced with the usual Allied punishment of the retreating Axis columns.

The German high command admitted yesterday that Bengasi had been evacuated "according to a previous decision." The German statements rejoiced that Rommel had succeeded in withdrawing his forces "intact" as the Libyan coastal city.

With the evacuation of Bengasi, however, Rommel gave up the last supply port for his army until it reaches Tripoli, some 400 miles behind him along the coastal road. Working with increasing co-ordination with the British and American forces driving on Bengasi from Tunis from Algeria, the Middle East and Egypt, bombers from Malta began to blast the Axis airdromes in Sicily, from which Rommel's troops were presently reaching Tunisia.

Other bombers attacked Tripoli, Benghazi and Tunis, and one 2,000-ton vessel was left sinking after torpedo attack by bombers and torpedo aircraft, which set the ship on fire. A larger vessel was raked with cannon fire off Cape Bon, Tunisia, and two fighters reported were shot down in that vicinity.

RUSSIANS SHOW FRESH STRENGTH AT STALINGRAD

Enemy Dialodged From Strongly - Fortified Height Southeast Of Nalchik

MANY NAZIS KILLED

Moscow, Nov. 21. (AP)—Successfully storming heights at Stalingrad and in the Caucasus, the Russians were reported showing fresh strength today in their grim, hand-to-hand battle with the German invaders.

During the night the Red Army unit dislodged the enemy from a strongly-fortified height southeast of Malchik in the Caucasus and killed 300 Germans, the midnight communique said. In the Stalingrad sector to the northeast of Malchik associated press reports said the Russians were reported to have made small-scale attack such as the Germans had been using in its recent counter-offensive. Aggressive activity in which enemy trenches, dugouts and strong points were killed also was credited to the Stalingrad garrison.

The Russians struck out yesterday near the Volga stronghold, and in the bright and entrenched themselves there after hitting about 200 Germans and capturing 30 machine-guns, the midnight communique reported.

Repulse Invader Thrusts

Elsewhere in the siege-shattered city the Soviets repulsed invader thrusts and improved their own positions, front-line reports said.

On the central front west of Moscow, 620 German officers and men were killed in a day's fight, exchange of artillery, rifle and machine-gun fire, but no general engagement was reported here or elsewhere along the fighting front.

The midnight communique did not mention the Caucasus despite approaches deep in the Caucasus, but latest front-line dispatches yesterday indicated German reinforcements were pouring in, the withdrawals continuing of stores and the Georgian military highway and the Georgian railway being released.

Typical of the tactics which the Red Army is using to bleed the invaders white was the one which was reported in the midnight communique. In the Tuapse area, Caucasus, the Russians had to have filtered through enemy lines, set an ambush along a mountain road, wiped out an unsuspecting convoy after it had come within a few paces and then escaped unscathed.

New Military Dining Hall Feeds 7,000 Personnel in Twenty Minutes

By W. H. WATERSTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Nov. 21 (CP) — Ottawa's newest military dining hall is feeding 7,000 persons in twenty minutes. There is no meat shortage at Welch Hall, largest military dining hall in Canada, on the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition here. Its 5,300 pounds of beef a day go to feed the Hall's capacity of 7,000 men. The new mess was opened on Thursday.

Besides meat, a day's rations for the new dining hall include pounds of potatoes, 875 pounds of butter, 656 gallons of milk, 1,750 loaves of bread, 1,150 pies and 3,800 pounds of vegetables.

Not the greatest feature of the mess hall is the speed with which 7,000 men can be fed. It takes only 20 minutes to serve a complete meal to the full mess of 7,000.

"Of course, the men don't just struggle in," said Lieut. Arnold Hall, R.C.A.S.C., officer in charge of the mess. "Mess call is a parade. The men form up at their barracks and parade to the mess. They fall in around 5:30 p.m. and are dismissed and leave at 5:50."

Feeding is done with remarkable speed. The food is served "family style" as the army calls it. The men sit at tables of 10 with food in serving wagons. "This method saves at least an hour at every meal over the old cafeteria style of serving meals," Lieut. Arnold said. "The men like it better, too."

He said that under the old system the men had to carry their trays to and from a counter. "A man has only two hands." Lieut. Arnold said. "He can't carry a bowl of soup in one hand, a plate of stew in the other and a cup under his arm, but he usually was deposited on the gravy of his stew.

"Under the 'family style' he gets his meals one course at a time without waiting."

And in case there is an idea this system is expensive the cost of supplying food runs only ber cent per man a day.

"Great Numbers" Of Big Bombers Make Long Trip

Attacks Are Proving Economical Way To Tear at Industrial Vitals of Axis

3 BOMBERS MISSING

London, Nov. 21—(CP)— The special city of Turin was attacked last night by R.A.F. bombers in a raid which an authoritative British source termed the "heaviest yet made on Italy."

Of the scores of Stirlings, Halifaxes, Lancasters and Wellingtons dispatched to the mission, three are missing.

The others made the 1,900-mile round trip successfully in another of the mass attacks that are proving an economical way to tear at the industrial vitals of the Axis.

The first announcements of the foray did not indicate the size of the bombing force or the targets, but reports from the south coast said the "great numbers" of the big bombers droned south to seat in the night and their presumably was the industrial region of northern Italy.

It was the fourth raid on Italy in eight nights and the tenth, by my count, by day, since the latest and heaviest bomb offensive was set off Oct. 28 with a great scale lambasting of Genoa, key supply port for Axis forces in North Africa.

Objectives in this series have been on Genoa, Milan, Savona and Turin, the latest raid was on Wednesday night.

So far, the onslaught against Italy has been costing the R.A.F. only a fraction of the machines lost in similar heavy-duty raids on Germany. And the British observation has shown that Italy is very fully short of anti-aircraft guns and fighter planes.

The Air Ministry has announced that only 17 bombers have been lost in the eight night thrusts and one day sally from Oct. 28 through Nov. 1 and all patrolled Cloutier said Friday.

Judge Roger Ethed Fernande Plouffe of Montreal, $25 on a charge of transporting 10 pounds of cheese across the border without a permit, and an additional $25 on a charge of failing to official about the amount of money she had in her possession.

Evidence was that the woman had left 855 francs Cornwall, Ont., on the St. Regis Indian Reservation, by way of New York State, and on customs office she had no money.

PROBE IS BEGUN INTO COLLAPSE OF CONCRETE ROOF

300 Tons of Wet Concrete and Steel Collapsed to Ground

4 KILLED, 29 INJURED

Welland, Ont., Nov. 21 (CP) — Provincial Police under direction of the Attorney-General's department today probed a tumbled tangle of steel and concrete to determine the reason for the collapse yesterday of a building under construction at the Atlas Steels Company plant which caused four deaths and injury to 29 other workmen.

Dead:

Hormsdis Groulx, 5188 St. Henri St., Montreal.

Alex. Leadbetter, Welland.

George Bucher, 466 Salisbury St., London, Ont.

Richard Mawg, 32 VanAllen Ave., Toronto.

Previously listed as killed, Mike Pelinsky, of Welland, is still alive in hospital for treatment of fractures, coroner said although little hope was held for the recovery of John Dearga Rye, of Hamilton, Ont., tackle.

Hospital authorities and officials of the Pigott Construction Company said that other 25 were suffering from injuries.

"Roof Falls Like Ton of Bricks"

It was just before the ground floor when the roof fell like a ton of bricks, said Alfred Bucher, Fordham, a building foreman, who started for an hour to direct rescue tactics after suffering a jaw injury and shock.

Bucher said: "I started to help in the rescue work and was there when the dead and I'll a French Canadian" as he was carried out.

The dead and injured were removed in all available ambulances and private cars and when these were exhausted dump trucks were pressed into service. Doctors and nurses at the scene to give last rites to the dying.

No reason was given for the collapse which sent an estimated 300 tons of wet concrete and steel crashing to the ground.

Officials are warning and I stood there as though paralyzed," said Matthew Ballard, Montreal lackman.

Stage Concrete Slab

"The Department of Munitions and Supply will investigate," D. W. Buchanan, vice-president of Atlas Steel, as saying a concrete slab six inches thick, 70 feet wide and 6 feet long—poured yesterday — had caved in, crushing the men.

The slab that fell was said to form part of the roof of the building first added according to Pipe Fitter James Sabo of Welland, the whole construction started to dissolve."

H. Peterson, Famous Commentator, Predicts Victory by Next September

Famous for seven accurate predictions of major events in the present war, Henry Peterson, British giant commentator, who addressed a large audience in the Capitol Theatre evening made a still further prediction when he declared that this year is Victory," he said that in his opinion an opinion which was shared by many of the military and psychological factors in the world today, Peterson confidently predicted that victory would come in the months of 1942.

Opinions on "How Near is Victory" Peterson declared, could be made all the way from four months to that of an Australian Cabinet Minister's four years. Personally he felt that the truth lay nearer four months than four years. The latter opinion was based on the old myth of German invincibility. One has only to look at the map of Europe, 1942 and compare it with June 1940 and it is only too obvious that not only has Germany failed to win but that her defeat is very close.

Review Forces of Antagonists

Going back to the Armistice of 1918, Mr. Peterson reviewed the forces of the two sides till today. Japan, he declared, is not going to victory is. The three great democracies today, he declared, possess the disease of unreality between wars. They deceived themselves that right up to Munich and after Munich that German might was a myth. They failed to prepare for the second great war as they had failed to prepare for the first.

He told of conversations with a German staff officer on a mission to Rome, in which he said he might that Chamberlain and Daladier were signing the Munich pact. The reaction of the German Embassy in Rangkow as the Munich conference progressed, was typical of attitude when they thought there was going to be war and their sickliness when the pact was completed were not lost on Mr. Peterson.

Nazis Not Well Prepared

The German officer, in confidences that followed at the time Germany had only half a million first line troops, that their air equipment and only one and a half million tons of petrol and that they equipped men in the reserve army. If war came with Czechoslovakia about the middle of April. When the Sudetenland Russian winter offensive has gone on till April by which time I am certain that the Mediterranean will be cleared, Italy have taken Sicily, Sardinia, Crete, Corsica, Greece, Yugoslavia and a springboard to invade Italy, Southern France, coupled with invasion across the channel.

Men Will Play Part

Another factor of equal importance as equipment is morale and the British will have the advantage in having to have a mental combat with the Hun. When fully armed there will be no Dunkirk. Then when Russia advances there will be two Hitlers and not his friend Mr. Hitler will hit the floor.

"If these conditions I have made have any meaning it should mean that victory will be between next year."

The national characteristics of the Germans, bullies who can't take it, men who think intellect can solve all things and who have a false premise, Against this is the democracies with a free will and traditions. Being of free men, makes the United Nations the stronger nations. Compulsory discipline is all right for a short campaign but only voluntary discipline can endure a long war.

The bombing of Berlin, the realization by the German people that the English they thought conquered were landing in the Mediterranean with the American, the resurgent French, all these psychological factors were in the Allied favor. Add to these the initiative up the field of battle and on the field of battle the Russians can at last take advantage of German mistakes as they take the advantage of the weaknesses of democracies. Victory is as near as September, 1943.

Answers Questions

In response to questions after his address, Mr. Peterson said that the Japanese were now in the throes of their feudal system is so strong that servant will die with master will have to be invaded, chased from their islands and defeated. When there are fifty million less Germans and fifty million less Japs there will be peace. The placing of Darlan in charge of the African navy, he explored classing Darlan as one of the dirtiest characters this war has shown up" and said that the people of France chastened by their lot he a German occupied country are anxious to regain their honor.

The appreciation of the club was expressed by the president, Art Geen, who had introduced Mr. Peterson to the audience.

ONLY 2 FAMILIES ON RELIEF ROLE

Edmonton, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Edmonton's relief rolls have reached an all-time low with only two families totalling 10 persons now receiving unemployment relief from the city, Frank Drayton, relief supervisor said today. In 1936, the peak unemployment year, there were 12,000 persons on relief in Edmonton.

Experimenters in Eire have produced from 11 to 17 gallons of ethyl alcohol per ton from air dried autumn seaweed.

Seven Accurate Predictions By By Henry Peterson

The seven great events in the news predicted by Peterson in his address here last night were: the defeat of Rommel, the evacuation of Egypt, that the enemy would be confidently roamed the military situation to such an extent that his position would become untenable, the fall of Tripoli, the fall of Bengazi, the fall of Benghazi, the fall of Tobruk and the fall of Sidi Barrani. Peterson's speech was delivered on May 27, 1942, and his predictions, for instance, in March 28 and on April 5, 1942, that the Germans would attack Russia on the attack some on June 22. Only July 5 by a prediction of Peterson's was held not against Germany. He was closer to that guess, than Stalin did. On August 9 he wrote that Germany would attack the United States. This was held as the greatest of notions. It came true on Dec.

On Sept. 12 he said that China would be saved from defeat by the valuable ally. Later he became interested at Japanese victory. On April 5 he said that the movements of Japan were toward the Indian Ocean. Peterson repeated this warning in June and two months later, Japan struck at Midway. The attack was repulsed and Peterson's claim that Japan interpreted Stalin's technique as a trap with the Caucasus as a bait was on July 5 when Peterson was advancing he alone stated that Russia was not defeated. Stalin repaid bet would be completely realized.

No Further Warnings To Be Issued By Police Dep't

"There will be no further warnings given cyclists found in the violation of city traffic regulations," simply because the Police Department has found it to be necessary to issue warnings to young youths," stated Police Chief G. W. Probert here today following a checking up on boys and girls riding bicycles on sidewalks and driving motor vehicles through the Campbell Street stop sign.

"On Friday constables stationed near the footbridge took the names of fifteen boys and girls observed riding their bicycles over the footbridge, thus violating traffic regulations. Then at the intersection of Pinnacle and Campbell Streets additional names were added to the list. Many of these youths, stated Chief Probert, "are old enough to know that warnings to such offenders are disregarded so in the future police court charges will be preferred against all persons found in violation of city traffic ordinances," Chief Probert added.

PLANES REPLACED HUGE BOMBS WITH DEPTH CHARGES

Turned to Submarine Hunting to Aid in Bringing Greater Armada to North Africa

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 21 (CP)—Canada—A couple of young Canadians told Friday how their Halifax bombers replaced their "block busting" bombs with depth charges and turned to submarine hunting to aid in assuring that the greatest armada in history arrived at North Africa.

It was the first news that Halifaxes had been used for such duties since the two Canadian pilot officer Bert Stead of (1,059 Chatham Street East) Windsor, Ont., and Sgt. Mac Neilly of Montreal, said that "they are marvellous aircraft for the job."

An R.C.A.F. unit commanded by Wing Cmdr. Len Trigger of Vancouver and with other bomber command units and squadrons of the United Nations' air forces now are "loaned" to the coastal command for the duration of emergency of the war, just as the bomber command borrowed planes from the coastal command for the four-engine raids on Cologne and Essen last summer.

Flay Mighty Fort

Long-range Liberators, Libertors and Sunderland flying boats were also sent the fleet of bombers but ports was handed over to the protection of aircraft based on Gibraltar. These Hudsons played a mighty part in hunting down packs of U-boats which were concentrated in the vicinity of Gibraltar in record strength and several submarines were sunk.

"It was easy, compared with bombing Germany," said Hardy, a navigator formerly of Lethbridge, Alta. "We just settled to the convoy, circled around for a while, then headed for home. We saw no sign of the enemy."

Reilly—Flying low through fog to find the convoy.

Visiting the Sunderland squadron that acts as protection of the long lines of ships the two R.C.A.F. officers hunged in the mess in battledress and told how they, along with the rest of their squadron celebrated the arrival of the convoy by scoring a "near miss" with depth charges on a German submerged.

Shake Up Nazi Sweepers

Other members of their crew included Sgts. George McCallum of Truro, N.S., and Ken Collogy of Prohibter, Sask.

"We sweep up that minesweeper something fierce said Reilley, who acts as bomb-aimer. "It was a set of 500 to 1,000 tons and she did not reply to our fire, even after our cannon raked her decks with machine-gun bullets.

Hardy said another Halifax attacked by Fw 200, Luftwaffe Condor with a Nazi submarine and two protecting vessels. It dropped depth charges and recorded a "near miss."

"That's about all there was to it," grinned Bert, lacing up his flying boots to hide the fact he was not wearing any socks. "This sea air makes me hungry. I'm going to eat. You can say we'll all be glad to get back to bossing the happy valley of the Ruhr, and also Italy."

Newspaperman Honored

The many friends of Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard, will approve his appointment to the Senate as announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King on Thursday night. Not only does the appointment bring honor to Mr. Davies himself but also to the "Fourth Estate" itself of which he has been such a prominent member for many years.

Senator Davies is one of the outstanding examples in Canada of a "self-made man." He came to this country from Wales as a lad of fifteen years and at a youthful age chose the printing trade as his life work. He started out in a small way as publisher and editor of a weekly at Thamesville, Ontario, having previously served his apprenticeship on the Brantford Expositor and had also worked as a journeyman printer in Toronto and New York. After a year or so at Thamesville he purchased the Herald and several years later disposed of this paper to buy a larger weekly at Renfrew which he published until 1925 when he bought the Daily British Whig at Kingston which was merged with the Daily Standard the next year. When his partner, Mr. H. B. Muir, died in 1939 he took over Muir estate interests in the Whig-Standard and the Peterborough Examiner. The latter newspaper had been acquired by the partners a few years previously from Mr. R. Glover who retired from active business life.

Senator Davies has also taken an active interest in the work of The Canadian Press having served on the directorate for several years and as president for two years.

The new member of the Senate will bring to that body a well-trained mind attuned to the pulse of our country's needs. Having been in a position for many years to observe and size-up the trend of national life in Canada we feel that he will serve his country well and faithfully.

For our part we have found Senator Davies a friendly neighbor at all times willing to co-operate on any matter pertaining to the welfare of newspapers published in adjoining cities. Along with a host of others we extend our congratulations to Senator Davies on his appointment

Mr. Churchill's Tribute

Prime Minister Churchill's tribute to Canada is one which should make this country proud and at the same time spur it on to the greatest effort. He was congratulating the Dominion's fine response to the Third Victory Loan and this paragraph was in his message:

"Hitler has good reason to know the might of Canada's armed forces, of her ships and planes and weapons of war. Her sailors, soldiers and airmen have answered every call in all parts of the world. Her workers in shipyards and munition factories have delivered and are delivering of their full measure.

"Meanwhile from coasts, prairies, forests and rivers come many resources on which the United Nations depend in their battle for freedom."

Mr. Churchill gives Canada an honored place on her participation in the war when he said "Canada's unbending will to share to the full the burden and sacrifices of the war is manifest. She has accepted the challenge which threatens all freedom-loving peoples alike and her people have given proof of their readiness to make every contribution to victory which victory demands."

These words coming from the British Premier when the war is well on into its fourth year mean a great deal. They encourage the people and make them tighten even more their effort. Mr. Churchill led Britain through the Battle of Britain and through many trials from May 1940 and has seen the power of the forces of freedom grow more and more until the impressive strength seen today has been attained. The Dominion, like the other British Dominions and Colonies, has stood with Britain from the earliest days in this struggle.

MY BLESSING

Take this my blood — drawn fresh and red
Its warm rich tide I gladly share
With someone half a world away
Whose blood was spilled for me . . . somewhere.

Take this my strength — this precious store
Drawn from my heart, I gladly give,
That someone needing it somewhere
May use its vital strength . . . and live.

THAT MOSQUITO AGAIN

dear boss:—

a few weeks before I was born my mother was frightened by a cative sardine. That is the reason I have been scared of cats and dogs since I first fluttered into life in the jungles of Zwick's Island.

I hear from a friend of mine who is in the mosquito bomber corps that you were frightened by a dog the other night while doing a Napoleon at the head of the 34th Battery.

According to the story, you stood there like a statue of liberty without the torch waiting for the commando spirit to move you, when the big pooch galloped into the armouries and nipped you on the hand. It didn't bother you, I'm told, so he nipped you again. You might have been the figurehead on the prow of a 1758 frigate for all the emotion you showed and that irked the bone-eater. So he gave you a real bite, one that punctured your glove — and also your temper.

So, boss, you slapped him, playfully perhaps, but not in dog language. So, I am told, he faded back to the fifteen-yard line and plunged through for a touchdown on the seat of your britches. They tell me the big pooch really sank his teeth into the south side of your lap, which caused an expression to come over your face like that of a boy who has reached into the cookie jar and came out with a mousetrap.

I know you like dogs, boss, but for the luvamike always wash your hands after eating raw hamburg. The pooches have a yen for that, and you can't blame 'em if they mistake you for a pound of the real McCoy. Hamburg is hamburg to a canine, even if it dressed up in an army uniform.

But there's one consolation. You've got a real answer at last for the boys when they ask you if you have anything on the hip. If you're playing bridge in mixed company some night, you might even wangle it as an operation.

yours truly,
winnie, the office mosquito.

P.S.: Oh, boss. I forgot to tell you. I heard today that the dog died the next morning. W.

FIND AN ANSWER TO THIS ONE

One of the most frequent recurring letters answered by our consumer correspondence department, says the W.P.T.B., Consumer News, is that from the rural housewife who complains that she is being discriminated against because she needs more sugar than her urban sister for the purpose of home baking. Here is the problem as we see it, and we cordially invite readers to think up a practical solution whereby this imagined discrimination can be removed:—

There are many people who must of necessity do all their own baking, and there are many people who do practically none of their own baking. But there are also many families why buy some of their bakery requirements and make the rest. There are in Canada many homes that could be classed as rural homes and many that could be classed as city homes. But there are thousands that come half way between those two categories. Still further to complicate matters, there are plenty of homes in cities where home baking is done because they cannot afford to buy bakery products, and if extra allowances were given to rural homes for this purpose these city households would feel unjustly treated.

These are a few of the points which would make any scheme for differential rationing extremely difficult. Perhaps the best solution is to accept the fact that wartime restrictions are going to be felt by everybody in different degrees, at different times, and for different reasons. Though the rural housewife might welcome the convenience of a bakery round the corner, the city housewife would often like to exchange it for a patch of ground where she could grow her own vegetables.

show that winter's coming on,
When the last brave leaves have fallen, comes that extra touch sublime
As a short farewell gesture known as Indian Summer time.

It's as though the good Lord planned it as a favor for us all,
That we might have something lovely through the winter to recall,
A little added rapture for our memories to hold
When the storms descend upon us and the winds are bitter cold.

Or again it seems that autumn still had something left to spare,
A few more bits of beauty which it wanted us to share;
A few more days of glory which it wanted us to know,
And had hastened back to give them before winter brings the snow.

With the Fleet Air Arm in Action

By LIEUT. W. T. E. WHITE, R.N.V.R.
(Overseas Press Service)

My action station is down below, just above the waterline, actually in the lower hangar of an aircraft carrier. And when one is down there—it is like being in a big box, because all the access doors are shut, and so too are the big doors leading to the lift.

I am in charge of the hangar whilst the ship is in action. Try and visualise up to twenty aircraft loaded up with their war loads, lashed to the deck in orderly rows—fire curtains dividing the hangar into three sections partly lowered—the whole scene being illuminated by powerful electric lights slung from the roof—all round the hangar men are posted at the various fire fighting appliances—other men are stationed at the emergency petrol shut-off cocks—in each access lobby to the hangar are more men whose duty it is to sound the fire alarm, start the hangar sprays and drop the fire curtains, should such action be necessary. We are in contact with the rest of the ship by telephone, and I also have a runner or messenger, whose duty it is to take messages from me to the fire parties, the commander, or any of the other various sections to whom I might apply for help, should something happen in the hangar which is beyond my capabilities to control.

Cannot See Action.

We in the hangar cannot see what is going on. We have no idea of relative movement of the ship, or the disposition of the fleet, or the enemy we are engaging—the only sound which comes down to us is the muffled explosions from our own guns, and the bombs and shells from the enemy. We can, however, tell when there are violent alterations of course at high speed, because the aircraft strain at their lashings, as if they were alive, and the lamps overhead swing with the motion of the ship.

High in the deck overhead are two loudspeakers and from time to time we hear orders being passed by the ship's main transmitting station, and occasionally when there is a lull in the action an officer is detailed off to broadcast what has happened in the last engagement. That is the scene and the act follows.

Let us imagine that we are steaming along and all hands are engaged in these various routine duties—it is getting on towards dusk, and then we hear the drummer sound of action stations over the broadcast system. Perhaps some of us are taking a walk on the flight deck. For a split second all motion is arrested—like a scene from still life—and then, there is a mad scramble down the access hatches to action stations. There is a great surging in the corridors as people stream to and from getting to their appointed places—each wearing tin hat, life belt and sometimes carrying emergency rations. There has been so much rush and bustle that I have not had time to think as yet. The thought uppermost in my mind is to get to the hangar as soon as possible, and to be able to report all correct in the lower hangar.

Access Doors Closed.

As soon as everybody in the lower hangar is at their action stations, all the access doors are shut—the fire curtains are partly lowered, and my regulating petty officer and the fire fighting officer go round the various positions such as access lobbies and various fire fighting positions in the hangar. And when they have seen that all is ready they report to me, and then comes the waiting.

It is strange the thoughts that pass through one's mind during this period of waiting, prior to engaging the enemy. My first thoughts are of my wife and home, but it doesn't do to dwell too long on that line of thought. One is apt to become morbid and even more frightened than one normally is under such conditions, and so I try and apply myself to thoughts of what I would do under this or that emergency. All the time though one is listening for the opening bursts of gunfire, and then the broadcaster breaks in on one's meditations and an announcement like this follows: "Large formation of enemy aircraft approaching from the eastward". And then "click" as the loudspeaker is turned off, and all is once more silent. We do not talk very much, and if we do, we talk in undertones—then perhaps a further announcement—"close all ventilation"—this takes a few minutes, and then we settle down again to another period of inactivity. Round the hangar bulkheads now the men are trying to make themselves comfortable—some endeavor to sleep—to read—to play cards—some just sit and whisper or talk. There is nothing I can do but wait—wait for what? We don't know—we can guess. We can't see the aircraft approaching us—then the broadcaster again. What is it this time? "Stand by to fly off fighters!" And "click", off goes the loudspeaker again. And for a second—silence is unbroken, and then everybody comes to life in the hangar—all talk and conjecture—then we feel the ship slewing round into wind, and from far away we hear the roar of the aircraft engines as they run up and take off. We feel the ship turning back into her original course—and again there is silence. I'm feeling a little jumpy now but I mustn't show it, and so I curb my desire to walk up and down in the small space available, and I lean nonchalantly against the wing of an aircraft and idly turn the leaves of a book—one ear straining to catch the sounds strong enough to penetrate into our box of steel.

Joined Action.

After what seems an age—we hear a dull boom—followed by others in rapid succession. The ship shudders slightly and we know we have joined action. Everybody is now alert. Some take a last look at their fire fighting equipment; others finger their life saving jackets, and thank God for the ones who wisecrack. We know what we have to do now that the awful period of waiting is over. Boom, boom, boom, go the guns and then silence.

The aircraft strain at their lashing and the lamps swing as the ship makes a violent turn as we hear the bombs explode. Then silence. The ship steadies, and then it starts all over again.

What are our thoughts in these few moments when we know that the enemy is overhead and aiming to hit us? Fear still lurks, but there is an overwhelming desire to rush up on deck and see what is taking place and to take some active part in the action, not merely a passive one. Then we return to normal. We all know that even the most humble sailor has his part to play, and we try and relax again. So the action continues, and then silence once more, until the broadcaster shatters it. "Open all ventilation," and the air which we have been breathing, consisting to a large extent of petrol fumes, smell of aircraft oil, is gradually displaced by fresh air. Then more waiting—then again the broadcaster, "We have been engaged by aircraft. So many have been shot down by guns and fighters and the action is now over."

Then shortly after, "Stand by to land on aircraft". The ship heels gently as she points up wind—we hear the whirr of the arrester wires, as the aircraft land on, and then the drummer sounds "CARRY ON". Fire fighting equipment is re-stowed—the doors are opened and we all stream out—the officers to the wardroom and the men to the mess decks.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Public opinion, as reflected in some quarters, is fickle, indeed.

A fortnight ago, Secretary of State Cordell Hull and his senior departmental officers were under fire from any quarters for continuing to maintain diplomatic relations with Vichy. He and they were called appeasers, dreamy-eyed old fogies, perhaps with a touch of the fascist in their makeup.

But today it is all different. Most of the critics, their opinions swinging like a weathervane, are lauding Hull to the skies. They now say that he made possible — certainly minimised the loss of life — the landings in French North Africa. The secretary is being painted as shrewd and calculating and as the architect of one of the most successful Trojan-horse schemes in recent diplomatic history.

The popular question now is: where would Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark and his secret mission of men and gold be today if American agents had not been working quietly behind the scenes in North Africa for the last six or nine months?

Or another version how many lives would it have cost to break diplomatic relations with Vichy two, four or six months ago, with the North African campaign planned and in motion?

Border Troubles

The following incidents were among the reasons why President Roosevelt recently asked congress to give him full, unlimited powers to make effective the "free movement of persons, property and information into and out of the United States."

An officer of a Canadian Aircraft Company, working on an American contract, was held up 24 hours at the border when he tried to return to Canada with the detailed, technial plans for a rush job. United States customs officials, alarmed at his array of plans and blueprints, held him up for examination and finally made him register for the United States draft.

As far as the blueprints were concerned, he gave the inspectors all the time they wanted because he knew they couldn't be sure whether they were looking at plans for a battleship, a house or an airplane. He finally got across the border but Hitler gained one more day.

A Canadian chemist was summoned to the United States to find out why the retorts in a big new plant in the south were not burning properly. First of all, there was delay getting him across the border and then, as an Alien, he was forbidden by war department regulations from entering the plant although it was built especially to handle war department orders and he was the only man who could find out what was wrong.

For two full days he poked his nose through the big steel fence surrounding the plant while he tried a long-range diagnosis of the baulky retorts. Finally, he was permitted to enter the plant—but a soldier with a loaded gun followed him wherever he went.

Deserters Make Merry

It is estimated here there are 150 to 200 deserters from the Canadian army and air force living in the United States, some of whom have a high old time posing as veterans of fighting in every part of the globe and lecturing to small-town audiences. Sooner or later, they are going to be caught but, in the meantime, many of them leave a trail of bad cheques up and down the land.

Most of the deserters are described as Americans who enlisted in the Canadian forces. Some are Britons and only a mere handful are Canadian. Strange as it may seem, desertion is not an extraditable offence between Canada and the United States.

One man recently was tripped up by the censors. He gave a New England newspaper a bang-up interview of his experiences as a prisoner of war, his escape, recapture and finally, exchange. Before printing it, the paper submitted it to censorship and a few inquiries disclosed the man was listed as a deserter. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was tipped off but they missed him that time.

Notes That Make News

Every pay day, 2,000,000 soldiers of the United States Army buy $13,000,000 in war bonds . . . American troops on Kodiak Islands in Alaska were hot and bothered about the edict of the fish and wildlife service of the Interior Department that they must take out a $50 non-residents' licence before hunting bear and moose. What prompted the ruling was fear the Kodiak bear, the largest of the species, might be exterminated. The soldiers griped because resident civilians get a licence for $1. A congressional committee took action this week and put the soldiers on the same basis as civilians.

Herodotus, who lived in the fifth century B.C., is known as "The Father of History," yet he quoted Hecataeus and other historians who lived and wrote long before his own time.

Britain is increasing the production of tin in the Cornwall mines, which have been producing this metal for more than a thousand years. Herodotus said the Greeks of his day received tin from the Cassiterides, which is Greek for "Tin Islands," and some authorities believe the Tin Islands were the British Isles.

The Owen Stanley Mountains, in New Guinea, were named in 1850 by Thomas H. Huxley after Captain Owen Stanley of H.M.S. Rattlesnake. When the English biologist was in his twenties he accompanied Captain Stanley as ship's surgeon and naturalist on a surveying expedition in the Pacific. The Rattlesnake was ordered back to England after Captain Stanley died at Sidney, Australia.

"What the Sam Hill!" Robert Ripley, believe it or not, recently said: "Sam Hill, of Houghton, Michigan (1889), became so famous for swearing a blue streak that the public began to substitute the name 'Sam Hill' for any cuss word in general." That is a poor attempt at explaining the origin of Sam Hill as a euphemism for the devil. In his American Glossary Richard H. Thornton gives two examples of the use of "Sam Hill" that disprove Ripley's theory. One is from "Major Jack on a Whaler," published in the Havana (N.Y.) Republican, Aug. 21, 1839: "What in sam hill is that feller bawlin' about?" The other is dated 1868 and was quoted in "Following the Guidon," from a Leavenworth (Kansas) newspaper: "He had bought him a little bob-tailed, mouse-colored mule, and was training him like Sam Hill." There is every reason to suppose that "Sam Hill" was a common term long before the date of these quotations.

It is estimated that the French artist Paul Gustave Dore made more than 100,000 sketches, an average of six a day during the fifty years he lived.

Greatest Air Campaign Of War in Making

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The cry of a Rome broadcaster that "Italy's hour has come," finds its own echo in Berlin's announcement of the Axis evacuation of Bengazi.

With the fall of that town, an Axis grip on the south shore of the Mediterranean, that once reached from Tunisia to within eighty miles of Alexandria, a crow-flight span of nearly 1,200 miles, has been shriveled to a meagre 600-mile long coastal corridor. Allied power in apparently overwhelming force is closing in for the kill. By air, land and sea the net is swiftly tightening. Decisive results that seem destined to leave not Italy alone, but the whole Axis Mediterranean flank from the Pyrenees to Turkey, exposed to attack cannot be long delayed.

The abandonment of Bengazi was obviously a desperate attempt to escape the British trap squeezing upon it before it was too late. Whether it has succeeded, or another substantial segment of Rommel's shattered army has been destroyed remains to be disclosed.

Already on Coast.

British forces were already on the sea coast south of Bengazi barring the only escape route. They stood between the Axis rearguard fleeing Bengazi and the El Agheila bottleneck at the depths of the Gulf of Sirte that offers the foe his only hope of halting the eastern jaw of the vast Allied nut-cracker.

Just how close the southern spearhead of the Anglo-American army in Tunisia may be is uncertain. A clash between Free French and Axis forces at Gabes, 100 miles from the Tripolitania-Tunisian border and less than 300 miles from Tripoli, is reported. That Tunisian port would be on General Eisenhower's shortest line of advance to cut Rommel's communications behind him and catch him in the closing Allied vise. Once Eisenhower's speeding forward elements reach it, they should be in Tripolitania at Rommel's back within days or even hours.

There has been no further word of the fighting French reported moving up from Lake Chad to complete the circle hemming the Axis forces in against the sea. The long desert distances the French must travel to reach the scene in time are a formidable obstacle. By airline they are about 1,000 miles away, but the circuitous road route they must follow is nearer 2,000.

There are no authentic estimates of either the size of the fighting French force gathered in the Lake Chad area, or of its equipment. Its importance in the Allied strategic battle design so swiftly unfolding on the dark continent cannot be gauged, but it seems probable that Anglo-American plans were laid without reference to it because of its remoteness from the scene of action.

Air Battle First.

There are American forces in many parts of equatorial Africa. Their exact whereabouts and functions are military secrets still; but by every sign they are busy with establishing and maintaining airways and other communications across Africa for the combat armies surging in from East and West to clear the Mediterranean Coast of the foe and pave the way for ultimate invasion of the European continent.

Only technical troops have been mentioned as yet in South-Central Africa. Whether re-equipment of fighting French forces with weapons and fast-moving auto transport and tanks was included in their task has not been indicated. Obviously the giant American bombers reaching African action fronts by that ferry route are more urgently needed in Tunisia and Western Libya than elsewhere.

Sound reasons underscore the predictions of military observers on both sides of the Atlantic that the first crux of the final battle in Africa will be in the air. Air power offers Hitler his only hope of delaying, let alone halting, the impending complete destruction of his African army.

"Events may be moving (in the Mediterranean) towards what may soon develop into the greatest air campaign yet fought in this war," General Sewell, commentator of the British information service, observes. "The best hope the Germans have for their troops in Tunisia and Tripolitania is by reinforcement and support from the air. We know the Luftwaffe is being concentrated in the Mediterranean area, and in Sicily they have many well-organized airfields."

"My ship is up on the slip being repainted, so I'm enjoying a couple of free days. I almost got hurt the other night. I was up in Colchester dining with some friends of mine who live in a large old house converted into flats. We were listening to the nine o'clock news broadcast when the alert was sounded. A few minutes later an enemy bomber came down low and dropped four incendiaries and one high explosive. The H. E. landed in the garden about ten feet from the opposite corner of the house and immediately half the house collapsed in the bedrooms of the flats on the other side—as it was early evening no one had turned in so there were no casualties. I helped to put out one incendiary that fell in the hedge beside the car. Most windows in the house were blown in, but the flat I was visiting in suffered no damage whatever. Lucky, eh!

GRIP ON ISLAND

Peterkin was ground officer for a carrier torpedo squadron which participated in the Midway battle that struck the Japanese carriers in June. Slaughter of 1,000 Japanese in one sector of the island on one night, he said, was not unusual.

In the absence of more important nearby targets, army bombers from the Guadalcanal airport attacked cargo vessels in the Buin area at the southeastern end of Bougainville Island, Nov. 18, the Navy announced, and shot down 14 enemy planes during the attack.

Describing the killing or routing of 1,500 Japanese on the island as "very significant," Knox told a press conference that the Americans now outnumber the enemy on Guadalcanal.

He announced that two American battleships had participated in last Saturday night's battle in which three large Japanese cruisers, a destroyer and either a battleship or heavy cruiser were sunk.

Mr. Morley Sine presided as chairman for the evening and the program opened with community singing under the able leadership of Mr. Wickson and Miss Allison Vanderwater presiding at the piano. Mrs. T. Tucker, elocutionist, offered two splendid numbers, that were enthusiastically received and other contributions of wit and humor and serious selections from the works of Edgar Guest were made by Arthur Duncan of Stirling, who contributed two groups of selections.

Mr. B. O. Lott, veteran Liberal of the district, and President of the West Hastings Liberal Association extended greetings to the group on behalf of the central governing body and in a brief address surveyed the activity of the Provincial government since elected to power. No government has done more to lift the burden of taxation he declared.

The main speaker of the evening, Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, former Minister of Health for the Province of Ontario, was capably introduced to those present by Col. Roscoe Vanderwater. Expressing gratitude and pride in being invited to attend the function, Dr. Faulkner stated: "One called away from his own home county by duty cannot help but have a justified pride in its achievements particularly in its present war effort. From the shores of this land to those of the Mother Country one of the first regiments to set foot on English soil in the present conflict was the Hastings and Prince Edward County Regiment. The first award of the Victoria Cross in the present conflict was made to the husband of a Belleville girl. Only recently the sad word was received of the loss of George Pepper, brilliant night fighter of the R.A.F. with eighteen enemy planes to his credit. And a few days ago a lady of Sidney Township had brought honor to her community in being chosen for the highest available office in the Ontario Women's Institute. In the two recent war loan drives Hastings County had gone all out for action and well over the top. These things are merely a portrayal of things worthwhile in the lives of people of this area, a display of faith in things righteous," said the speaker. "People that will hold steadfastly to the cause of justice. It is my own belief that the British Empire is represented by the dwellers of lowly cottages in out-of-the-way places, monsions and castles, the heartbeat of these people is the heartbeat of the Empire". Our present aim should be toward a greater unity of purpose among all Allied nations, greater tolerance toward those who offer what sometimes seems criticism that is not based on true knowledge of the facts. We must preserve that faith in our leaders that has carried us into the best mode of life in the world. We shall profit by the mistakes of the past as we strive in the present to make the future more wholesome, secure and higher in living standard in the days that follow this struggle."

"GREAT NUMBERS"

ing planes returned from four of these raids.

Civilian Morale Shaken

Observers say this scant month of heavy raids already has shaken civilian morale badly in northern Italy as well as smashing many war industries and dock facilities and disrupting communications.

The London Daily Sketch has reported that Gen. Riedel, anti-aircraft defence chief for Germany is being sent to Italy at the request of Mussolini to reorganize Italian defences against British raids.

The writer of this newspaper's "inside information" column commenting on the effect of the raids added:

"The whole country is apprehensive about the future.

"Three names are already being quoted as Mussolini's successor — (Count Dino) Grandi, (Count Galeazzo) Ciano and (Roberto) Farinacci.

"Italian Liberals at a secret meeting decided to give all help to anyone leading a revolt against Fascism."

Last night's raid followed up day fighter sweeps over France and the Low Countries in which R.A.F. fliers attacked locomotives, canal barges and other ground targets.

A terse communique said:—

"The attack was heavy and concentrated but dense smoke from many fires made observation of the results difficult."

Clear weather gave the targets sharp outlines, however, and an Italian communique itself said the R.A.F., attacking in waves, "dropped incendiary bombs in great quantities, mainly in the central district of the town."

The Italians said the aircraft inflicted damage and spread fires, and listed casualties at 29 dead and 120 wounded.

AXIS ARMY

Pressed into a narrow coastal stretch only 30 miles wide at some points between the important French Naval base of Bizerte and Tunis, capital of Tunisia, the Germans were being pounded from the air by Allied bombers as the bitter struggle on the ground unfolded.

Hitler was reported sending a stream of reinforcements into this fading foothold in North Africa. The Allied troops were reported within 30 miles of both cities and one vanguard was placed even closer, 25 miles southeast of Tunis.

A spokesman at Allied headquarters said "it is certain that the struggle for control of Tunisia is growing in intensity".

Allies Reinforced

The Algiers radio reported early today that "Allied armored troops are pouring across the Tunisian border. . . ."

"Allied parachutists", the announcer said, "are proceeding eastward without making contact with the enemy".

Several bombs were dropped in Algiers last night and caused "some damage", the Radio report said. The alert lasted 80 minutes. Bone, an Algerian City near the Tunisian border, had three alarms Friday, it was reported.

A French headquarters communique broadcast by the Morocco radio said it was "a calm day".

Nine Axis Planes Downed

From Axis-held airfields in the coastal strip, German planes went up to challenge the advancing Allied troops and they were engaged by Allied fighters in furious air battles. Nine Axis planes were shot down by the R.A.F. in a day.

Pressure on shattered remnants of the Axis North African armies was reported increasing from three sides.

The British 8th army in triumphant but careful pursuit of Field Marshall Rommel's broken Africa Corps, was approaching the marshy bottleneck at El Aghella in Libya where the Germans are expected to make a stand. Rommel already has abandoned Bengasi and there is a forbidding 400-mile stretch of Libyan sand to Tripoli, main Libyan base of the Axis. The Algiers radio reported that Fighting French forces were striking northward toward Tripoli from the Lake Chad region, 1,000 miles to the south. There is no seaport worthy of the name between Bengasi and Tripoli through which Rommel might receive supplies and reinforcements.

Trying to Trap Rommel

The objective of such a northward march by the Fighting French would be to trap the retreating remnants of Rommel's army somewhere between El Aghella and Tripoli.

An Allied force from Algiers was believed cutting eastward across central Tunisia toward Gabes and the coastal road to Tripoli, 80 miles beyond the Tunisian border.

Dispatches from Allied headquarters is the Germans had taken Gabes, but that French Tunisian troops were in action in an effort to prevent the Nazis from establishing communications with Tripoli.

Earlier the radio at Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa, reported that "all Tunisian territory with the exception of the Tunis-Bizerte stretch now is in the hands of the Allies."

New French recruits for the growing Allied army in Algeria and Tunisia were expected, fighting French quarters here said. Some 10,000 French soldiers loyal to the Allied cause are expected to be released under an amnesty order from concentration camps where they have been held on orders from Vichy, it was said.

Attempt Squeeze Move

If the French Colonial troops can hold the coastal road southeast of Gabes until British and United States forces reach them, the Axis armies will be split into Tunisian and Libyan Forces and Rommel's position will be even more precarious.

The German radio asserted that Nazi Forces in Tunisia are being reinforced rapidly and Axis planes are dive-bombing Allied troops. German military quarters were quoted as saying that "operations in this war theatre will be limited mainly to fighting in the coastal areas and for naval bases".

The Morocco radio at Rabat said these German reinforcements included tanks transported by air.

Allied forces already have encountered these German tanks on the road to Bizerte. Eleven tanks and six other armored vehicles were destroyed in the opening clashes and "heavy casualties" were inflicted on the German troops, an Allied headquarters spokesman said. Allied casualties were reported as "minor".

One column of the 8th army was reported within eighty miles of El Aghella. Other British forces are approaching Bengasi along the coastal road and its damaged and abandoned port facilities are expected to be in British hands again soon.

Y.M.C.A. War Services

Tonight's dance in the gym. will start about 8 p.m. and the hostesses are requested to be on hand by 8.15 p.m. It is hoped sufficient numbers of hostesses will attend to make possible a second party in the lounge, if needed.

This Sunday the Y.M.C.A. officially starts its well known 'Open House' program which provides organized entertainment for all members of the services, including the Women's Division, from two o'clock in the afternoon until 10 p.m. including free supper and evening concert. As in the past, we will be seeking the support of all local groups interested n serving the members of the forces, and would be glad to hear from them re sponsoring one or more of these programs. With the attendance of members of the Women's Division from Trenton and Mountain View stations there should not be need of as many civilian lady partners as last year, nevertheless our senior hostesses will be inviting a number of girls for this Sunday who are able to enter into the different games scheduled.

There will be the usual list of events at the Red Triangle Club every night of the week, including dancing class, Monday and motion picture on Tuesday at 8 p.m.

An outstanding event of last week was the open invitation of the Belleville Community Concert Association to servicemen and women in this district to attend the series of concerts sponsored by them this winter. Many of the 100 who attended the first concert have expressed the highest appreciation of this privilege and on their behalf we thank the association very much.

The Young's People's Society of Christ Church provided an excellent evening for 22 men of the forces this week and we hope to receive similar requests to provide a group like this from other church organizations each week.

We received a number of outstanding magazines from several people this week and were able to distribute some 500 to adjoining stations.

We would particularly like to hear from local citizens willing to look after one or two chaps for overnight some time this week.

The Y this week received a very fine plant from a local lady to brighten up our lounge. Many thanks.

Election results held earlier this week for the various offices in the Boys' Athletic Society resulted as follows: (N. B. By previous agreement the candidate defeated for the presidency automatically became vice-president) — Honorary President, Mr. B. F. Turner (Asst.); President, Stanley Wiggins; Vice-President, Jerry Hyde; Sec.-Treas. Bruce Bishop; Advisory Board, (alphabetically), Ralph Bateman, Donald Burgess, Carne Bray, Rance Bush, Douglas Cook, Kathry Denton, John Locke.

It should be noted that among those present at the nominations a week ago the unanimous choice for president was John Locke.

However, Johnnie declined the honor, feeling that he had sufficient student work and extra curricular activities to occupy his time at present without taking on extra responsibility. However, he did consent to be on the Advisory Board. "After all," sense, "If I'm president this year, it's very likely I'd be back at B.C.I. next year, and I don't want to monopolize the job." The voting for president by the forms involved was as follows:

Attention To Wearing Apparel Pays Dividends In Long Life

Longer wear and reduction of cleaning bills, in addition to a more perfectly groomed appearance all the time, repays the wearer for small everyday attention to watching spots and accessories.

Put on coats and top coats carefully and when in the car, on the shoulders before buttoning. Don't strain seams over overfull pockets.

A little care saves frequent pressing. Hang up garments; use correct placed on hangers, never, never on hooks. Good hangers keep their shape; the cheaper wire hangers for men's coats, covered hangers for women's, and trousers by bottom of skirts by waistbands.

Brushing, pull, and airing on hangers before putting clothes in their closets will freshen them and help remove grease. Brush inside seams and pockets frequently, brushing the lint right out, treating other lintfed garments should't be hung, but shaken out and aired after wearing, then carefully folded and placed in one's "shelf" or in drawer.

Wool spots in clothing and stockings should be re-inforced before the threads ligask, and rips, tears and holes mended as soon as they appear. Small breaks or worn places in woolens can be re-woven and the threads ravelled from inside seams. Large holes or torns should be sewn by experts.

To get spots out of woolens first try soaking with cold water. If it's grease lay it face down on an absorbent pad and sponge the back with cleaning fluid. Sponge towards centre of spot and keep moving it along on pad until grease is gone.

Steam press suits or well-padded board using heavy press cloth. Press on wrong side. Don't run. Lift press cloth and pat out steam. Don't iron shiny dry. Beware of too hot iron, especially if fabric contains rayon threads, as heat spoils it.

It's a lucky suit that gets a rest every other day. The man who can afford to buy two suits for each season will find it an economy in the long run. Both will give longer wear by interchanging daily.

Fasteners and hooks and eyes are neatest when sewn on with buttonhole stitch, to hold them firmly in place. Re-inforce buttons with a small cross of the underside of the material.

Raincoats and rubbers can be repaired with adhesive tape.

Shoes last much longer if two or more pairs are available which can be worn on alternate days in order to rest them. Polish improves appearance and keeps leather soft. Rundown heels are not only unsightly but twist the shoe out of shape and shorten their life. Shoe trees that are the correct size should be placed in the shoes each time they are taken off.

Hats should be well brushed after each wearing and kept—on stands where they will not collect dust or be crushed against other articles. Best way to keep them looking new is to place on stands in boxes. Linings that have become badly soiled may sometimes be cleaned at the hairline with a rubber sponge dipped in cleaning agent. If this fails to remove lining or hatband and dry thoroughly. A band of celluphane placed inside the sweat band will protect the hat from perspiration.

No Fee To Chaplain

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My fiance and I are going to be married by the chaplain at an Army Post chapel.

1. How should I address the chaplain? I am not sure of his rank.

2. My fiance also would like to have me ask you what is the usual fee the chaplain for performing the ceremony.

Kate

1. It is not necessary for you to know the chaplain's rank. Regardless of rank, a chaplain is addressed as "Chaplain". A Catholic chaplain, however, may be addressed as "Father."

2. Your fiance would not be expected to offer the chaplain a fee, and if he did, the chaplain would probably refuse to accept it.

Either Is Correct

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I am getting a Twenty-fifth Wedding Anniversary which is to be held in a hall on a Sunday from 4 till 8 o'clock. Should I take my gift with me, or should it be sent to the home?

Bewildered

Either is correct, but usually a wedding anniversary gift is given when the party is not held at the home of the couple, is presented to the couple at the party. The presentation of the gifts adds to the festivity.

"The Reverend"

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Is Reverend John Smith or The Reverend John Smith the proper way to address an envelope to a minister or a priest?

M. P.

The Reverend John Smith is the correct form.

Courtesy Tip

Do not use the sign of "and" (&) when you are addressing an envelope to Mr. and Mrs. Remember this when you are addressing your Christmas card envelopes.

Long-Continued Hoarseness Calls For Examination

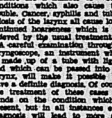
When a person is hoarse for a few days, as from a cold, a fresh ball game, or a few days due to a temporary cold, there is no danger. But if hoarseness has been present for a period of many weeks and does not improve, other causes is result to have a very thorough examination made to find and treat the cause of the trouble. The way to make such an examination is for you to a specialist laryngitis and not to a mere surgeon! Consultant, some laryngologist, is to have the larynx examined by the doctor.

The most common causes for hoarseness are acute and chronic inflammation of the larynx or voice-box. This is known as laryngitis.



The treating chronic laryngitis an effort must be made to improve the general health, to correct any constitutional disease, to avoid colds and rest, proper food, sunshine and exercise. Also the larynx may be applied directly to the larynx and voice-box, through the mouth.

Sometimes when the voice is abused ulcers form in the larynx. In such cases complete rest of the voice may be necessary for a month. Later and then little tissue grow on the margin of the vocal cords. They are called singer's nodes and occur because, of excessive use of the voice-box. These will disappear with complete rest of the voice.

There are a number of other conditions which also cause the trouble. Occasionally the tuberculosis of the larynx all cause longcontinued hoarseness which is not relieved by the usual treatment.

A careful examination through a laryngoscope by a specialist, which is made up of a tube with lights, and mirrors, will reveal the cause of the larynx, will make it possible to have the right treatment for disease, the treatment of these cases depends on the condition which is present but in all instances early diagnosis will lead to more successful treatment.

Do not neglect hoarseness and pass it off as a cold. Consult your physician and serious complications may be prevented by early and proper treatment.

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Functional High Blood Pressure

I have spoken before of the young boxer being driven to a city three hundred miles from his home, the driver speed up some so that they should be in the city for weighing in at 2 p.m. To avoid a stifled nose, the boy had to breathe by mouth during car, they had to turn into a restaurant for a meal and he was turned. Neither of them was hurt, though badly shaken, and they were able to go on and fight that night.

The examining physician found a heart murmur which had always been present and found also the functional blood pressure. He was refusing to allow the young man to fight, but finally gave him after the accident. The examiner called in a colleague who was likewise doing boxing examinations in the state. The boxer pleaded that he had bored in Chicago, Milwaukee and other cities, had never been rejected, and that the accident was to blame for his high blood pressure. Recognizing that the boxer was a fine lad and that Jewish race are more nervous, more emotional, than others, the physician allowed him to fight. The boxer was so worried and upset that he did not do himself justice. He boned the entire ten rounds but was outpointed.

He returned to his home city, continued a heart specialist whose examination included the fluroscope and electrocardiograph, and was told that his heart and blood pressure were normal and that the high blood pressure recorded before the bout was due to the accident and remained high because of high tension in his heart and blood pressure caused by the examining physicians' intention of not having him to box.

This boxer had what is called functional high blood pressure that was due to tendency of the arteries but to a tightening of the tiny muscle elastic tissue of the walls of the bloodvessels. Just as the elastic muscular walls of the intestines, of the stomach, of the gall bladder and other organs contract or tighten due to excitement or emotional disturbances, so do the walls of the arteries contract and tighten due to these emotional disturbances.

What else besides emotional disturbances can cause tightening of bloodvessels which raises the blood pressure?

High blood pressure can be raised temporarily by heavy meals, hard work or exercise, too much liquid—heart or acid drinks—or some irritation in the blood.

While functional high blood pressure is not dangerous, like organic high blood pressure due to hardening of arteries, nevertheless if pressure is increased too often, the bloodvessels lose some of their elasticity and true or organic high blood pressure occurs.

Proper Furnace Care Needed To Conserve Precious Fuel

Now that oil is becoming scarce and householders have no guarantee that they will have enough to last them all winter they should be careful to keep their furnaces running all winter many people have undertaken to convert their oil burners to coal.

This will create a new problem for many homes. Many homes it has been years since a furnace has been stoked. Because of this, coal furnace operation is unfamiliar to many.

Many homes have to be tightened to meet war taxes, it is important to know how to run a coal furnace economically. Consumer Information Service gives the following advice.

When possible get the proper size coal for the furnace. Consumer information Service advises. The fuel dealer has the engineering data to advise on the particular size which will allow the furnace to operate most efficiently.

WATCHES MONEY

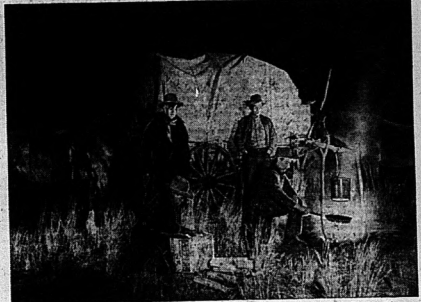
Mrs. Nellie Talor Ross, director of the U.S. mint. She appeared before the U.S. Senate Banking Currency committee, to consider the possibility of the use of substitute materials for strategic metals now used in minor coinage.

Here's one of the great ranches of Western Canada which help supply the men of Canada's fighting forces with more than 21,000 tons of beef a year. It is the ranch of the Douglas Lake Cattle Company, with an area of 500,000 acres. It was founded in 1886 and is the largest privately-owned ranch in Canada. It has a normal staff of 250, but veterans like 63-year-old Joe Greaves, (inset) do most of the riding now. Younger hands are riding motorcycles and tanks.



Sage of the ranch is American-born Edwin Godley who hails from Boonville, Ind. He's been with the ranch since 1890 except for spell with the Cariboo Express.

You're now looking at real cowboys who have neither the time nor the desire to yodel a ditty or strum a guitar after the day's work is done. Instead they repair equipment and turn in early. They're up and out at first peep of dawn.

Joe Contlee, range boss at the Douglas Lake ranch, rolls himself a cigarette while his men rest a herd. When an order comes in, cattle are "cut out" from herd of 10,000.

Out on the range the working day is seldom over until darkness arrives. Then the cowhands gather around the chuck-wagon and set up a camp for the night. They are shown here cooking their supper over the blaze of their small fire.

Here's able ranch foreman Findlay Anderson, on six months extension from army call-up when this photo was taken. The bulk of the work on the ranches these days is being carried on by older men. Note prize ribbons won by his stock.

From the rangelands of the Canadian West to the army kitchens goes the beef in a never-ending stream. Receiving their equal share of good food are the navy and the airforce. Although they are famed for their lusty appetites, Canadian fighting men never have to leave the table hungry. No small portion of the credit should go to the men on the range, who do their share to keep our soldiers healthy.

"Praise the cow punchers and pass the beef!" say the men of the world's best fed army as they sit at the mess table in one of Canada's many training camps and tear into a first class meal. Good meals help make Canadians good soldiers.

QUEBEC LEAGUE REVISES RULING ON PRO. PLAYERS

Each Club Can Carry as Many as Wanted but Only Four Can Dress for Each Game

ALSO RAISE LIMIT

Montreal, Nov. 21. — (CP) — The Quebec Senior Hockey League last night revised its ruling on the use of former National Hockey League players, to allow any team to carry as many N. H. L. players as they wish, provided not more than four are dressed for any one game.

At the same time, the League changed its definition of a former N.H.L. player so that any player who has played 10 or less games in the N.H.L. last season would not be considered a former N.H.L. player for the purposes of the Q.S.H.L.

The League also raised its player-limit per team from 12 and a spare goaltender to 14 and a spare goalie.

Earlier in the season the League had limited each team to four former N.H.L. players on its roster and defined an N.H.L. player as any one who played one or more games in the N.H.L. last season.

At last night's meeting, it was moved by Jimmy McCaffrey of Ottawa Commandos and seconded by Lt.-Col. Arthur White of Montreal Army that the previous ruling be rescinded, and that motion was carried.

A suggestion for a new ruling limiting the number of N.H.L. players on one club to five was put forward by Clare Brunton of Ottawa and seconded by Sgt.-Maj. Jim Hayward of Montreal Army, but this motion was voted down.

The motion to place no restrictions on the number of N.H.L. players on the club rosters, but to limit each club to four in any one game was put forward by Paul Haynes of Montreal and Charlie Smith of Quebec Morton Aces, and was passed.

The motion for the increase in player strength, was made by Lez Cook of Ottawa and seconded by Lt.-Col White and was carried.

Lt.-Col. White also seconded Don Rowe's suggestion that the League's definition of an N.H.L. player be changed to learn those who had played ten or less games in the N.H.L. last season out of the classification. This motion also was passed.

Only other business of the evening left the overtime arrangements unchanged. Under present arrangements, overtime of 10 minutes is played whenever any game ends in Quebec, Ottawa and Cornwall, but no overtime is played in Montreal where doubleheaders are usual.

Paul Haynes of Canadiens moved, seconded by Gus Ogilvie of Montreal Royals that no overtime be played in any scheduled games, the motion was defeated.

The National Hockey League announced Friday that the ruling has no more overtime would be played in scheduled N.H.L. contests.)

Hockey's Hottest Controversy Goes To Jury Tonight

Hockey's hottest controversy goes into the jury room tonight. If anything but an open verdict is returned, either Goldie Prentice or Sylvanus Apps will be the victim of a gross miscarriage of justice.

They are the principals in a pointless argument which has raged ever since Drillon, Apps' high-scoring linemate with Toronto Maple Leafs last season, went to Montreal Canadiens in October. Since then, one question has been posed in hockey circles: "Does Apps miss Drillon more than Drillon misses Apps, or vice versa?"

So far, the preliminary evidence has favored Drillon. The big right winger has accumulated 14 points in many scoring points as Apps in the early National League skirmishes. But one authoritative voice has been raised in defence of the Leaf pivot. That voice belongs to Conn Smythe (Happy) Day.

"There's nothing radically wrong with Apps," says Day, replying to suggestions that Drillon's absence drove the pivot's effectiveness. "He just hasn't rounded to form yet. He's still doing the puck-carrying this year, but he isn't flying like he was."

Actually, any comparison between Drillon and Apps are odious. Both are great players in their own right, both favor distinctive styles of play. But the public fancy has been stirred, and the season's biggest crowd is expected at Maple Leaf Gardens tonight for the 1942-43 meeting between Leafs and Canadiens. Drillon's presence in the Montreal lineup, of course, provides the main box office lure.

Three games are carded for Sunday. Both Canadian clubs go into action, Leafs hosting Detroit Boston Bruins in Boston and Canadiens against Chicago Black Hawks on Chicago's home ice. Detroit Red Wings, sharing the league leadership with Chicago, travel to New York for an engagement with the last-place Rangers.

The match for the increase in player strength, was made by Lez Cook of Ottawa and seconded by Lt.-Col White and was carried.

Lt.-Col. White also seconded Don Rowe's suggestion that the League's definition of an N.H.L. player be changed to learn those who had played ten or less games in the N.H.L. last season out of the classification. This motion also was passed.

HAMILTONMAJORS TIE SAINTS FOR TOP POSITION

Saints Defeated 6-9 While Hamilton Defeats Port Colborne 4-3

CONICK SCORES 3

(By The Canadian Press)

Niagara Falls Cataracts made it another "A" game for Majors to gain a first place tie with St. Catharines Saints in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" League, previously top last night when they defeated the Saints 6-4 at Niagara Falls. It was the first defeat of the season for the Cataractues.

Meanwhile defeated Pt. Colborne Sailors 4-3 in the other O.H.A. Senior "A" game at Hamilton. There were no games scheduled in the Toronto group.

Goaltending was the issue safe in the first period at Niagara Falls where the teams settled down to a broad shoulders, wouldn't be gainsaid. Neither team was dealing for, but such little items don't bother Cats. He's taken the place with one or more of the mentioned drawbacks and yet them pay dividends. All that Dykes would say of Johnson would be a few homers, a few hits, a few runs batted in while coasting last season.

Dykes knows that Johnson still has some baseball in his system. That big bat of his does still deal out deadly potions and if the box don't need hitting they don't need anything. As for the present condition of the veteran, that can be discussed when already training for next summer, buoyed up by the knowledge that he had made his speech to Connie and that it might help results.

Naturally enough, Johnson probably hopes the result will, involve Mr. Dykes, proprietor of a haven for anybody Connie wishes to pass along. Johnson takes his every if a manager other than Connie is still doing the passing.

Bob Johnson Looks Like Fair Game For Mr. Dykes

Through With Athletics, Says Slugger, So He'll Probably End Up With White Sox

Conditions being what they are, James V. Dykes, athletic club manager whose trading for a couple of seasons gets him associated with all the other bosses finally labelled him a "one cuy" and would be a part of his job to have to go back to one of his long standing fines during the time he have next month.

Trading is going to be difficult, what with every manager playing more attention to his utility man's status than to his playing ability, so Dykes is going to have difficulty bolstering any one team for the rivals, but there is that old Bob Johnson theme.

Dykes has worked on it annually for three or four years, but Connie Mack, the owner of the athlete, has laughed it off. Now, however, the atmosphere is different and don't think that Dykes isn't been working.

Ten Years with Athletics

Johnson, as almost everybody knew before he began exchanging pleasantries with Connie this fall, has had enough of the Athletics and maybe he can't be blamed for that. Ten seasons of that should be sufficient suffering for one man, not that Connie isn't the most amiable of employers. But Indian Bob, shaping a fight for power, hitter probably feels that before it's too late he'd like to enjoy a different work bench.

Anyway, Johnson put himself on record that if he plays any more baseball he will not be together with the Athletics. Connie rejected with some kind of a crack about Johnson's not having played much baseball as an Athletic last season, and Johnson then proceeded to observe Bob in action knows that Connie didn't exaggerate. Confidence wasn't the word used about hustling. He let himself get out of shape, but the fact remains fellow who noticed the change was none other than Dykes, indicating that he hasn't lost interest.

A Rebel and 34 Years Old

Maybe Johnson, out of shape, a rebel and 34 years old, is a bit broad shoulders, wouldn't be gainsaid. Neither was Dykes for long, but such little items don't bother Dykes. He's taken the place with one or more of the mentioned drawbacks and yet them pay dividends. All that Dykes would say of Johnson would be a few homers, a few hits, a few runs batted in while coasting last season.

Results of the three final contests on the Ontario Rugby Football Union's 30-game schedule appeared today to hold the key to the possibility of staging Canada's Grey Cup final.

Toronto, Nov. 21—(CP)—Among members of the boxing fraternity who have traded the ring for the rifle since the war began are: Al Delaney, former heavyweight from Ottawa; Gnr. Norman Dawson of Vancouver; Gnr. Charley Parker of Vancouver; Gnr. George Mutilo-vich, former McGill University boxer; Sgmn. Ron McNeill of Glace Bay, N.S.

From Halifax we hear that the Y.M.C.A. is to take over the services of Wally Myers, former Toronto amateur wrestler, to their physical department staff. Now serving in the navy, Myers was well known in the amateur wrestling game throughout Ontario.

This brings to some 30 the number of well-known Canadian athletes associated with the Y.M.C.A. physical training department. Gordon Lawrence, British Columbia swimming ace, has taken over the swimming classes, while Gus (Doug) Dunsan of Toronto is in charge. Canzano is a flight sergeant with the R.C.A.F.

Charles Clark, twice holder of the Dominion 440-yard sprint title, now is a pilot officer in the R.C.A.F. Clark, whose mother lives in Fort William, is a graduate of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. Doug writing is his hobby and one of his compositions has been broadcast over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Jimmy Trovick, one of Moose Jaw's well-known athletes, has joined the navy. After a season in Saskatchewan junior ranks, the 18-year-old forward broke into senior company with Hollinger Greenstones of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, and last season played with Sydney Millionaires in the Cape Breton Hockey League.

Among the players on Marty Burke's Calgary Stampeders last season who now are on active service are: Jack Hodges, quarterback; Tony Desmarais, Les Thirlwell and Jack Crain, forwards. Former National Hockey League players who now are members of the United States armed forces include: Sam Lo Presti of Chicago Black Hawks, Ralph Art Coulter of New York Rangers.

5 TONS TIN CANS SALVAGED BY ARMY

Kingston, Nov. 21 — More than 45,000 tin cans, weighing about 15 tons, have been salvaged this week by the Kingston Army Service Corps unit, which provide metal to make ammunition boxes, according to a announcement.

Fifty thousand cans are needed in the production of armour plate, and all salvaged material is sent to Trenton. Pte. J. S. is being directed into the proper channels to be used for such purposes.

It was the first freight car load of cans to leave Barriefield, and is to be the forerunner of many more. For some time past it has been understood that tin cans were not profitable salvage, but it has taken the Army ages to get the way. The tin cans are definitely profitable salvage, that is, if in large enough quantity.

'Hockey is a Subsidiary' To Main War Effort Says Retiring O. H. A. President

Ross Clemens Tells Meeting There Was 65% Drop In Registration

FINANCES GOOD

Toronto, Nov. 21 —(CP)—Hockey must be considered a "definite subsidiary to our main war effort," Ross R. Clemens of Hamilton, retiring president of the Ontario Hockey Association, said in a speech prepared for delivery today at the Association's 33rd annual meeting.

"Our government at Ottawa has given us assurance that it is their wish that hockey carry on," said Clemens, who is succeeded as president by F. W. "Dinty" Moore of Port Colborne. "At the last Canadian Amateur Hockey Association meeting it was definitely decreed that all young men who are able to engage in hockey should be profitably employed either as a member of some armed forces or in some industry essential to the successful prosecution of the war."

"With this I feel that we in this Association agree to the fullest extent."

Clemens disclosed that there has been a 65-per cent drop in registration in hockey branches throughout Canada, the effect of which we are very proud," that these young men, ranging from 16 to 26 per cent, are taking an active part in a far greater sphere. The O.H.A. had 'definite service returns' in the past and would continue to do so.

Various O.H.A. branches had contributed a total of approximately $8,000 to charity last season, "the organization's effort which were not strong as a year ago but it still had a strong balance and $6,000 in Victory Loan Canada bonds. Clemens said prospects for the different leagues were bright.

Treasurer George S. Dudley presented the 1941-42 financial statement showing receipts of $10,537 against disbursements of $10,437. Secretary W. A. Hewitt read for adoption amendments to the O.H.A. constitution. It was announced that entries in all O.H.A. series will close Nov. 30 and all championship entries will be arranged at the first meeting of the new executive committee Nov. 27.

Before 13,311 fans—the biggest crowd to jam the Garden since Petrino Orsi lifted the Welterweight title from Kenny Armstrong's head almost two years ago—Callura weakened in the fourth round and Dell quickly pounding Canada out for the fifth the Canadian took the defensive and stayed close.

In the final round Dell was by far the fresher of the two. He outboxed the Canadian both at long range and at close quarters as they mixed it freely.

Dell weighed 127 1-4 to Callura's 123 1-2.

CHALKY WRIGHT LOSES CROWN TO WILLIE PEP

Featherweight Negro Beaten by Father Time and Aged Leg

A GOOD FIGHT

New York, Nov. 21 (AP) — No one did a hand-stand in Madison Square Garden last night, but Willie Pep ousted Chalky Wright on the world featherweight throne today and didn't "on his head."

It was simply by fighting Wright the only way he could. Pep, the Hartford negro can 26 boasters—by using his left hand all night long. The "pop kid" is the new boss of the 127-pounders today.

Willie is a 20-year-old ex-hoofer. Back out of Hartford, who admits he hasn't done enough road work to have read the entire book about the break-handed boxer. Willie calls his manager, Lou Viscuit "Mr. Trainer" at all times, and it's not only by the battle plan Lou drew up that the Hartford scooping-jack was able to come back to Connecticut for the first time since his days—boy of Kid Kaplan and Bat Battalino in the late 20's.

About the only weapon Pep used with the exception of a dozen or so right hands that he let go (probably by accident) through the entire 15 rounds, was a left hand—a left-jab left jab that bounced off Chalky's face as if it owned it.

The Chalk, you know is regarded as one of the "smarter" fighters in the business today. Wright "found" he had two tuesiers tangle with Chalky before this, and "found" the two newsies that one-and-one about Wright's way of doing business. So he told Willie to hit 'em "stick and move." And for 15 rounds Pep did just that. He "stuck" with his jab from start to finish.

The crowd of 19,231 tossed $71,958 into Mike Jacobs' money boxes. Several thousand of the boys and girls were from Connecticut, and were seeing Willie home. These totals incidentally, make it make the air the time high turnout for a featherweight fun.

Closed by side fasteners, pockets for money and jewelry are included in what appears to be a new dress belt for men.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Blossoms in the Dust"

Inspired by the life of Mrs. Edna Gladney of Fort Worth, founder of the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society, who has devoted thirty years to child welfare and has found happy homes for more than 2,000 babies, "Blossoms in the Dust," starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre.

Filmed in Technicolor, the picture reveals for the first time the full beauty of the red-headed, green-eyed Irish actress who rose to stardom overnight with her memorable performance of "Mrs. Chips" in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," her unforgettable portrayal of "Mrs. Miniver". Now, as Mrs. Gladney, she has been given another tender, warmly human role of equal brilliance.

The most dramatic and heartrending story ever brought to the screen, the picture opens in the gay, colorful Gibson Girl period of 1906 when lovely Edna Kahley meets, falls in love with and marries Sam Gladney, played by Pidgeon. Mrs. Gladney becomes interested in child welfare when she observes the difficulties women workers in her husband's cotton mill have in caring for their children.

Simply and quietly Mrs. Gladney goes about her chosen work of helping babies and assuring reforms in adoption laws. When Sam Gladney suffers financial reverses and loses the mills they move to Fort Worth, where Mrs. Gladney stops every doorbell in Texas in order to secure funds to start a new home. The screen has never brought a more beautiful romantic story to the screen than this one of a woman who fell in love with 2000 babies.

"Cadet Girl"

Fifteen thousand cadets at Camp Hahn, near Marsh Field, California, unknowingly joined the cast of the 20th Century-Fox's "Cadet Girl," the Capitol's added feature attraction.

One Saturday Kay Kyser put on a show for the boys at the camp. One of the top members of his all-star cast was lovely Carole Landis, who has been giving up most of her free time to entertainments at the Army camps.

Carole sang several songs for the boys. While she sang, Director Ray McCarey and a camera crew filmed the scene as an important sequence of "Cadet Girl."

In the picture, Carole, cast as a songstress, leaves a night club engagement to entertain at United States Army camps. Camp Hahn provided the ideal setting, and the 15,000 cadets there a perfect background.

George Montgomery is starred opposite Carole in "Cadet Girl." The five new songs were written by Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger.

AT THE BELLE

"Iceland"

One of the tests of a truly great musical screen hit is the successful introduction of a combined new song and dance. This annual Hollywood task was amazingly performed — and more successfully! — in 20th Century-Fox's new musical "Iceland," starring lovely Sonja Henie and handsome John Payne.

The song chefs, Mack Gordon and Harry Warren, one of Hollywood's greatest song composing teams, bent over backwards when they worked on "Iceland," producing a list of song hits including "You Can't Say No To a Soldier," "Lovers' Knot," "Let's Bring New Glory to Old Glory," "There'll Never Be Another You," and "I Like a Military Tune."

It was "Lovers' Knot" however, that not only established a song hit, but also a dance craze.

Working with Dance Director Hermes Pan of 20th Century-Fox, Gordon and Warren created the "Lovers' Knot Polka," which not only has the potentialities of becoming as popular as the "Lambeth Walk" of a few years ago, but is already pulsating and sixth accurate that one can dance it, taking Pan's word for it, and to aid in its rhythmical execution, the lyrics of the song contain the directions for each step in the dance!

AT THE BELLE

To the shores of Iceland went United States marines, John Payne, and Jack Oakie to be warmed by the smiles of Sonja Henie, in 20th Century-Fox's newest treat, "Iceland," featuring Sammy Kaye and his orchestra.

An elaborate musical with exhilarating skating sequences now at the Belle Theatre, "Iceland" stars Sonja Henie and John Payne. Featured are Jack Oakie and Sammy Kaye and his orchestra.

Four Excellent Units

Edgar Allen Poe's classic, "The Raven," produced in living technicolor in Bell Label News digest, an entertaining travelstalk "Jewels of the Pacific," and "Ends of the World" a timely topical film complete the program.

Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

AT THE McCARTHY

WALTER PIDGEON

Highly emotional drama and honest-to-goodness thrills are in store for filmgoers when they witness Walter Wanger's production of "The House Across the Bay" coming to the McCarthy Theatre screen next, with George Raft, Joan Bennett and Walter Pidgeon in great star of "Mrs. Miniver" heading a superb cast.

Archie Mayo directed "The House Across the Bay" with skill and rhythm, working steadily and surely to an exciting and unexpected climax which leaves the audience tense and breathless. The story is told compactly and with speed the dialogue is excellent and the backgrounds are beautifully lighted and photographed. The film has no waste motion and no artificial dream sequences. It is a story told in a down-to-earth manner, highlighted by excellent acting and crisp direction. "The House Across the Bay" is truly a treat for filmgoers. In addition, for your added enjoyment lovely Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo and John Halliday in the great adventure story "Blockade" is the second feature making up one of the finest combinations of entertainment, in screen history.

CLASSES FOR CIVIL SERVICE STENOGRAPHERS

Ottawa, Nov. 21—(CP) — The Civil Service Commission announced yesterday that classes to train stenographers for the Civil Service will be opened this week in Renfrew, Smiths Falls, Perth, and Brockville, Ont.

The government will pay subsistence allowances ranging from $18 to $5 a week to girls who take the four months' course which will lead to positions as Grade 1 and Grade 2 stenographers in Ottawa. Preference goes to the classes, which come under the War Emergency Training Program, because of the acute shortage of stenographic help available in the capital.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at his paper and me was looking at hers, saying, MY, I thought the war was looking up, but it seems to be looking down again. Here's an interview with Admiral Jeffery Grimes, and he says, unless everybody will have to wait at least one more year for the duce with indication of peace, she said.

There's just one joy at Xmas, pop said. Both those ducks are specialists, he said, he and the chef. I specialists dont know their own sister, who does for land sakes?

That's a fair question, pop said. I only with I knew the right answer, pop said. And I know it, my last, personal experience with specialists was before the big market crash when most of the top bankers and economists were saying that stocks and bonds were on a permanent upward incline, and just then, land, the specialists got the biggest smash, he said, and ma said, Well sir, we had to think of a name to remember the fool specialist who told us. I had a Joey Leist name wrong with my instep, and then an ordinary shoe salesman hit the correct nail on the head by proving that my shoe was too tight.

That's a fact, pop said, how about the stummick specialist that came to see you for his stummick trouble time? I said. I asked him how long a person could keep on making their mouth water smelling smells without starting to waste their assets, and he didn't even leave the answer, I said, and pop said The preconclusion is right, sir, that you will be over before the specialists know what happened and if you want to know how I found out, it's a long story, pop said, and ma said, Well, I'm certainly delighted and relieved to hear it, and I'm glad I brought it up, I'm sure.

Being the end of the subject.

CHAPTER 22

Bliss went into the little place where, in the rear, he found a tiny post office. It was in charge of a brisk-looking, middle-aged woman who told him she was Mrs. Binney, postmistress.

Smiling engagingly, Bliss told her he was a stranger who wanted a little information about the town.

"Who are you, and what are you after, Mister?"

"My name is Bliss, and I have come from New York to attend the funeral of Mr. Webb."

"For the land sake! You a relation of his?"

"I represent a relative of the Webb family. Now, Mrs. Binney, if you will please tell me where the Webb house is, and also who is Mr. Webb's lawyer, and where he lives, I won't trouble you any further."

Mrs. Binney's attitude had changed.

"You don't mean it!" she exclaimed. "Say, what do you know about that will of his? They say it's unlegal!"

"Now, why would a smart man like Mr. Webb leave a will that was not perfectly all right? I expect there's a lot of gossip around here."

"There is that! Say, won't you tell me about it? Comin' from New York—how did you hear of it 'way off there?"

"There was a letter from here—you must have seen it—being in charge here."

"Yes, I saw a letter that went to New York City, and I knew it was in Lawyer Vail's writing, but that's all I knew about it, and I never mentioned it to anybody. What do you want of Lawyer Vail? He's the Webb lawyer, and he lives right across the street."

"I want to see someone in authority, concerning the Webb estate. And I would rather go to the house, before I see the lawyer. Who is in charge there? Some relatives?"

"No, sir. Jason Webb had no relatives that he recognized. At his house, you'll find Sarah Holden in charge. She's been in charge some twenty years or more."

"She took good care of him, then?"

"Yes, her and her daughter too, and her granddaughter."

"Are they all at the Webb house?"

"That they are, and likely to stay there. For I've heard that the house and grounds is all left to Sarah."

"I think I'll go to see Mrs. Sarah—what's her other name?"

"Holden, Sarah Holden. And her daughter is Sarah, too, she married a Bostwick."

"Is he there, too?"

"Yes, he is. And their daughter, Ethel; she's housemaid and waitress. They all have their jobs, 'ceptin' Jim Bostwick, he just loafs around and pretends he's workin'."

"Then, Mr. Webb took care of all these people—"

"He did, and he was mighty glad to, for they were all good to him, and if they'd left him he couldn't have found anybody else to put up with his cantankerousness."

"He was not an amiable man, then?"

"Amiable? If a Maine coon cat is amiable, if a bear with a sore head is amiable, if a hungry Bengal tiger is amiable, then I guess you maybe might call Jason Webb amiable."

"Yes, Sarah Holden has put up with his ill-temper for all these years!"

"Well, who wouldn't, if it meant house and home for her and all her family? But she ain't the loser by it. Near's I can make out, she gets the Webb house and enough to keep it a-goin' and I'll say she deserves it."

"Thank you, Mrs. Binney. Now, which way to the Webb house?"

The postmistress gave him directions, and Clarence Bliss left.

The Webb house had been built in the cupola and bay window era. A large square house it was, painted slate gray with brown trim.

Bliss rang the old-fashioned bell-pull and waited. The door was opened by bored and disinterested-looking Jim Bostwick.

"I want to see Mrs. Holden," said Bliss, and stepped into the hall. Bostwick turned his head and screamed "Sarah"! Then closed the front door and disappeared.

A woman, dressed in black entered the hall.

"You want to see me, sir?" she said in a calm, courteous voice.

"Yes, if you please. I want a few minutes talk about Mr. Webb. I am Mr. Bliss from New York; Brand Herrick's partner."

Sarah led the way to what was evidently the parlor. The furnishings were of the plush and chrome period, but all was well cared for, and the room bright and cheery.

They sat down and the housekeeper looked at him inquiringly.

"I came," Clarence said, "to learn something of the circumstances of Mr. Webb's death."

"They ain't much to tell," she answered, seeming to think his explanation sufficient. "Mr. Webb, he was along in years, just turned eighty, and he caught a terrible cold, and it took him bad and went off into pneumonia, and he just couldn't pull through. Well, we all got to die when our time comes."

"When will the funeral be held, Mrs. Holden?"

"Tomorrow, sir. Will you be stayin' for it?"

"Yes. Is there a hotel . . ."

"No sir, there ain't. Any one befriendin' young Brand Herrick is welcome to his old uncle's home. Your place is here so long's you choose to stay in it. Now, sir, why are you here instead of Brand himself?"

Bliss took a sudden decision.

"Mrs. Holden," he said, and his manner conveyed assurance of his belief in her trustworthiness, loyalty, secrecy and wisdom. "I want to tell you why Brand is not here, but I don't want others to know the reason."

"Then they won't know it."

"Brand Merrick is in prison for a crime he did not commit."

"Bless his heart, of course he didn't! The Webbs couldn't commit crime. You goin' to get him out, I s'pose."

"Yes. But I'll stay for the funeral."

"Whatever you say. I'm Mr. Webb's househeeper and I had a feelin' that some of the family from somewhere would turn up to take charge. But nobody's came, 'ceptin' you. So as Brand Herrick's representative won't you lend a hand?"

"What do you mean for me to do?"

"Why decide things. Give orders. Make everything go off right. Be boss of everything. Me and my children will do just what you tell us."

Bliss was silent a minute. He realized that here was a chance for him to do something worthwhile for Brand.

"Mrs. Holden," he said, "as there is nobody else to do it, I will take charge in full, as you ask. But if any near relative turns up, I shall step out."

Sarah looked troubled. After a moment, she said:

"All right, sir. If that doesn't include Mr. Wiley,—he is the son-in-law of Mr. Webb."

"They were not friends!"

"When Mr. Webb's daughter Jane eloped with John Wiley, Mr. Webb disowned his daughter and said he would never see her again, and he never did."

"Did she ever come here?"

"Once. I saw her, and her baby; but Mr. Webb would not see her, and she went away, weeping. Mr. Wiley never came here, but it wouldn't surprise me if he turned up now, trying to get some of the money."

"The daughter is dead, I believe."

"Yes, sir. Janie died about ten years ago."

"Now I am going to see Lawyer Vail. Tonight you will tell me some more about the family matters."

Richard Vail was an honest lawyer, and fairly well read. Jason Webb had been his only very rich client. He had been generous with his fees, and now Vail expected some sort of bequest, and he was not disappointed.

He received Clarence Bliss a bit coolly at first, until Bliss told him that Brand Herrick was ill and confined to the house, and so unable to attend his uncle's funeral.

Vail was influenced by Bliss' winning ways, and accepted the situation.

"Since the old man really had the good of this place at heart," Clarence said, after they had discussed preliminaries. "Why didn't he do something for it while he was alive?"

"No one can offer a reason for anything Jason Webb did or did not do. He was a law unto himself and a contradictory law at that. I gave up trying to advise him, and merely obeyed his orders, about his own affairs."

"What do you think about that question of Brand Herrick's finding the Wiley girl?"

"I think there's no chance in a thousand for his success. I think she is dead."

"Why do you think that?"

"I think that if she had lived, she would have been at her grandfather for money before this time."

"Maybe and maybe not. Suppose she learns of the will, and just comes here and claims her rights."

"What are her rights?"

"A clever lawyer could put it over, that she had a right to present herself to Brand Herrick, and thereby help him to gain the fortune. I also rather think you want the money to go to the town here, and build it up to . . ." Bliss hesitated.

"No; you misjudge me. If it turns out that way, I shall do all I can to help the trustees with their work. But I honestly want my client's first wishes to stand if possible. He wanted, I know, to keep his money in the Webb family, and that girl, and Brand Herrick, represent the Webb family now. But we have three months to await developments. Lots can happen in three months. It's late March now it'll be late June when—perhaps — the wedding bells may ring."

Bliss smiled involuntarily.

"Perhaps the lady won't look on Herrick with kindliness. Maybe she has a sweetheart."

"Not one with two million dollars, I'm thinking."

"No, probably not. Now, Mr. Vail, what about Sarah Holden. You know her?"

"Rather! Salt of the earth and then some!"

"I'm staying there and she wants me to take full charge as long as I will stay."

"She is smart enough to see there ought to be a loss and since you represent Herrick, you are the one."

"But she wants me to set the day for the funeral."

"Well, set it."

"Tomorrow, I'd say."

Egg and Butter Prices Remain Steady on Mart

First grade Spys and Delicious apples at $2.25 per bushel, featured the local produce market this morning as attendance showed a decided improvement over that of last week. Talman Sweets sold at 50 cents the peck or at $1.75 per bushel, while Snows brought the same price. Cooking apples of all varieties ranged between $1.25 and $1.50 per bushel.

The offering of fowl on the inside market was the largest seen in several weeks with prices for well-finished chickens ranging up to $1.85 each. Capons were offered by several vendors at 35 cents per pound with prices ranging up to $2.80 each for birds weighing eight pounds. General price for fowl was between 28 and 30 cents per pound.

Butter seemed a trifle firmer with several vendors asking as high as 45 cents per pound. although the majority quoted their offerings at two pounds for 85 cents. Eggs held their previous high level at 53 cents per dozen for Grade "A" with 55 cents being asked for specials. Pullets were quoted at 48c and mediums at 50c the dozen.

Potatoes brought the usual straight $2 per bag with a fair offering, while vegetables such as carrots, parsnips, beets, bringing 35 cents the peck and onions 70 cents per peck. Celery and cabbage were offered at the usual prices.

For the first time in several weeks there were no white fish offered on the market, but herring sold at 20 cents the pound and pike the same figure. Suckers sold at three for 25 cents.

Young porkers were offered in quantity with prices ranging from $6 to $7 each, according to quality.

B.C.I. DRAMATIC SHOW REPEATED

Last evening for the second night, the dramatic presentation of "Our Town" by youthful actors and actresses of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School was played in the school auditorium before a splendid audience, the proceeds of the evening going toward the splendid work of the Collegiate Junior Red Cross.

One of the highlights of the evening's entertainment was the expression of appreciation of the cast toward Miss Joan Maraskas who acted as instructor during the rehearsal of "Our Town," by the students. Miss Maraskas was presented with a lovely bouquet of flowers in appreciation of her unselfish endeavors.

The Collegiate play management expressed themselves as being especially appreciative of the gesture of No. 5 Initial Training School and Trenton Air Station in lending their stage lighting to the collegiate for the duration of the play. Without the appropriate and adequate lighting afforded by the R.C.A.F. equipment the presentation of the play would have lost a great deal of its appeal and realistic qualities so thoroughly enjoyed by those witnessing the presentation.

LEADS TANKS IN AMAZING JOURNEY

Corp. Bernard J. Kessel, ABOVE, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was one of the crew of a General Grant tank which went on a rampage, ramming and destroying 75 mm. guns and 50 motor vehicles in the centre of Oran after becoming separated from their unit. They penetrated the city hours before other units entered and emerged none the worse for their experience. Kessel mans his tank's 75 mm. gun and explained his tank came upon a mobile 75 mm. standing in the road. He had no time to load his own and blast the other out of the way "so we rammed him full speed." Kessel is shown in a tank in New York during a furlough.

Airwomen Play In Bugle Band At Mountain View

Airmen at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School are putting a little more zip and swing into their route marches and parades these days according to reports from the R.C.A.F. training station on the hill overlooking the Bay of Quinte. The reason is one of masculine pride and desire to keep perfect time to martial music as played by the feminine members of the station trumpet band.

According to station officials airwomen have been included in the station trumpet band for the past two months and now number approximately eight. "There'd be more only we've had a little difficulty in obtaining the necessary instruments," commented an official following the wing parade on Friday.

Graduation or the transfer of former male band members resulted in the band's numbers being depleted and it was necessary to invite the women in to fill their places, it was stated. Now four airwomen are playing snare drums and four other members of the women's division are giving very credible performance with trumpets.

CREED MAY DEFINE BASIC PRINCIPLES OF CONSERVATIVES

Committee to Meet Two Days Before Convention Opens in Winnipeg

PORT HOPE STATEMENT

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 21—(CP)—A Conservative party "creed" setting forth the basic principles of the party, probably will be adopted by the national convention at Winnipeg on Dec. 9, 10 and 11 it was learned today.

Spokesmen said suggestions were coming in from party supporters throughout the country urging that Conservative principles be declared in simple form. Such a "creed," approved by the 900 delegates at the convention, would remove misconceptions about the party and present its true position, its supporters said.

Preparation of the draft to be passed on by the convention probably will be the duty of the preconvention resolutions and policy committee under the chairmanship of Cecil G. Frost of Lindsay, Ont. Rod Finlayson of Winnipeg is its secretary.

Meeting in Winnipeg for two days before the convention opens, this committee will have before it the reports of six sub-groups appointed to deal with resolutions covering specific subjects. These reports may well be a guide useful in preparation of the "creed" one Conservative said.

"What is wanted is something in plain form that will show where the Conservative Party stands in 1942 and the lasting principles it upholds, with their application to modern conditions", he added.

"When these basic principles have been set forth and endorsed, they will stand as the creed of the party".

Several resolutions received by convention committee headquarters have aproved into the agriculture program suggestions made by the Port Hope, Ont., Conservative Laymen's Conference in September, officials said.

Port Hope Statement

The Port Hope statement of aims and beliefs deplored "the underprivileged position of agriculture, the insecurity of farm living, the burden of debt, the drift from the farms and the depletion of the agricultural resources of the country".

The statement urged that organized agriculture be consulted in the formulation of policies, a program of conservation, debt adjustment machinery to make it possible for old debts to be paid, a central farm bank, a price stabilization corporation to maintain fair prices, encouragement of farmers' co-operative organizations and maintenance of Canada's position as an agricultural producing country.

OCEAN ROLLERS HIGHER THAN 40 FEET ARE RARE

Waves Have Been Known, However, To Heave Solidly Of 52 Miles An Hour

This interesting article about the size of waves on the ocean is to be produced from the News Review, (London).

If the flow of air over water were as frictionless as it is over glass, and there was no exchange of heat between them, the sea would always be calm. Turbulence, the eddy motion which causes the up-and-down movement of air, would be almost non-existent.

Anything which disturbs the fine equilibrium of calm water—it may be the blowing of wind, or a change in the balance—forms a wave. According to George Kimble in his Geography of Magazine, ripples in the air-stream produce similarly minute ripples on the water's surface.

As the waves begin to develop they in turn influence the air motion around them. Air currents begin to conform to the shape of the wave, and as this is accentuated friction is reduced to a minimum and harmony established.

Then, seagulls will allow waves to advance underneath them while they let themselves be raised on ST. Paul's Cathedral are after all unstretched wings by the airflow of a wave's crest. In a strong wind there is sufficient friction from "rough" water ingiven" near a wave's crest to increase the airplane's velocity by seven m.p.h.

Breaks Away.

Once over the crest the airstream breaks away from the wave's form and whirls round in eddies to allow eddies to form in the lee. The eddies, carried by the wind downstream, make the sea turbulent.

As a wave grows in height the condition becomes more complex. Between wave length, wave height, and the velocity of the wind there is for a complete wave to pass a fixed point, a definite relation—the equation of hydrodynamics.

Giant Atlantic rollers breaking on the north coast of Cornwall at intervals of 15 seconds, with a wave length over an average length of 1,156 feet and a velocity of 52 miles an hour. A 20-second wave has advances at half the speed of the 15-second wave, but it takes one while the one behind it takes the next 20 sec.

Obviously a wave cannot travel faster than the wind which originated it, and it is believed that there must be definite relationship between velocity and period which ocean waves can reach. Research to get mathematical data, winds of more than 20 miles an hour, are necessary from the wave-raising point of view.

40-ft. Waves.

Although an 80-m.p.h. gale can only produce a 40-foot wave under the most favourable set of hurricanes raising waves to a height of more than 40 feet are sufficient-ly common to be mentioned in nautical journals, so that sailors' yarns about waves as high as St. Paul's Cathedral are after all not entirely fanciful.

Just yarns

"As soon as water form they begin to travel. Some get beyond the wave-raising zone but gradually they lose height and pass away as gentle undulations known as true waves or ground swell. Given sufficient momentum, and provided they don't encounter strong winds from a contrary direction, these swell waves can travel right across the Atlantic to the other, retaining throughout their journey the same length and decreasing in height with the distance from their origin.

Paralysed Ocean.

Some of these long swells, for instance originating off Newfoundland, can reach the coasts of Europe after several hundred hours of travel at 30 m.p.h. Investigating the French authorities discovered they could in deep water while they are in the rear of depression over the North Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland.

Incoming swells are strongest when these is light northerly wind or calm over most of the sea.

Awful Conditions In Occupied France

(A French girl, recently arrived in England, describes in a BBC Overseas Talk broadcast, the unspeakable cruelty of Nazi rule.)

If you live in the country in France and you have a hen and your hen lays an egg, you must take the egg in the pot quickly and eat it yourself. That is because the Germans have told all the villages in France that if they hear any cackling of hens during the night they will shoot three hundred people in the village. That is a heavy price to Germans, and they are very careful to cackling. The prisoners had not chosen the and the people were beginning to realize that these represented nearly two million hostages. The conditions in the camps were awful. The cruelty of the Germans had particularly made itself felt in the camps of the Arabs, Algerians, Moroccans.

I have witnessed the most frightful scenes. In 1941, when visiting a camp in the Unoccupied Zone of France, I saw starving men drop before my eyes. The work, the Germans made them do, they would have been too hard for any normally-fed man. You cannot imagine what these camps looked like: a large square of land, entirely surrounded by barbed wire, sprinkled with wooden barracks. Not all the thousand men could sleep in the barracks, very two hundred were sick—dying, I should say, with dysentery. The sanitary accommodation was practically non-existent. There were only a few latrines for the men, nearly with no cover at all. There was no water, no drinking water, not even a thermometer. Judging by the temperature, I should say it was, I expect they all died.

Another day, I was visiting a prisoner-of-war camp in Saumur, just before Christmas. As I got nearer the camp I could see the men in the fire buildings. This was a large camp containing several thousand men. They all had their luggage with them, as they were going to Germany. Before leaving, however, the Germans had to search their luggage, and a few days previously eleven prisoners had escaped, and, as a punishment, all food and parcels sent to the prisoners in the camp were burnt. You know how much soldiers, especially prisoners look forward to their mail. For the first time in my life I understood what hatred meant, and I understood why people look in the men's eyes. It was murder.

The civilians are not in a much better condition and this is growing increasingly worse. There is no coal, no petrol, and the food supplies are drastic and absolutely insufficient. You cannot buy any clothes, and the result of these shortages on the life of a big railway town like Marseilles can illustrate the repercussions of the lack of coal. Before the war, I got back any meat, the ration is about two ounces, or cheese, or butter, and no oil. No one gets the full value of his coupons. The French people's sufferings do not communicate by the sight or the Germans getting hold of every available thing. A Civilian, in one day, gets the equivalent of a Frenchman's ration for a fortnight. Everything is not even allowed to consume her own food.

The people of Marseilles can get no fruit with oranges, coffee, cocoa, bananas and dates, arriving from the French Empire, being unloaded and exported immediately to Germany. Even dried fruit, dates, used Winter, they actually got back to Germany. It is impossible to describe the famine which has arrived in a town used to plenty of food. Queues for the French to eat. Dates went to feed the Germans. Fruit, vegetables, do not be had the whole Winter.

Many articles of clothing are not to be found. Cotton wool you can't get. I have seen a baby two months too early and there was no cotton wool for it. Into the baby's mouth they put a piece of rag. Of course their home was not heated. The baby was born at 11 and 2 p.m. in a workman's with wet going to have a baby. Of course their home was not heated. The baby was born at 11 and 2 p.m. in a workman's with wet going to have a baby. Of course their home was not heated. The baby was born at 11 and 2 p.m. in a workman's with wet going to have a baby. Of child died of cold.

Lots of people die because they cannot get an ambulance in time to be operated upon. How do you like that, Mr. Goebbels, and feel shame the Germans?

The lack of coal also prevents people from travelling. A journey is a very long one, and there are no longer on absolute necessity nobody ever moves. Trains are very scarce and over-crowded. Besides the Germans have only left antique engines and old, narrow-gauge railways to France.

But what people will never forgive is that every form of physical and moral pressure has disappeared under Nazi occupation. The press and the radio are entirely under German control, and only another means for their propaganda. Even the cinema is full of Nazi films. Even theatre-parts, and it is impossible to wear the tricolour cockade without an "auvergne" deliver.

Paris, the capital of France, is dying and yet in the hope of obtaining the famous permit, but the Germans have not removed. A more terrible fate cannot exist. For instance, I was condemned to life in Lyons; she is in Paris, but she cannot go to her; unless she has a death certificate. Of course if you have money and how you can get the necessary papers, because there is not one thing you cannot get for a German, but most of the people pass fraudulently.

The standard or living has been considerably reduced there and Germans' arrival, and I can assure you without exaggeration that all over occupied Europe man's life is to eat a square meal, to keep warm, and only dream of that for a long time. It seems sad that the Twentieth Century should bring us back the Middle Ages' aims. Every action is watched, every word is overheard, and there is always the shadow of the prison and the prison camp. But still the people can not be crushed.

In addition "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington" was an enormous success in uncoupled France. It ran there until it was stopped. Why? Because people again and again went just to hear the declaration or the rights of man. They applauded endlessly, although all demonstrations of this kind were forbidden. And so soon as that feature of the film was over they walked out. You see they still think they have rights in my country."

Things May Believe But Which Really Are False

(By Walter Monfried in The Milwaukee Journal).

This all started with the argument about the Mason-Dixon line.

A half dozen persons gave their ideas, and all of them were pretty hazy. They guessed that it was a boundary of imaginary line between the northern and southern states. Well, the Mason and Dixon line happens to be the southern boundary of Pennsylvania, the dictionary ultimately revised to the Ohio river. It was laid out around 1767 by the British astronomers Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, and isn't an imaginary line at all. Long after 1783 it became the boundary of free and slave states.

As popular notions go, it was pure accident that we know about the Mason and Dixon line. They are, in fact, many historically more there than with hundreds of other lines which are accepted as gospel.

Normandie to Carry Men to War —If The War Lasts Long Enough

By JOHN A. MORGOO

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—The scene is in the bowels of the monster liner Normandie . . . now a half-deck built of steel.

Grimy workmen with sandhog helmets Frank Mr. There is the rank smell of muddy, stagnant water and oil.

It is a crazy, unreal situation because the 82,423-ton pride of the pre-war French merchant marine is on her side with 60 feet of water above her and 60 feet of stripped hull. Everything is half upside down and you feel as if you are walking sideways.

"Our workers have to get cockeyed to work," says Fire Marshal Cmdr. William A. Sullivan, the navy's boss salvage man.

He was right. Walking through a horizontal elevator shaft, looking at a ceiling with ceiling rail rolled over on her port side in the Hudson river slip on West 48th Street.

She was the largest queen of the sea ever to be "converted" to full position and the salvage job was complicated by her unique design in the river. Besides the slip and the lack of space between piers. The vessel's length of 1,028 feet made her too long to use pontoons and other devices employed by Big Jacks.

Sullivan and his 580 workmen—men from Merritt-Chapman and Scott and navy divers — say going to refloat the Normandie will be that he calls "the method of controlled pumping."

This method calls for sealing up the ship from stem to stern into watertight compartments. When this is done, she will be pumped out slowly and the monstrous vessel will rise again.

That is theoretically.

The task is stupendous, First the superstructure must be cut away and moved and that below the water is being removed. Then will come the ship's centre of gravity.

That steel must be cut away and sent to the steel mills as scrap.

To divide the ship into watertight sections the divers are putting in wooden bulkheads supported with steel and concrete in another monumental task. These bulkheads are being put in the ship and are put in place by 100-odd divers who have to work entirely by touch.

The 60 feet of water covering the port side is too much for use of lights so these divers work in the dark.

Sullivan could not say when raising operations will start but various estimates put it at another year.

Part of her fit will have to be cut off before pumping starts to prevent the ship from rolling over completely.

The actual raising will be a ticklish task . . . a juggling of pressures and weights. The ship may leap from the water and it may take a month. Every move the ship makes will be checked and watched. She may float before she rights herself and she may roll over suddenly and topple over on her starboard side.

Thousands of blueprints have been made and a 10-foot model of the Normandie was constructed for the divers.

Sullivan is confident that the Normandie will rise again.

"She's a good ship, there will be little left of the once proud ship. She has been stripped clean to the bare and she is a good ship," he said.

After a shipyard will take charge and she will float again. Then she will have is a hull and the engines, but she will be ready for service. It all have to be gone over.

Sullivan and his crews are settled at the east of the job but he did say that it would be cheaper to have building a new ship of the same size.

Learn Work Underwater.

Everything down here is rust and mud. Even the sides of the ship gives you the impression that they are rusty. float again.

Sullivan says she will rise slowly until she reaches a level where she will dip on to her keel.

On the pier he has set up a diving school where there is a scarcity of divers — particularly men who know mechanics. The Navy rigged up a diving tank and other equipment and if training men who will be invaluable in the future.

Divers going into the Normandie they dive alongside the pier and hands in the underwater, a man was down there cutting a heavy piece of steel with a hacksaw. Another was given the making of a bulkhead here and his job was to send up a completed box. He did it in amazing time.

Every diver, tender, or the underwater section of the ship was in the navy. Each man going into Normandie will carry soldiers to war . . . perhaps to the land where she was born.

RUSSIANS SMASH DEEP INTO STALINGRAD FRONT

Two Railway Lines Used by Germans Straddled by Reds

Aggressive Motion Carries Red Army More Than 50 Miles In Some Sectors

SWEEPING OFFENSIVE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Nov. 23 (AP)—A mighty Red Army counter-offensive sprung from the northwest and south of Stalingrad has put thousands of Germans to rout, the Russians reported today, and the Nazi forces which have besieged the Volga city nearly five months virtually were pictured as facing disastrous encirclement.

Broken German divisions were declared fleeing across the frozen steppes before the arms of Russian infantrymen, guns and tanks in the greatest Soviet offensive of the year, adding new casualties to the 28,000 Nazis reported killed and captured in the past few days.

Here is the story of the drive, as given in official Soviet announcements and in warfront dispatches:

Already the Germans have been killed and more than 13,000 captured in the encircling movement that began Thursday.

Soviet armored divisions were declared to be standing astride the railway lines used by the Germans to supply their forces in the Stalingrad battle from the Caucasus.

The offensive, it was said, with a one-hour artillery barrage as the signal for the attack, is being ceased only isolated enemy guns from the Soviet infantry and tanks thus piled through the German front lines to the enemy's rear, which stretches into the open steppes.

The German front line was outflanked by the forcing of the Russian offensive, dispatches said. Divisions started to pour in and guns and mortars piled up as the Red Army carried the advance as far as 45 miles at some points.

"During the night of Nov. 22-23 our troops in the Stalingrad area continued to carry out successful operations continued to move forward," the mid-day Russian communique said.

SHOTGUN FIRED AT TRAINING PLANE

Two R.C.A.F. Airmen Are Injured Near Leamington —Police Conduct Search for Person Who Fired Shot

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 22 —(CP)—Police today conducted an extensive search for a man who fired a shotgun at an R.C.A.F. training school plane near Leamington, injuring the two men in the plane.

Students at the elementary flying training school at Windsor, Sgt. Allen Reynolds and Sgt. Lyall James, are in hospital now as a result of the incident but are not seriously injured. One is said to have received 15 shots in the eye, elbow and other parts of the body.

The plane was flying low when the shots were fired.

Police Captain Stops Escapee

Montreal, Nov. 23—(CP)—Police Captain Joseph Isabelle, stopped an escaping prisoner Saturday night but came out second-best in the verse for year. Albert Ratte, 17, was being booked at detective headquarters on a charge of shoplifting when he bolted down the stairway.

Cries of "stop him, stop him!" followed the fugitive down the stairway and Isabelle with drawn gun rushed from his office in pursuit. At the exit of the building he crashed through a heavy door, rolled down the stairway and seized his prey before he could reach the street.

Capt. Isabelle was badly cut about the head and was hurried away was taken to hospital for treatment, but neither required to close a gash on the forehead.

RAF Pilot Shoots Down Nazi Plane in Nine Mile High Battle

London, Nov. 23 (CP)—An amazing air battle nine miles above the Mediterranean which ended with a 40-year-old ted pilot in a special Spitfire shooting down a German high-altitude Junkers-88, was reported today by the Air Ministry news service.

The pilot was Flying Officer Reginald Keys Colsey who won the confidence of Egyptian airdrome after vapor trails of the high-flying enemy plane were sighted. He climbed to 40,000 feet, then to 50,000 feet in 30 minutes.

The temperature in the cockpit fell to 47 below zero and all the plane's instruments were coated with ice. Reynolds finally caneased, with his plane's controls frozen and his engine "red-lining" from weakness and pain, struggled on. He suddenly sighted the German 100 yards away.

Reynolds tried to fire his guns but his hands were stiff with cold. His army paralyzed, and the German machine gunner fired at him.

The Kenyan who had then been flying an hour above the enemy in his plane, forced by manipulating his weight and followed the Junkers far back over the Mediterranean.

Finally, Reynolds managed to thaw his frozen hands enough to open guns. Then the German's starboard engine burst into flames and the craft spiralled down into the sea.

As Reynolds glided for home, he saw over another 20 miles a whole Aegean Sea with the island of Crete "like a map in a puddle" far below him. On his right he looked beyond Benghazi to the Gulf of Sirte. On the left was the entire length of Palestine to Lebanon and Syria. Over the distance was the Egyptian coast, and Reynolds could see over the Nile Delta to Cairo and beyond Cairo.

The length of the Suez Canal from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea was open to his glance.

Reynolds has been awarded the Distinguished, Flying Cross for his exploit.

Capt. Rickenbacker, During 3 Weeks On Raft, Never Doubted His Survival

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 23 (AP)—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, 52, survivor of 24 days on a rubber raft, said he never doubted during his three weeks on a tiny rubber raft in the South Pacific that he and his companions would be rescued.

The United States flying ace of the First Great War cited his own religion as the buoying influence during days of ordeal after the big army plane in which he was flying to Australia crashed in the night of Nov. 11.

Secretary Henry Stimson went down with the plane, but he said:

"I hold to the golden rule and I believe most firmly that if you live it you will be paid back by truly knows and feels in his heart, that he cannot go wrong and is possessed of religion enough to get by in any mans land," says Rickenbacker, who has survived the perils of auto racing, shot down 21 enemy planes in aerial combat, and was badly hurt in the crackup of an airliner.

Rickenbacker was one of the rescue party which found the wreckage of the rear hull, nor of the raw fish we caught," he said. He explained it was the fear of being mad and the fear of illness that made him forego the fare. He said the others ate the raw fish and gulls but didn't get sick at the sight of them and was buried at sea—was brought to Pearl harbor from an atoll somewhere in stomach".

10-YEAR-OLD GIRL IS SHOT DEAD NEAR BRIGHTON

Grandmother Wounded In Face—Grandfather, John Semple, Missing, Sought by Police

BOAT FOUND UPTURNED

Members of Provincial Police and townspeople are scouring Brighton Bay and the wooded area on Presqu'ile Point near there, police said today.

For John Semple, 60, who it is alleged killed his granddaughter, Betty Semple, 10, and seriously wounded his wife, Mrs. May Semple, 50, when a shotgun was placed through the window of the home of Everett Semple, a son, at Gosport, near Brighton, late Saturday night.

Firing one blast, the man charge entering the face of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Semple, a few stray pellets entered the heart of the grandaughter, Elizabeth Semple. Mrs. Semple is in Belleville General Hospital and seven stitches in her face were given her on Sunday in an effort to save her life but there was no hope for the child, known as "only Betty."

Within an hour of the shooting, a skiff belonging to Louis Semple, a son of the bereaved man, was found upturned on the shore at Indian Point directly across Brighton Bay, a mile from the scene of the shooting but from the condition in which it was found, it is believed by the police that Semple may have drowned before the boat reached shore or that he beached it and later committed suicide by walking into the wooded area at the scene of the beaching.

Conduct Inquiry Into Catastrophe

Toronto, Nov. 23 (CP)—Hon. Gordon Conant, Premier of Ontario and Minister of Mines, today directed Dr. Smirle Lawson, supervising coroner for Ontario to conduct an inquest into deaths of five men killed at the Falls Steel plant, Welland, last week when a roof collapsed. The inquest will be held Dec. 2 at Welland.

Mr. Conant said he had been informed that Mr. Lawson had met with Mr. Gordon Conant, Minister of Munitions and Supply G. D. Howe that his department was conducting the inquiry. Mr. Lawson in his investigation. Mr. Conant added, will be assisted by Mr. Pigott in the matter. Mr. Pigott is a letter to Mr. Howe from Mr. Lebanon Pigott, the company's part had failed to disclose the cause of the catastrophe.

"Every precaution was taken by me over the whole Falls to us," Mr. Pigott stated, "as it is my right in seeking to establish before the public the cause of the fall. The one who was responsible for this calamity would have been a shock to our whole organization."

All Italian Ports On Adriatic Fortified By Gestapo, Report

London, Nov. 23 —(AP)— A series of roundabout and unconfirmed reports from the continent and the Near East said today that Hitler has sent 60,000 "tourists" and agents of Gestapo secret into Italy to prop up sagging Fascist morale and to build coastal fortifications against possible Allied invasion.

Two, the Russian news agency, and diplomatic sources in Ankara were the sources of these reports, while Reuters News Agency distributed another dispatch from the Turkish capital quoting travelers arriving from Italy as saying a movement for a separate peace had been started under the leadership of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Mussolini's "unofficial opponent."

The tourists were alleged to have been filtering into Italy for the last three months, while Tass said the Gestapo men had been rushed to following the loss of Libya and North Africa.

According to the Reuters account, an anti-Fascist group headed by Badoglio and the Duke of Enfidaville, approached the Vatican to negotiate, with the full knowledge of King Vittorio Emanuele, Crown Prince Umberto and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Il Duce's son-in-law and foreign minister. Reuters said the Vatican had declined and quarreled violently with Ciano.

Dispatches from Stockholm, Sweden, last April 26 said there has been Rome consultation of S.S. top men in which Mussolini and Ciano were left out. At that time it was said a government of Pietro and a "change of policy" might be forthcoming. Badoglio's name was mentioned in those reports.

Added to today's flood of unconfirmed reports was one by Tass under a Geneva datelines and broadcast by the Soviet radio stating "a well-informed source" saying that Hitler has ordered "heads of Nazi police forces, was speeding up organization of the Italian S.S. Legion in which Mussolini and Ciano were left out. At that time it was said a government of Pietro and a "change of policy" might be forthcoming. Badoglio's name was mentioned in those reports.

"Italian troops are being rushed to strengthen the island," Tass said this account. "Anti-aircraft guns are being hurried from Sardinia, Corsica and other industrial cities in the north to ward off expected air attacks from Malta and, in the near future, from Tunisia.

"Anti-paralyzing subroises are being rehearsed in the interior and a number of persons, mostly men of persons with dangerous thoughts and tendencies, have been arrested might prove useful to the enemy.

"Italian small craft have been requisitioned for 'emergencies' which presumably include the possibility of an evacuation Sicily."

JAP DESTROYER SUNK, 19 ENEMY PLANES SMASHED

Allied Noose About Buna Base Slowly Drawing Tight

JAPS POUNDED

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Nov. 22 —(AP)— Australian and American airmen went into battle against the Japanese forces making a desperate stand on the Beaches of the Buna area in northeast New Guinea yesterday and when the smoke cleared it had been established that Lieutenant-General Hyotaro Imamura, destroyed 19 enemy planes and smashed two small landing boats, in addition to giving Japanese ground troops a severe pounding.

The Japanese were fighting back bitterly from their precarious positions on the coast, but the besieged Japanese forces there and reports from Headquarters indicated that troops may actually have been withdrawn from the area.

However, a spokesman at headquarters said: "No withdrawal was in operating with four other Japanese destroyers to attempt to reinforce the Buna garrison. This destroyer is still steaming at high speed northwest when last seen, he said.

Allies Move In

Moving in after the Allied fliers had softened up enemy ground positions to a terrific pounding, Allied troops advanced on the landing strip at Buna from the enemy, rear, while Australians were attacking the Buna Mission, one mile from Buna and the main base of the Japs in the sector of the village.

The Australians, after attacking Japanese positions at Gona, 13 miles along the coast, have been furiously for several days, were believed to have reached the mouth of the Gona River, but the exact situation there was obscure.

10 BOMBERS MISSING

London, Nov. 22 —(CP)— The German industrial and communications centre of Stuttgart was attacked Sunday night by a strong force of British bombers, and the Air Ministry said that pre-war observation showed that the results were excellent.

"Ten of our bombers are missing," the Ministry said.

Stuttgart, Stuttgart followed an earlier fighter foray by an R.A.F. fighter command against targets in the Netherlands.

At least two Canadians were on special reconnaissance duties during the Stuttgart attack, it was learned here today. Donald and the other H. K. Stinson of Toronto, captain of a Hudson bomber, remained over the city during most of the operation.

Stinson said many fires were burning when he left and one was there was "really a huge inferno." The Hudson was met with fire and punched by what apparently was a German anti-aircraft battery.

F./O. F. R. Wheaton of Vancouver, a bomb aimer making his first trip was terrified by the explosions which he described simply as a "crash job."

MANOEUVRE TO CLOSE TRAP UPON TUNIS-BIZERTE REGION

Weekend Clashes Cut German Power By Air and Ground In All Sectors

MANY PLANES DOWNED

By E. C. DANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 23 (AP)—The British, 1st Army, with American and French support, was reported today to have launched a big attack against the German-Italian forces defending the defence perimeter of Bizerte and Tunis where Marshal Erwin Rommel, once the German master of African-desert warfare, was said to be in command or perhaps a part of his African corps.

The radio in Allied-held Morocco said prisoners had been brought in as a result of the Allied attacks which the Allies have been preparing for a week and Berlin broadcasts hinted that Rommel had transferred his headquarters and fighting zones of his African corps.

Previously the British and American forces had streamed across North Africa by hundreds of miles in a race to get control of Tunisia's middle Mediterranean ports which would provide the best defenses in the northern tip of the French protectorate, and radio Morocco quoted an Allied spokesman as saying that attacks were going on in violence.

The broadcast said that one flank was "firmly held south of the coast and that the engagement remained unchanged."

Allied spokesmen were quoted as saying that the German and Italian forces were well established with a strong air force at Bizerte and of the Morocco radio announcement this morning.

Meanwhile, Allied forces are being actively brought south of the Tunisian border in the whole of the Axis occupied positions. The first prisoners have been brought down to the rear".

Mr. Klein said that eliminations and restrictions imposed last March and November have saved the equivalent of many thousands of yards of material which, when put to use, would serve our purpose.

Since that time, he added, there has developed a shortage of all types of labor for essential war industries, and the Board has had the duty charged with the responsibility of conserving such non-essential consumer goods so that manpower presently at work may be directed effectively to vital industries.

The new order assures a straight silhouette in fashionable dress and skimpy effects and flattering to the figure. Under the new orders adequate provision is made for simple fitting coats and suits, tailored and shirring, and a sufficient color range.

No garments other than women's or children's hats may be fashioned in more than four shades. And no chapeau may be made in more than six shades, if of straw, or in more than 10 if of felt and fabric. Fur trimmings on women's and children's hats are restricted entirely.

Jack Embury, Native of Belleville, Killed on Active Service Overseas; Was Radio Technician in R.C.A.F.

Relatives Receive Sad Tidings by Telegram From Ottawa and Cable From Overseas Last Week-End; Boyhood Chums, F/O. George Pepper, Lost Their Lives on Same Day — Jack Embury Has Been Overseas Since Early Summer of 1941 — Former Sergeant in Argyll (Hasty) Battalion

John Henry Cameron Embury, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace D. Embury, 302A William Street, Belleville, radio technician in the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas, was killed on active service on Tuesday, October 17th, it was learned in a telegram from Ottawa to the wife of the young man, who is also the only grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron of Foxboro.

Details are not known at present but the R.C.A.F. has been in communication with patrol duty in Britain. He held the rank of corporal. It is also learned that he had been posted for his commission, although the date of his promotion is not known.

Lifelong friends of F/O. Geo. Pepper and "Jack" was a boyhood friend of F/O. George T. Pepper, who was also killed overseas on the same day, according to the same cable. "Jack" Embury, being 26, having been born in the first year of the First World War. The similarity of fate in the lives and the strangeness of fate is that both Jack Embury and George Pepper lost their lives on the same days. Both were associated with motorcycling a number of years ago and members of the same club. When George Pepper went to England in 1937, Jack became secretary-treasurer of the Belleville Cycle Club.

When overseas Jack kept up his associations with George by mail and in October Jack spent his leave with him with the pledge that he would spend his next leave with George. That leave had not come and the tragic bereavement of their intimate relationship lasted to the final moment of their lives and in truth in their deaths they were not divided for they lost their lives on the same day.

Born in Belleville in 1914, "Jack" was educated in the public school and collegiate. He was early interested in radio and was one of the first boys to set up a broadcasting station from which messages were picked up in Morse. That was, of course, long before the days of the present war. His technical and practical knowledge made him a sort of technical adviser even while he was a student at the Collegiate. He took a radio college course and became a thoroughly expert in all matters of the science.

He helped in the installation of the Belleville police radio system and was one of the last men to leave that station after the set had been installed by Arthur Snook, merchant of police.

After leaving the Collegiate, Jack was associated with his father in the job printing business but he maintained his interest in the progress of modern scientific inventions.

In June, 1941, he went to Manning Pool at Toronto and on account of his technical skill he was overseas in two months. Prior to his letters home he never mentioned having been in the service, but in answer to his parents' letters he would say that he was all right and couldn't tell them or tell them not to worry about him.

He was married in 1939 to Miss Gertrude Mylchreest, daughter of Mrs. Mylchreest and the late Mr. Mylchreest of Belleville. He leaves besides his wife, a family of three children, Mrs. Embury, sixteen years old; Dale Marie, four years, and David Charles, three years. Besides his parents he has two sisters, Mrs. R. J. Hall of Belleville, and Miss Marie, at home.

A young man of engaging personality and exceptional in every task that came to hand, he will be deeply missed by a host of friends. During the days when the Belleville Cycle Club was at its height he was tireless in every effort on the club's behalf. At one time or another members of the club, remarked today, "whatever position a radio or mechanic came before him he did not rest until it was filled. He was wholehearted in everything he undertook". He was also a keen sportsman and a fascinating, kindly and sympathetic.

Jack made many friends here and he made friends overseas. A proof of this gift of making friends was seen on Saturday when a cable arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Embury offering them sincere sympathy in their sorrow. It was from Inverness, Scotland, where Jack Embury had visited at times on his leave.

Special Programs At Bridge St. Church

Sea Cadets Attend Service, Mr. Winston Curry, Gospel Singer, Presents Program

Belleville Sea Cadets Corps with A. P. Westley, C.O., paraded to the evening service at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday where two reels of motion pictures with sound effect were shown, entitled "Heroes of the Atlantic" and "Life on a Corvette". The pictures, peculiarly fitting as the sea cadets were present, were graphic illustrations of the life and service on the sea.

Mr. Winston Curry, the gospel singer of Montreal sang one of his numbers "My Anchor Holds" during the service.

After the regular service a large congregation remained to hear Mr. Curry sing an entire program of gospel hymns and several psalms. Many of the hymns were sung accompanied by way of impressive reading. The singer who possesses a voice of fine range and great power creates an atmosphere of deep devotion in the church. He is in charge of this program and gave unsparingly of his great voice during the whole half hour. The hundreds who heard him last evening pronounced many of the have heard his gospel hymn broadcasts and they can understand the charm in this form of worship. Not only does Mr. Curry possess a voice of great flexibility but he also has an effective reading voice.

Rev. Dr. Semple, pastor, expressed the gratitude and appreciation of the congregation to the singer for his coming up from Montreal to sing at the service.

MANOEUVRE TO

French reports told of attempted Axis infiltrations in South-Tunisia and other reports told of Allied headquarters in North Africa said similar tactics have been attempted from the north, where the main Axis forces have been landed by sea and air.

These suggested that Rommel was attempting from the north where the main Axis forces have been landed by sea and air.

These suggested that Rommel was attempting to outflank Allied forces from Tripolitania against the British and American columns converging on the northern tip of Tunisia.

Dispatched Seem Troops

If Rommel has split his forces, it was presumed here that he had dispatched some armored units from Tripoli, either overland or by sea, to Gabes or Sfax on the East Tunisian coast.

Both the south and southeast of the region of the main Allied forces, driving eastward from Algeria, but pro-Allied French forces in Algiers reported the presence among men of the boast and, according to French North African reports, the British and American forces had joined these French troops.

A North African broadcast, quoting a pro-Axis source, said Commander Leclerc and German infiltration units had been thrown out of the region of Gafsa, where Leclerc and other infiltrations were being attempted, as far north as Kairouan, 75 miles south of Tunis.

Berlin Radio Consoling

The Berlin radio, in a consoling tone, thus referred to Rommel:—

"Rommel's withdrawal has exchanged a useless strip of desert for a battleware with the European continent. Axis reports from Africa clearly Rommel's strategical genius than this month."

as he realized the enemy's intentions.

"In this way the balance has shifted from the Egyptian-Libyan desert's African corps now has taken up positions prepared beforehand."

A commentator, Arnold Zeitz said his forces in Libya were pushed back, Rommel succeeded in saving El Agheila bottleneck, the last good place for a stand short of Tripoli.

While Axis announcements indicated that Algiers and Tripoli and all there were under frequent air attack, West African headquarters said there was no confirmation that the Axis bases at Tripoli, Tunis and Bizerte had been heavily bombed by American four-motored bombers, Allied medium bombers and twin-engined fighters attacking from both east and west.

American Flying Fortresses and pursuit planes of Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's command blasted hangars and warehouses of the German-occupied airfield at Tunis Saturday and destroyed nine Messerschmitt Messerschmitt 1095 which offered combat, it was announced at Allied headquarters in North Africa.

The bombers accounted for three of the Axis planes. In, action for the first time against the Germans, the pursuit planes shot down one and drove off the remainder. Allied observers took this performance as an indication they are equal to the best in the Nazi air force.

Heavy damage was declared inflicted on the armored column by one of the British advance detachments moving along the northern coast of Tunisia toward Bizerte and the Germans were forced back. A headquarters spokesman said elsewhere that, area are "covering" heavier."

No Details Given

The communique did not give details and there was similar reference to the successful counter-attack against Allied Frenchmen, "in spite of relatively severe losses," against two vigorous German attacks. Apparently referring to the latter action, an unconfirmed report broke from the front that Nazis and French forces had repulsed a local enemy drive "on the western front" with the loss of four tanks and captured prisoners.

The Moscow radio also declared that "German detachments coming from Tripolitania attempted to outflank the Allied forces from the south, crossed the (eastern) Tunisian frontier and infiltrated behind the rear of Gafsa, whereupon an Allied belt at the waist of the Tunisian peninsula."

A communique from French general headquarters in Algiers also declared enemy infiltrations had developed "from the south-east front to western Tunisia between Gafsa and Kairouan, the latter only 75 miles south of Tunis.

Operate as Guerillas

A French counter-attack was reported to have driven one of these groups from the Gafsa oasis, 40 miles south of the Algerian border and 180 miles southwest of Tunis.

"There was no effort were as to the strength of the attacks," it said. Marshal Erwin Rommel would seek to consolidate the remnants of his Afrika corps with the fresh Axis regiments hastily forced into Tunisia by the Nazi commanders obviously had that possibility in mind.

Operating in guerilla fashion, French patrols worked behind the Axis lines to disrupt enemy positions.

German and Italian communiques, claiming the Axis forces still holds and supply lines were under repeated attacks by Allied boat and bomber.

Three-Hits Scored

The Germans, without confirmation, claimed the destruction of three German submarine scored three torpedo hits on a warship Tripoli and also torpedoed two freighters and a destroyer in the Mediterranean. Italians reported their submarines had sunk a ship of large tonnage in the Philippeville, Algeria.

In Libya, the British 8th Army's mobile formations wheeled around the shore of the Gulf of Sirte between Agedabia and El Agheila in the effort to complete the trap for the withdrawing columns of Rommel's men.

Allied planes loosed bombs by the hundreds on the Axis Tripoli, shrouding that potential escape port in smoke and lurid flashes of explosions from an ignited munitions dump.

North African observers expressed belief the Germans had established defensive positions around Tunis, and Bizerte, backed by large numbers of guns and having advance parties estimated last week to total 10,000 men.

Have 25-Mile Range

Vice-Admiral Emile Mustlier, former Commander-in-Chief of the fighting French navy, established in London the Axis would need between 30,000 and 50,000 troops to man Bizerte properly, but said that if they became well established the base would be only before an overwhelming force.

He said Bizerte coastal batteries had a 25-mile range and that "hundreds" of machine guns "every strong" when he was in command there from 1937 to 1937. However, German and Italian armistice commissions are reported to have stripped much of the heavy work aystematically since 1940 to minimize the possibility of French revolt.

Take 4—Manoeuvre 99ymer b

Par behind the Allied lines, United States and French patrols rounded up dozens of parachutists and scores of enemy agents at the naval base of Oran, Allied Headquarters of the French Foreign Legion, and other Allied forces. United States military authorities announced the arrest of 32 within 1-2 hours of continuing raids at Oran.

Pacific organization had been arrested in Casablanca, United States headquarters announced.

The German radio said Pierre Laval, dictator of the Vichy government who advocated a French-German collaboration, is in Paris and Friday night, is expected to announce "important decisions" today.

TWO RAILWAY

In a special communique issued last night the Russians announced that a Red Army force pressing the Moscow-Vyazma railway had reached and occupied Sychevka, 80 miles east of Rzhev, while another column striking southward of the city had reached the railroad town of Ageyevo.

Other successful position on a wide stretch of the long front Russian troops had won today, with the killing some 1,000 enemy soldiers and the capturing of the Nazi city, Leningrad and southwestern front, in addition to those killed in the Stalingrad offensive.

Two companies of Germans were wiped out in the encircling of Stalingrad when the Russians attacked two attacks, the communique said.

Along the route of the two-pronged drive two German storm battalions were reported routed with considerable loss of men and much material captured.

Around Stalingrad," the communique said, "our troops continue to advance inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. About 800 German officers and men were killed and wounded and 70 machine guns were captured."

Companies Dispersed

Russian artillery, it was reported, destroyed and dispersed a strong points in the Nalchik area of the Caucasus and annihilated two companies of infantry.

On the northwestern front, Red Army troops took a fortified point from the Germans and killed about 100 soldiers. In the Leningrad sectors killed 400 more in two days of fighting, the communique said.

But the main Russian attack was in the Stalingrad area where Germans have suffered most this year, the communique indicated.

"The avenging hour has struck at Stalingrad," the Moscow radio said today, quoting avuilarly from Pravda.

Hour Has Struck

"This latest defeat of the German armies before the Red Army has the strength not only to thwart the enemy plans but to bring him completely."

The special communique, summing up the fighting on all the troops continues," was signed off with a flourish of martial music.

The German position at Stalingrad was in dire peril as by the two-pronged Russian offensive, but fighting continued in a factory district of the city yesterday, the midnight communique reported. An enemy infantry and tank attack there was thrown back and in another sector a counterattack by the Russians destroyed 30 tanks during the day.

4,000 Prisoners Taken

Dozens of inhabited localities have been occupied by the southern column of the advancing Red army troops and 8,000 prisoners were taken, the midnight communique said. These prisoners crippled much were included by the special communique which covered a three-day period.

The costly struggle in the Caucasus continued and the Russians claimed that a number of counter-attacks were repulsed and 200 enemy soldiers killed. In another sector the Russians advanced and occupied a factory.

On Eastern Bank of Don

Kalach, in peace time, was a city of 40,000 inhabitants, stands perched on the Volga from the Caspian Sea to Stalingrad were shipped by rail to the Don River and then transferred to river boats going down the Don to the Volga city is on the eastern bank of the Don.

The two Soviet forces, astride the only two railway lines available to the Nazis for supplying the German armies through Salsk and Krasnodar to Novorossisk, all three cities now in German hands.

14 LIVES[1] CLAIMED

SIR S. CRIPPS

Mr. Churchill said that the production of aircraft and the development of the air services were at the very heart of our affairs," and that Sir Stafford Cripps would join the Aircraft Production council.

In accepting the offer, Sir Stafford told the House of Commons that my services are of course entirely at the disposal of the country and you are the judge how best I can be utilized. . . It would, I feel, be inappropriate for me to remain a member of the war cabinet in view of the relationship between the Minister of Production and the Supply Minister and I therefore readily agree to relinquish my seat in the war cabinet."

Reshaffle Posts

Since Sir Stafford was Lord Privy Seal, he sat in the House of Commons and member of the War Cabinet, his chief responsibility being to co-ordinate civil and defence.

Into the War Cabinet, the government's inner circle, will enter other Labor man, vigorous and progressive Herbert Morrison, who for years has been marked as a potential Labor prime minister in the event of Labor regaining power. He retained his posts as Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden will take on additional duties of Leader of the House.

Sir Stafford's office as Lord Privy Seal went to Viscount Cranborne, Colonial Secretary. The latter portfolio went to Maj. Oliver Stanley, who in the past has held many of ministerial posts — Transport, Labor, President of the Board of Trade, and War.

Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of the Board of Trade, and War.

Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, was made Resident Minister in charge of supply matters, representing the Minister of Production in the War Cabinet.

Sir Stafford's star shone the brightest in March.

He was a public hero. He had a successful mission to Soviet Russia behind him; he was a bright new figure in the War Cabinet; a right him, full of hope, was a mission to India. Cripps is to ascertain how Britain's rule and India's role in the war effort.

No authority of the India problem was reached. Sir stafford returned unsuccessful.

Rumors for Some Time

The political correspondent of the Daily Mirror says the appointment of a 'lesser ministerial post would cause more astonishment and speculation in political circles than if he had been given one of the Cabinet altogether.

"Rumors of his coming back have been for some time that he has not seen eye to eye with other members of the Cabinet on matters of some importance, particularly those dealing with post-war reconstruction."

The newspaper said editorially that it hoped his new appointment would be "strictly temporary" and that he would return to a leading place in the government.

Sir Stafford's appointment created such comment by declaring in his letter to Sir Stafford: "Although at present I know you would not be influenced by that."

10-YEAR-OLD GIRL

Visiting with Sue

Mrs. Ferrell was visiting with her son, Everett Semple on Saturday night, Mr. Semple stated that Mrs. Ferrell and he alleged he returned home shortly before 9 o'clock and that Sue was in bed and asleep. He said that Mrs. Semple is she was going home. "I will be over in the forenoon," Mrs. Semple was said to have replied. Semple left the house and went to the garage. He then heard through the window killing the little girl. "I thought somebody was my grandmother seriously. Neighbors hearing the shot, came to the house and as soon as the police arrived Mrs. Semple was taken to headquarters.

Alfred Semple, a nephew, who lives close by, said that Everett was in bed and heard the shot but thought it was a backfire from a car.

He went to the window and saw a man running toward the garage. Semple called out, "I put on my underwear and ran to Everett's house. Alfred Semple said, "and in the house was utter confusion. Everett Semple said had happened and he said 'Pa has just shot mother and Sue.' I went downstairs and saw a man rowing a small stiff very fast away from the dock. I did not know who it was. I could see the gun in his hand. I was afraid to use it useless to follow without being armed.

No Reason for Jealousy

Apparently the missing man had been jealous of his wife for some time as he is reported to have according to information received and Everett Semple stated he was afraid he might do something violent. His son, Louis, asked him about a week ago about the whereabouts of the gun believed missing. He absolutely denied that he had it and told his son that he had thrown it into the bay.

Mrs. Semple was taken to the hospital in Belleville where she died.

Semple had been in the employ of Mr. Ferrell for the past 10 years. He is 50 years of age.

Mrs. Semple is a native of Ireland and has been in Canada for 30 years. She is 45 years of age.

Semple will be charged with murder when he appears in court on Tuesday.

BRITISH BOMBERS

Flight Command aircraft attacked freight trains in Northern France and fired on Axis supply ship in the English Channel, further blows against Hitler's "European fortress."

The Berlin radio quoted a DNB dispatch which said Stuttgart's damage had caused slight damage in one section of the city, makers of the Bosch magneto.

The capital of Wuerttemberg was hit by an apparently 400 miles southeast of Stuttgart, a city of electrical industries, it was attacked by night in succession by the R.A.F. last May.

In North Africa

It is recalled that Ludendorff stated years ago that the fate of the next war may be decided in North Africa. German propaganda now must have difficulty today to try to match with its lies, treachery and perversion of truth and fact the onward march and achievements of the United Nations on the African front and on the Atlantic and Pacific and on the Russian fronts.

It is a great moment with the resurgence of United Nations spirit, and strength. It has come so quickly, not by chance, but by the perfect co-ordination of Allied effort at the crucial hour when Hitler and his henchman Mussolini have their hands more than full and with a front so wide that it is showing up weaknesses of the Axis machine. The two major events in North Africa have stretched the Axis lines to the limit.

North Africa will be written as a great factor in the history of the war.

Axis Powers in Same Boat

Japan by her treachery and guile had an early opportunity to build an empire and conquer by aggression when the United Nations were much occupied. The Nipponese might even have grinned and made Hitler uncomfortable as he thought of his Russian fiasco last winter. The Japanese thought they were going to show how to win quickly an empire and a new order for the Orient by snatching and enslaving the east.

Inside a year the situation has changed and the treacherous Japs have something to worry over just as Hitler has had much to worry over since his speed stalled after the collapse of France. Japan likewise in a year is finding her plans going all awry.

Both aggressors are in the one boat, in which Mussolini found himself also within six months of his treachery against France and Britain. The three Axis partners may well carry an anxious look for they are doomed. Italy has lost all her empire as she allied it, Germany was first up against the stout sea and air wall of Britain, she has been stalled on the Russian front and now is facing the African front. Japan awaits a tremendous licking in the Solomons and in Southwestern New Guinea.

As for Hitler he can surely see appearing and approaching realization, the very thing he dreaded and tried to avoid—full co-ordination of the United Nations as their military program swells to its greatest development.

The look must be dark to the Germans who in May 1940 falsely thought they had just about achieved their goal.

The Axis powers are all alike in their fate which is to be smashed. A giant pincer movement is trapping Italy and Germany and in the Orient the Japanese are having a foretaste of a smashing and crushing defeat with destruction of their Pacific militarism.

These recent weeks have shown the Axis surprises they never expected.

How false the note of the Tokio radio the other day when it described the Nazi occupation of Vichy France as "most friendly, most delightful, most cheerful, most wonderful." Of course the Jap would admire this for the Hun and the Jap are both alike and insincere. It will be a long day before anyone of the United Nations accepts the word of the Japanese on anything.

It is good news to read that French North African troops are joining the Allies the more to toward Tunis. It sounds familiar that the name of French should be so linked with the task of downing the Axis despite Laval's desperate plea to the French nation that it should collaborate with Hitler. The appearance of the North African French is something with a meaning which shows that the day of liberation is ahead for all of occupied Europe.

You will find that the mere resolve not to be useless, and the honest desire to help other people, will, in the quickest and delicatest ways, improve yourself.—Ruskin.

I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults. — Shakespeare.

SALUTE TO THE NAVY!

Celebration of Navy Week in Canada this year marks the pride Canada has in the senior arm of her fighting forces.

Almost 50,000 men today wear the blue of the Royal Canadian Navy. Pipelines of ships of war steam from Canada's ports in quest of the enemy—and steam forth successfully.

Canadians who, a few short years ago, were hardly conscious of the fact that Canada was maintaining any Navy at all, today know that their Navy is playing an important, fighting part in the war at sea. The growth of the Navy to a strength which permits it to act in equal partnership in the Atlantic with the world's two greatest naval powers (Britain and the United States) has been accomplished in three years of conflict during which the major effort, in fact, has been directed toward actual fighting the war at sea.

The growth was accomplished steadily and quickly, without fanfare and without flourish. Those upon whom the direction of the Navy devolved knew the task which lay ahead of them, knew the resources which were at hand, and laid their plans accordingly.

The main duties are to provide ships to safeguard the merchant shipping destined to carry supplies and munitions from the New World to the fighting fronts. There was need too, to provide protection for Canada herself, for her Atlantic and her Pacific coasts. And finally, it was part of the Navy's task to co-operate with the other Navies of the United Nations in seeking out and engaging the enemy.

The need for ships was, from the very beginning, acute. It was a need being experienced everywhere, and Canada was called upon to play her part. Shipyards for the building of the warships which other countries could not supply her. Canadian shipyards rose to the task and from their stocks came a great stream of corvettes, especially designed as escort ships and as submarine destroyers. Minesweepers, built to steam far afield and built, also, to act as escort ships, were launched in their numbers. There were submarine chasers and motor torpedo boats. Canada, already showing that she could produce the men to make the Navy, proved also that she could build the fighting ships for them to man.

It is an old tale now, how Canada's Chief of Naval Staff, Rear Admiral Percy W. Nelles, R.C.N., (now Vice Admiral) with a navy of half a dozen destroyers, a handful of minesweepers and less than 2,000 men, when war was first declared. Backing up the permanent force were some 250 of the Naval Reserve and 1,570 of the Volunteer Reserve. Today Admiral Nelles commands a Navy of more than twice the initial force of destroyers, three cruisers, a flotillas of corvettes and minesweepers and a miscellany of auxiliary craft to boot.

The Navy has scored its successes. It has captured its prizes and caused the scuttling of enemy blockade runners. It has sent enemy submarines to the bottom, the exact number unrevealed. The Minister of National Defence for Naval Services, the Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, however, a few weeks ago was able to report that at least four submarines had been definitely sunk, and two others probably sunk, by Canadian Naval units this summer alone. And the Rt. Hon. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, shortly after he had paid tribute in London to the work that the Canadian Navy was doing in the Battle of the Atlantic, was able to report that Britain had "an actual record of attacks which had resulted in the sinking or damaging of over 250 Axis submarines" since the war began. He added a warning that it must be expected that the enemy's efforts at sea would increase, but to this warning he appended the assurance that counter measures would also effectively increase.

In these counter measures the Canadian Navy, which has already accomplished much, will contribute.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NAVY

Wherever the ships go riding, far into the battle scene,
There will be the Navy with the master the spirit of John Paul Jones
And standing at battle stations with the brave young fighting men
Decatur and Perry and Lawrence will be there again,

Oh, it may be they do not see them, but their presence is very real
In that something we know as spirit which brave men sense and feel.

And wherever foe is sighted, till the signal to cease is flown,
To the rigging, watching the battle, is the soul of Farragut lashed.

This is the Navy's watchword from Lawrence's dying lip
The last words of a sailor: "Don't give up the ship!"
And never the guns go riding, decks cleared to meet the foe,
But along with the men of the Navy the ghosts of its heroes go.

An Austrian Legion?

New York, Nov. 23—The decision of the War Department to form a battalion of Americans of Austrian birth to fight for the liberation of Austria raises the most delicate political questions and already has stirred up a vendetta.

It is unfortunate that the announcement of the project, coming from Mr. C——'s office, is immediately associated with the personality of Archduke Otto von Hapsburg. The New York Times, which announced the project on Friday last, under a Washington date line, sandwiched together in the same despatch the announcement from Mr. Stimson's office and a statement by——— announcement that a military committee to "cooperate in recruiting the members of ship of the battalion" had been set up under the presidency of Archduke Otto of Hapsburg.

Now nothing may well be raised, why should a young man, whose father broke his neck and died broke, find it idle during the whole life of the Austrian Republic, and then, when he is manifestly worked for the restoration of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, be recruiting for the United States Army among Austrian citizens? He is, himself, not a United States citizen, but a pretender to the throne that at the end of the last war and also as a result of the success of the Soviet Union, United States policy is liberating the subject nations of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy—Czechs, Yugoslavs and Poles. All of these peoples are our Allies today, as they were in the last war.

The statement emanating from Archduke Otto's military committee obviously claims as "Austrians" Czechs, Hungarians, Yugoslavs and Slovak peoples. For the statement is that there are in the United States "six million Americans of Austrian descent."

Only 4,000,000 to Austria.

But only the whole of Austria, as constituted after the last war, with that succession State peoples, which are ten million Americans of "Austrian" descent, are the children of Imperial Austria. And such claims, if not immediately repudiated by the authorities, must awaken the greatest confusion and discord among the French people.

The State Department denies that it has anything whatsoever to do with the action of the War Department. The War Department claims that it is purely a military measure and that it has no political aims. It does not remove them. The followers of the Archduke are claiming the blessing of the State Department, or, at least, of certain personalities in it.

There are speculations—raised by the Archduke himself—on opening a second front in the Balkans. Now the whole of the Balkans is interested in the questions of the future organization of this part of the world. Furthermore, the underground Italian movement is profoundly interested in the question of Austria. Every conceivable democratic or national Italy that we could find in this territory from the national democratic elements in Italy to General Mihailovitch, leader of the Serbian guerrillas, to the Great Guerrillas, the democratic forces in Hungary and Rumania, the democratic and nationalist forces in Poland, and every living Czech, and every living Slovak, every democrat can, pro-democratic forces in Austria itself regard the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy and its Pretender as anathema.

Furthermore, such underground movements as exist in Germany are against the Hapsburg Empire. To play with it is to lay directly into the hands of Hitler and his new order, whose propaganda against the Hapsburgs is as a relatively progressive force.

An Unfortunate Political Climate.

Now I am not suggesting that the agency of our Government is backing the Archduke. But I am suggesting that the War Department's project, and the Archduke's association with it, has created an unfortunate political climate. Unfortunate, also, in Britain, where, long before our entrance into the war, Churchill had welcomed to the bosom of the British Empire the Habsburg Governments of the succession States, who count their own legions, fighting under their own leadership, also in the Balkans, against guerrillas and sabotage battalions of in Africa.

Remember, this area—Central and Eastern Europe is of the greatest importance to Russia. Russia, Tsarist or Socialist, is indifferent to the power structure of that region, and never, under any circumstances, will be identified with the agents of reasons of security, would Russia countenance a restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy as a result of this war.

Still Held to "Divine" Rights.

That the Archduke and, for that matter, every political group should attempt to draw the greatest possible advantage out of the situation created by the war is not been conceivable. Otto has built up all historical and political contacts for such an opportunity. He is a modern-minded man, in many respects, modern-minded man, well educated with an extremely iron-willed and politically gifted mother, Zita.

But thing, personal considerations cannot bedoud the fact that the Hapsburg dynasty has never abandoned its claim to "Divine" right. And I think the Americans are the last to wish to re-establish historically expansionist and imperialist house in the centre of Europe.

Every single action we take today has international political repercussions. It is impossible to divorce military expediency from political expediency. Processes of history is, not reversible. What is done today, creates problems for tomorrow.

REPUBLIC DEL ECUADOR

Ecuador is merely Spanish for Equator, and the Republic of Ecuador received its name from its fact that it lies on the great circle of the globe.

The republic claiming an area of 116,000 square miles and a population of 2,300,000, but about 180,000 square miles of the Upper Amazon territory claimed by Ecuador is also claimed by Colombia and Peru.

Eight years ago President Roosevelt was chosen as arbitrator by Ecuador - Peru boundary dispute, but up to date a satisfactory agreement has not been reached.

The United States has leased on the Santa Elena peninsula, near the southern tip of Ecuador's coast, and here the most western projection into the Pacific, also by the Galapagos Islands, her most important island possession.

Ecuador is rich in iron, coal, lead, copper, sulphur, silver, gold, petroleum and natural rubber trees, and produces forest products, grain, fruit, tagua nuts (vegetable ivory), mangrove bark for tanning, alligator skins, kapok, and cacao from which chocolate is made).

Panama hat or Jipi-Japa hats, made of Toquilla straw, are manufactured in Ecuador.

Ecuador's population of about 1,120,000, and claims to be the oldest capital in the Western Hemisphere, it is located only 15 miles from the Equator, at an altitude of some 9,000 feet, and is the highest capital in the world.

Guayaquil, about the same size in population, is one of the largest ports on the Pacific coast of South America and is known as "The Pearl of the Pacific."

The Guayaquil-Quito railroad is regarded as one of the greatest engineering feats in the world. At Nariz del Diablo (Devil's Nose) in the train ascends 2,000 feet in five minutes over a dangerous zig-zag, ring road cut in solid rock along a mountain side supported by huge retaining walls.

The monetary unit of Ecuador is the sucre, which has an average value of sixty-six cents in American money. It received its name from General Antonio Jose de Sucre, a lieutenant of Simon Bolivar and second only to the great Liberator in military life contribution he made to the liberation of South America.

Women in Ecuador first voted in a national election in 1939, when Carlos Arroyo del Rio was elected President for a four-year term.

The population of Ecuador, which cannot be determined precisely because of the territorial disputes, is composed roughly of 10 percent whites, of Spanish ancestry, 39 percent Indians, five percent Negroes, and the remainder chiefly persons of mixed blood.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

Third or Fourth Year Best Time for Child's First Eye Test.

When parents are near-sighted, they should be watchful for signs of near-sightedness in their children. Young infants, as many mothers know, are often unable to coordinate the movements of the eyes, but after a month or so, this condition corrects itself. On the other hand, the development of cross-eye needs the attention of the physician.

For the child with near-sightedness, Dr. Lawrence T. Post of St. Louis says that the diet must be well balanced, containing a quart of milk each day. The near-sightedness should be corrected with proper glasses. The child should be taught to sit and to stand correctly and not to stoop when reading, and reading should be done only in good light, and the reading matter should not be held too close to the eyes. In some instances, the near-sighted child is found to be suffering from a lack of thyroid. In such cases, the giving of thyroid extract in the proper dose may be helpful.

A great deal of blindness in times gone by was caused by gonorrheal infection of the eyes. However, nowadays, with the use of certain antiseptics, particularly silver nitrate, in the eyes of the new-born baby, this disease has been largely prevented.

Mothers often wonder when the best time is to take the child to the eye doctor for the first examination. Dr. Post believes that the best time is between three and four years of age. At this time, the eyesight is tested and the eyes examined. When the child is ready to enter the second grade of school, drops can be put into the eyes and the vision carefully checked, because at this period the child usually begins to use his eyes extensively. If there is reason to suspect that a child has eye trouble, of course, eye examinations should be made earlier in life.

In the case of the child with cross-eye, he should be taken to the physician as soon as there is any suspicion that the condition is present. Dr. Post also advices that simple talks should be made to school children in the lower grades concerning the care of the eyes.

Most of the troubles with the eyes which occur in early adult life are the result of accidents, particularly in industries. These accidents have been greatly lessened by having the proper guards on machines, by using protective goggles for the workers, by improving the lighting, and by shortening the hours of work. Poor light and long working hours have been demonstrated as important causes for eye fatigue and inury.

One of the eye conditions which is responsible for loss of eyesight in older persons is glaucoma. Regular examinations of the eyes will help to aid in detecting this disorder early in its course, so that it can be properly treated and the eyesight saved.

With proper care, many of the disorders responsible for loss of eyesight can be avoided.

"I Was Young Then"

By GENEVIEVE FOURNIA

Early in December, each year, I begin to think of securing my horoscope for the coming year. I don't know why I should think the changing position of the stars should influence changes in my life, but for a number of years my horoscope, the same year, gave me events accurately. On year two doctors advised me to give up work that was remunerative. When my horoscope, the same year, gave me the same advice, I followed it and have never been sorry. Another time I wanted money for a special purpose and considered selling certain possessions to obtain it. My current horoscope came along and definitely advised against doing this, and again the advice turned out to be sound. Usually one of the city papers agrees to send you your horoscope, for a donation to their Christmas cheer fund, so acquiring such a forecast of the opportunities and risks, of the coming year is not expensive and to me it is interesting.

Fortune-telling is something else that holds a fascination for a good many—particularly women. In this connection I heard a good story this summer. It is true. A woman from a small town went to visit her husband in a military camp, near a large city. A group of women from the same small town were living in this city, to be near their husbands. They tried to give Mrs. "X" a good time during her two weeks' stay. They offered to take her to a "wonderful" fortune teller, who was so well patronized that you had to make an appointment days ahead, and then wait often for hours in her waiting room. After all these preliminaries, Mrs. "X" found herself in the presence of the fortune-teller, who was dressed rather like a gypsy. She told Mrs. "X" that she did not live in this city, but was only visiting there for a short time, also that her husband was attached to a certain unit and held a certain rank. Mrs. "X" laughed and said "I must really tell you that that is exactly right. I come from the town of Z—, and am just here visiting." "I know that," said the fortune teller, "because I am from the town of Z— too." She gave her name, but as she was middle aged and had been away from Z— for many years, Mrs. "X" did not remember her. "Many people from Z— come here," said the fortune teller, "and do I have fun." "They don't know me. Mrs. V., the wife of Colonel V. has been here twice and is she surprised at what I tell her. Why, I remember her from when she was a little girl, and I used to take her pony when she drove it into the livery barn where my husband worked. Naturally I know all about her first romantic marriage, subsequent divorce and sensational second marriage." The glowing recommends of the wife of Colonel V. had been responsible for a great deal of the success of this fortune teller who has gone a long way, in a monetary sense, from the old livery stable days. Now, through women's credulity, she was affluent, and enjoying herself.

The hobby I enjoy most is reading. The last two books I have enjoyed were "Saratoga Trunk" by Edna Ferber and "Now, Voyager," by Olive Higgins Prouty. Both give a picture of life at the end of the last century against which background young people of the next generation stand out in startling contrast.

The hobby I would enjoy more than any other, if I had the means to indulge it, would be the restoring of picturesque old houses.

Since rents are high and landlords discriminate against children, a regular shanty-town has sprung up on the commons in many towns. These towns give the building lots free and rough structures, built of old lumber and tar paper are put up by the families themselves. They are small, ugly, unpainted, the doors and windows out of plumb—not much more than a shelter from the weather.

While passing farther and farther into decay, are neglected old houses, that were built with an eye to symmetry and beauty of detail, and that could be restored to their former beauty.

I have in mind such an old house now. It is to be sold for a very few hundred dollars. It is built on a high elevation and has its own halfacre of ground. It is not so close as to rub elbows with its neighbors. One could enjoy some privacy there.

It is a very small stuccoed house. Across the front and across one end, are two narrow sun porches. There are dormer windows in the roof. At one side is a tiny porte-cochere, with a studio above, built entirely of glass. There would always be sunshine in such a place.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Soldiers Seeking Quick Marriage Ceremony Accept Sordid Surroundings for Weddings.

Not long ago a current magazine published an article "Just Married—and How" by Dorothy Walworth, in which the writer described a dreary, dingy room, less attractive than the visitors' section of local jails, where young people who sought the services of a Justice of the Peace were frequently married.

Cigar and cigarette butts littered the floor; benches and chairs were battered; tables were covered by filthy, ink-stained blotters — and wistful, eager couples waited to plight their troths.

Today, when soldiers must be married on short furloughs and their girls, who often work in war plants and factories, can't get more than an afternoon off, they must accept these repulsive surroundings. They believe these J.P. ceremonies are less costly and more easily arranged than a more conventional wedding.

Mayor La Guardia must have read this account of marriages performed in a setting about as cheerful as a coroner's office in a morgue, for I see that New York is going to redecorate its marriage chapel. The mayor, after a surprise visit, decided the Chapel in the Municipal Building didn't measure up to the dignity of New York.

Not only is the Chapel to be done over, but also the waiting room and the entrance office, where applications for marriage licenses are filled out and filed. The Mayor said the old surroundings didn't meet with his own artistic approval. Light colors will be used to add a note of cheerfulness when the suite is repainted.

Not long ago, a young friend of mine—a graduate of one of the country's leading women's universities—asked me to be a witness at one of these Justice-of-the-Peace nuptials. Although her family happened to be rock-ribbed conservatives, she was a good deal on the pink side as to politics. No wedding "frills" for her, she declared.

We waited in the dreariest sort of place until someone poked a head in the door and called, "Next." The J. P. who officiated wore a suit which looked as if he had slept in it. In five minutes my young friend, who had taken two degrees at her university, and her bridegroom, who was a clever archiect, came out. They were married.

The ultra-modern girl gasped a little. The Justice of the Peace didn't actually remove his hat during the ceremony, and while she was making the responses he actually picked up and chewed on an old cigar. I could not resist the temptation to say: "Well, my dear, you certainly escaped all the frills." I didn't pursue the subject. There were tears on her eyelashes.

Women's Meetings

QUINTE W.I.

The monthly meeting of the Quinte W.I. was held at Mrs. K. Vivian's home on November 17th., with an attendance of 22.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. N. Brown, after which Mrs. S. McDonald offered a prayer for peace. Several business matters were discussed. It was decided that each member give 25 cents to the central fund. $5 was to be added to this and sent to the Central Fund, to be used towards purchasing a mobile kitchen. The members were asked to bring canned goods for overseas and magazines and books for the Canadian camps, to the December meeting.

The Institute is also sending song sheets and music books to the different camps.

A splendid report of the convention was given by Mrs. M. J. Ryan. Mrs. Geddes also spoke of her work as registrar at the convention. She spoke very highly of Dr. Semple's address at the convention in which he spoke of the mothers as being the Calvary of this war by letting their sons go.

Mrs. Garbutt, convener of Peace Education and International Relations, then took charge of the program. "O Canada" was sung. The topic, "Beware Lest We Forget the Lord Thy God"—was very ably taken by Mrs. T. Brown and this splendid paper on "Peace" was enjoyed by all. Song, "There'll Always be an England." Music, "Carry On" and "Katy" by Mrs. Parrott and Mrs. Ryan. Roll call, my favourite wartime song. Paper on Canadianization by Mrs. A. Maguire who took Canadianization from a new angle and gave a very complete and educational account of Canada's war effort. Solo, "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," Mrs. H. Houston. A hymn was sung after which Mrs. Brown closed the meeting by all singing the National Anthem, followed by Grace. Collection $2.20.

Mrs. K. Vivian, her mother, Mrs. Johnson and conveners served a delicious lunch, and a social time was enjoyed by all.

On Wednesday, November 18th., the November meeting of the Holloway Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. H Townsend.

At noon a bountiful dinner was thoroughly enjoyed by the sixteen partakers, following which Mrs. E. Snider took charge of the meeting.

The National Anthem was sung, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Cook. The principal business of the meeting was the annual election of officers, over which Rev. Mr. Cook presided. The following are the officers for 1943:

President, Mrs. Embury Hough; vice-president, Mrs Coleman Townsend; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Don Rose; recording secretary, Mrs. Earl Snider; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Townsend; Missionary Monthly, Mrs George Rose; supply secretary, Mrs. Ernest Wilson; Christian Stewardship secretary, Mrs. Bert Mott; Strangers' Secretary, Mrs. Wm. Cadman; Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Arthur Wilson; Baby Band secretary, Mrs. Clifford Cassidy; pianist, Mrs. Herbert Townsend; assistant, Mrs. Don Rose

The December meeting will be at Mrs. E. G. Snider's, December 16, when a dinner will be served. The treasurer reported finances to be satisfactory.

The worship service as outlined in the Missionary Monthly was given by Mrs. Herb. Townsend and Mrs. Harry Townsend. A hymn and the benediction closed the meeting. Collection amounted to $3.00

Cheerful Face Helps Beauty

Anna Neagle has a cheerful disposition and a charming personality

By HELEN FOLLETT

A SPARKLING, good-natured expression is the lighting system of the face. Push the button of good cheer, and there you are, all aglow, pretty as can be. Eyes are bright. Lips ends are lifted. You are wholly alive and everybody loves to look at you.

Let us visualise the woman who travels about looking like frozen assets. Not much difference between her and a graven image.

Another type, the sophisticated young woman who wears a blank look as if she were bored to tears by existence. She has seen everything, can't get thrilled or excited about anything. After a number of years of nonsense, she will carry a hard, brittle expression. The muscles around the mouth will tighten. Tissues of chin and jaw will become impaired. She will gather wrinkles early in life.

A sunlighted expression is good for facial fibres; it keeps them lifted, and they stay strong and resilient. It is good for the digestion and the nervous system, honest to goodness it is. A woman can't assume that expression unless she feels kindly toward others, has a cheerful nature. Unpleasant emotions raise the dickens with internal organs.

It is the light of intelligence and sweetness of soul that makes the face attractive; it is worth more than perfect features and the rose-and-lily complexion because it is interesting. If it isn't present, the external evidences of pulchritude are cheapened.

Grouchy women never see themselves as they really are. Naturally. When they look in the mirror they don't glower or frown, twist their faces into lines and knots. But how they look to other people!

PRESENTATION

On Monday evening, November 16 a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hollinger, to honor the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Johnson.

The evening was spent in games and music. Mr. Richard Clark acted as chairman; after calling the gathering to order, Mary and Don were given the seats of honor. Mrs. Stanley Sherry read the address which spoke very highly of Mary's service in both Sunday School and Young People's work, trusting that in her new life she would still be able to continue in this grand way.

Mr. Glen Priest and Miss Verna Sherry then presented Mary and Don with a beautiful mahogany end table and smoker, also a large table mirror for which both expressed their thanks, invited all to visit them in their new home. A delicious lunch brought the evening to a close.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hope Chest

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am engaged and am planning to be married in several months. I have begun to buy my linens and so forth. Naturally, I would find it convenient to have some kind of hope chest.

I have been wondering if it might not be a good idea to buy the kind of low, cedar-lined chest that rolls underneath a bed. What do you think of my idea?

Diane?

Finding a convenient place for the usual hope chest is definitely a problem in today's small apartments, and I'm all for your carrying out your plan.

Civilian Best Man

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When the bridegroom is a soldier what is the proper dress for a civilian best man, both for an afternoon and an evening wedding?

D. R.

What the civilian best man wears depends, of course, on whether the wedding is to be a formal Army wedding, or an informal one.

If formal, the civilian best man (and the bride's father too, if he is a civilian) should wear formal day clothes (cutaway coat, dark striped trousers, formal accessories) for a day-time wedding, and full dress ("tails", white tie) for an evening wedding.

The Army bridegroom wears his service uniform for an informal wedding, and the best man and the bride's father (if civilians) wear business suits, preferably dark blue.

Bridal Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I know it is customary for the prospective bridegroom to give a wedding gift to his bride and for the bride to give her future husband wedding gift. Also that the groom-to-be gives his best man a gift, and the bride-to-be gives a gift to her maid of honor.

But I have no idea when these gifts are prestened. Also is a card enclosed with the gift, and if so, how does it read?

J. R.

The engaged couple give each other their wedding gifts at any time they wish before the wedding.

If both the bride and bridegroom are to have only one attendant, each gives the attendant the memento at any convenient time before the wedding. But if there are several bridal attendants, the bride usually gives a bridesmaids' luncheon a day or two before the wedding, and the gifts, attractively wrapped, are presented then or at the bridal dinner the evening before the wedding. If the bridegroom gives a bachelor dinner, he may present his gifts then to his best man and ushers.

It is not necessary to enclose a card with the gifts, since they are usually presented directly to the attendants. But it would not be improper to enclose cards or notes with the gifts to their attendants, with a message of appreciation for their participation in the wedding party.

Fashion Flashes

WOOL GOES GAY as glitter appears on warm wool frocks designed for bright but chilly days. Pale blue wool jersey is the fabric of a smart frock made with cross-over bodice, smooth shoulders and short sleeves cut all in one. The waist is embroidered with black and midnight blue iridescent sequins. Skirt has fullness on either side.

DISTINCTION is inherent in every line of the fur cape. A new model, cut on full lines, is a three-quarter length cape of nutria with large patch pockets placed just beneath the armhold slits.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT and geared to go with all types of casual, sports or country clothes is the hiplength jacket of soft tweed in dazzling white. Nice with black slacks for an at-home ensemble.

A RECENT LUNCHEON was the occasion for a smart frock showing and the most applause went to a street-length restaurant frock of black crepe entirely dotted in black jet. Deep square neckline and short sleeves cut in one with the bodice. A grand frock to wear with a dash of color, such as tiny feathered calot of turquoise blue with matching gloves or a fuchsia feathered hat and matching gloves.

VERY DIFFERENT from the silver fox greatcoat is a great coat of white wolf made with collarless neckline and melonshaped sleeves.

A NICE TOPPER for a restaurant frock is an off-the-face high crown model of black velvet with little jet tassels and a filmy black veil with a fine jet band at the hem.

Toronto Maple Leafs Move Into Tie for First Place of N.H.L. By Win and Loss Over Weekend

Defeat Canadiens 8-0 Saturday but Lose to Bruins Sunday 7-6

HAWKS, WINGS TIE

(By The Canadian Press)

The National Hockey League's decision to cancel overtime for the war's duration seems to have started an epidemic of tie games.

Two or four weekend contests ended that way, creating a triple tie for first place and a little more confusion in a season that already has produced some dizzy happenings.

Toronto Maple Leafs gained temporary command by a shocking 8-6 victory over Montreal Canadiens in Saturday's only game, but were caged Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings drew level Sunday. Wings battled to a 4-4 stalemate after New York Rangers and Hawks held down a 3-3 tie against Montreal.

Leafs visited Boston for Sunday's third game and dropped a 7-6 verdict after a seesaw struggle. Boston's victory was their first in straight and severed them into fourth place ahead of Canadiens and Rangers. Jackson provided the individual feature with three goals for Bruins. Hertel scored for Boston and two Toronto players, Syl Apps and Bud Polle, connected twice.

Mare Potent Saturday

Leafs were much more potent in their Saturday engagement against Canadiens, accumulating 32 scoring points against youthful Paul Bibeault and benefiting from a shutout with the N.H.L.'s second shutout in their 84 triumph. Apps, a former player except Brodu, Jack McKean and Rhys Thomson participated in the scoring spree, Gerry Schinkan in leading all snipers with two goals and three assists.

Canadiens fared better against Chicago in their Sunday contest, unloosing a three-goal drive in the last period to tie Hawks 3-3 and snap a four-game losing streak. Gordie Drillon was presented with a suitcase before the game against Toronto but didn't have a dangerous scoring opportunity. Chicago Hawks he scored the first two Montreal goals. Robert (Bud) Hamill tallied one of the Chicago goals, his eighth of the season, to tie Drillon at six in that department with Rookie Gaye Stewart of Toronto.

Mowers Badly Cut

Bryan Hextall drove home his second goal with 41 seconds remaining to earn Rangers their 4-4 tie against Detroit, but that was overlooked in a flurry of extra-player scoring. Sammy Mowers, Detroit Goalie, was badly cut in the first period when a shot by Lynn Patrick struck his mouth, requiring eight stitches. Rangers claimed a shot by Hextall had gone through the net cords; Ranger Bun Mosey left after the second period to answer a Canadian Army call and finally teams sought to get rowed into the narrow penalty box after Grosso and Nick and Jimmy Orlando started a scrap there.

BEACHERS DEFEAT INDIANS, QUALIFY FOR ORFU FINAL

Dave Terris Scores Touch That Puts Hamilton and Navy Out of Playoffs

NAVY BLANKED.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Dave Terris is the smallest fellow in the world today, but he will receive no convalescent cards from Toronto Oakwood Indians. Not for some time, at least.

Dave was operated on Saturday night to stomach ulcers. Unfortunately for Indians, however, he was healthy enough Saturday afternoon to do a little "operating" on his own behalf.

The veteran Toronto Balmy Beach lineman fell on a skidding punt to score the Indian goal-line in the fading minutes of a 2-0 victory over the Intermediate Union contest. His Touchdown gave Beaches an 11-0 victory and eliminated Indians into sudden-death O. R. F. U. playdowns against R. C. A. F. Hamilton Navy next Saturday afternoon in Toronto.

Dave's touchdown also broke the hearts of the battling Indians, some 5,000 spectators said, at Varsity Stadium. . . . It automatically eliminated Hamilton Wildcats and Ottawa Navy Rowing Club, of whom depended upon an Indian victory for a playoff shot.

Kist Marched

Until Perris broke loose, it looked as though Indians still had in the afterflow of their surprise 11-6 victory over Hurricanes Sept. 26, might do it. Beaches led 6-3 midway through the final quarter when Gallivan threw a long pass to Sward and a field goal by Bobby Kist from the 30-yard line gave the second placement for Indians with five minutes remaining in the game's score. Indians recovered a Beach fumble at the enemy 40 shortly thereafter but failed to kick the possible winning point. But Schkirt hurried his kick and Beaches took possession on their five.

Hershey Bears' long spiral to Mickey McDonald at midfield, McDonald dashed to Indian 30, evaded a swarm of Beach tacklers and dribbled the oval downfield until Perris fell on it. Indians, it just didn't matter, then, that Reid tried placement for that Wildcats proceeded to blank Navy 3-0 in the second game to finish in third position. Lenard kicked a field goal for the game's only scoring to consolidate his position as O. R. F. U. scoring king for the second straight season.

Hamilton Swamp Kitchener

Hurricanes had already clinched second place when, on that Wildcats let down against Kitchener-Waterloo Raiders at Hamilton Saturday's third O. R. F. U. game. Fit. Lt. Eddie Thompson personally converted three of the own touchdowns for 18 points as the Flyers won, 26-7.

Somebody should pause now for a few kind words on behalf of Oakwood Indians for in losing to Beaches they made possible Hamilton-Navy playoff. Indians had no chance of winning the O. R. F. U. final. Any other ending probably would have spoiled the chances for an east-west final for keeps.

As it is, the winner of Wednesday's O. R. F. U. playoff will meet the R. C. A. F. team from Uplands in Toronto, Nov. 28, for an eastern final at Toronto next Saturday. Out of that game will emerge an eastern champion to meet Winnipeg R. C. A. F. bombers in the all-Canada finals, also in Toronto, Dec. 5. Winnipeg qualified as western representatives by defeating Regina Navy Dec. 5 to 0.

Big Stumbling Block

Previously, the one big stumbling block to plans for an east-west playoff had been the R. C. A. F. ruling that no Air Force team would be allowed to play organized football after Nov. 30. Early Nights, however, Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Chief of Air Staff announced that the Air Force was prepared to consider R. C. A. F. participation in football playdowns provided they could be completed by Dec. 5. Last night an R.C.A.F. announcement from Ottawa made it official, saying "any R. C. A. F. personnel who may be concerned in the Canadian Rugby Championships will be permitted to play now that it is established that the finals can be played on Dec. 5."

Two of the three eastern teams still in the running for the title are R. C. A. F. clubs. The Winnipeg team has 14 players who are members of the Air Force.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—(CP)—Pertinent fact presented by Dick (Pete) Arthur, News-Chronicle) Elliot: Making the 78-year-olds subject to the draft is tantamount to cutting a year off the life of the present-day "average player."

Add wartime casualties: Hockey at Dalhousie University, Halifax, where the students council decided to discontinue the sport for the duration.

The expert says:

Jim (Toronto Globe and Mail) Coleman: "The good citizens of Alberta are likely to be indignant if they read what Charlie Hatton of the New York Telegraph has written about Johnny Johnny Gagnon. . . . Station says that Longden is on a hunting trip 'deep in the Canadian wilds, 100 miles north of Calgary'. . . . # TWO-TEAM RACE IN EAST SECTION

Bears and Reds Battling for Top and Rest of Teams Nowhere

(By The Canadian Press)

Hershey Bears and Providence Reds are making a two-team race of the Eastern A section of this early stage of the American League hockey race but Bears, with a division lead, does only six points separate the top club from the bottom three in the seven-team section of games.

Indianapolis, former undisputed possession of second place in the Western A section, dropped that position to the tail end of Buffalo and Cleveland, Sunday night, when Cleve. came from behind to take a 4-3 lead in the second period, but the capitals scored three times in the first 13 minutes of the third. Bill Thoms led the attack with three goals.

The victory enabled the Caps to move two points ahead of third-place Cleveland and seven points of the last lead of Buffalo Bisons, who lost 4-1 to Pittsburgh Hornets. Hornets made their first home defeat of the season.

Washington Lions moved midway in the final period gave Hershey Bears a 3-2 victory. Jack Bridges and Reged Bepper them three points ahead of second-place Providence Reds in the standings.

The Reds nosed out Cleveland Barons by the slender margin of the winning shot with only 1-1 2 minutes of play remaining.

There are no games scheduled in the league tonight.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

HOCKEY WILL CONTINUE TO function in this province through the facilities of the Ontario Hockey Association, although there will be no interference of civilian clubs, in C. B. "Sandy" Burrows, association secretary-treasurer announced today, after attending the third annual meeting of the O.H.A. Saturday.

Last year we had 125 clubs of all categories, but we do not hope to reach that figure in 1943. However, there will be several teams from various centres of the armed forces, to supplement the remaining civilian clubs desirous of functioning," assured Mr. Burrows.

It is hoped that there will be only three teams in the district senior loop, the Belleville Bulls, Petes, Cobalt-Whitby "Combines" and Oshawa Generals, although hope is still being held out for a possible Kingston entry.

"FRANKLY, WE SHOULD BE quite optimistic about the future of hockey in our district, as many of the players formerly with teams vanished from the scene. It looks very much as though there will be only three teams in the district senior loop, the Belleville Bulls, Petes, Cobalts-Whitby "Combines" and Oshawa Generals, although hope is still being held out for a possible Kingston entry.

For instance, at Cobalt there are only the Belleville and Trenton players left, while Campbellston Juniors with clubs indicating intentions of functioning in 1943. The deadline for entries is next Wednesday and groupings will be announced by the executive of the O.H.A. next Friday night. . . .

It was exactly a decade ago that a three-clubbed senior "B" group functioned in the Eastern district. The teams included being Queens University, Belleville and Trenton. Games were played at the Hume Arena on Saturday nights that record bumper crowds saw every match.

Of course Mister Katan only has to whip the Swedish monstrosity whereby he can demand a return bout for the night with Billy Watson. Frankly, Ever person knows about Al Dunlop's feud with Billie Watson, but the referee has a real chore cut out for himself here Wednesday night when Martinec, the peoples' favoured bate.

REMEMBER WHEN Goalie Norman Smith of the Detroit Olympic Wings, retired from hockey four years ago today and signed a deal with Manager Jack Adams? Smith refused to play minor league hockey with the Pittsburgh Hornets of the International-American League and went back to his off-season job with a Detroit motor company.

DID YOU KNOW the players in the National Football League are a husky lot, with the least six feet in height and a couple of hundred pounds of weight. The referees in the loop, however, are tiny tots. Tommy Cahn is 5 feet 3 inches and weighs 147 pounds. Sam Weiss is the same height and weight, while Carl Rebels is 5 feet 8 inches and weighs 150 pounds.

IT'S A THREE-WAY TIE FOR the top rung of the N.H.L. ladder, the spot being shared by Toronto, Detroit and Chicago, with the Montreal Canadiens holding the top hold alone from Saturday night until early evening, when Chi- Dyn crowed lost a free-scoring 7-6 game at Boston. . . . The Detroit gained a point by playing a 4-4 tie with Rangers, while the same held good for Chicago in a 3-3 tie with Les Canadiens. . . . It wasn't until the end of the Toronto-Saturday night when the Leafs scored a lopsided 8-0 win over the Canadiens. . . . A large gallery of curious fans saw the band by watch the proceedings as Gordie Drillon was to have been the hero of the contention. . . . However, Drillon was a marked man and a crowd of 13,940 didn't even wish to see the end.

THIS AND THAT—Kicking the gong around when scoring opportunities came their way, the Dominion Provinces dropped a 4 to 1 decision to the local Hi-Y Colts on Saturday night. . . . Now the Leafs have the same outfit the Provinces soundly trounced in the Ottawa loop opener only two weeks ago. . . . Here's something or other. . . . Ohio State romped over Notre Dame Saturday, beating Michigan 21-7 before 72,000. . . . After Georgia went down before Auburn the choice of Rose Bowl teams narrowed down to Georgia Tech - or Boston College, with the latter slight favorites to win the bid when next Saturday. . . . Balmy Beach defeated Indians to play-off with the R.C.A.F. Thurisaeans and the winner will be Hamilton Navy. . . . The winner will meet the Ottawa Rowing Club for the eastern Canada finals next Saturday with the east-west final the following week. . . . Interesting controversy regarding the Dominion Day race and the final day of the series. . . . Jeeves, the ear muffs.

Driver's Permits of Mrs. Greeley Donald Thomas, Suspended For 2 Years by Coroner's Jury

Picton, (Nov. 21 (Special) — After being out almost an hour, at the inquest held at the Picton Town Hall yesterday afternoon before Dr. D. H. Ashbaugh, the following verdict was reached:

"We, the undersigned members of the Coroner's Jury, called to investigate the death of William Cooper, on Highway No. 49, about noon on September 11th, find he came to his death as the result of a car accident and recommend that the drivers' permits of both Mrs. Greeley and Donald Thomas be suspended for a period of two years."

Signed: Clifford Spencer, Clarence Jones, Bert Burns, Walter Pope, Mrs. Wm. Hall.

The first witness called was Mrs. Ida Rourke, stenographer, who explained photographs she had been called to take at the scene of the accident, near Lockyer's greenhouse and also pictures of the damaged cars of Donald Thomas and Mrs. Greeley, that had been in collision, just previous to the fatal accident that claimed the lives of William Cooper, 56, and Frank Bilton, 17, passengers in the car driven by Donald Thomas.

Pat Walmsley, provincial police photographer, also explained photographs he had taken at the scene of the accident.

Dr. Walmsley testified to attending young Cooper, who was in a critical condition at the side of the road, with multiple fractures of the skull and lower jaw. He died on reaching the hospital. Eva Sidney Sidney, suffering from an accumulated haemorrhage of the brain, lived two hours in the hospital. The injuries of both boys were caused by terrific force.

Dr. Brownson corroborated Dr. Walmsley's evidence of the dead boys. He found Don Thomas suffering from a fracture of the right side of the body and to the head. Mrs. Greeley had injuries of a serious lack of memory in a survivor.

Thomas Stevens, who worked with all three boys at Baxter's Canning Factory, testified that Thomas told him on the morning of the 11th, speaking of the car, "we drove to Picton for lunch. . . . made it in 6 or 7 minutes." I told him he was driving a little fast and that someone would catch him, and he'd laugh and say he wouldn't get caught.

Bert Algar, garage owner, testified that the car driven by Thomas was U-shaped and wrapped around the tree when he arrived to inspect it. The back of the tree was pushed to a height of 6 or 8 feet. The car must have been tipped when it reached the tree and must have been travelling at a great rate of speed. He was light skid marks on the road. There were no brake marks.

Miss Hills, of Ottawa, testified to the boys stopping the car between Bloomfield and Picton and offering to give her a lift, which she refused. She didn't remember anything in connection with the car stopping.

Edward Baxter, manager of the canning factory, exhibited card No. 84 showing that the boys left the factory at 12.05 radio time at noon on September 11th.

Walter Brown, working at the Baxter farm, was near the tree when the accident occurred, at noon on that day. He saw Mrs. Greeley drive up to the driveway of the old Lockyer house to turn around. He didn't see any other car approaching and went on eating his lunch in his own car until he heard the Thomas car crash into the tree.

Sid. Lockyer, listening to his radio in his home, heard after he heard the crash and with others helped extricate the boys. It took perhaps ten minutes to do this, as their heads and chests were jammed down by the side of the car.

Constable Jim Lovelace testified that the tracks showed that Thomas' car had left the pavement thirty feet before attempting to pass the Greeley car and had travelled 70 feet after leaving the road before the car wrapped around the tree. She didn't remember seeing the driver involving her car. She didn't know she should have seen the driver with her. Her shoulder had been injured and her car rendered permanently, this summer. She was attending school. She hopes to another pair to read.

Donald Thomas testified he had received his driving permit on his 16th birthday in June and had driven a car consistently all summer. He said he was able to drive from Campbellcroft, his home, and play a game of golf in Picton and return in 20 minutes, made an hour. He estimated the speed of the car on the day in question at between 40 and 50 miles an hour.

He testified he didn't remember the accident. He was dazed and couldn't remember a thing about the accident at all. He couldn't remember events in the hospital some time later.

Mrs. Walmsley and Brownson were recalled and testified that the accident could cause the patient to fall to recollect events prior to an accident. Dr. Brownson stated that Don Thomas suffered from such an injury when a pedestrian struck by the face had severed the brain.

Dr. Ashbaugh in addressing the jury said that a skull fracture causing numerous days of blankness in a case he had known and described Don Thomas, as he had appeared to him in the hospital after the accident.

Japanese Unable To Decide Whether To Hold Kiska

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Headquarters Alaska Defence Command, Nov. 22 (AP)—Indecision of the Japanese command and the insufficient equipment for the Aleutian campaign has been clearly demonstrated in recent activities in the northern island sector and the Japanese who made such a brave showing in June, are now apparently unable to decide whether to hold or even what they have.

Their indecisiveness believed at first that Kiska was only an outpost, has been shocked repeatedly in the Aleutians, developments this fall indicate that it is the chief attack base for activities there, even abandoning Attu and other islands to concentrate their strength around Kiska.

However, they may have later changed their minds when they made a new landing at Holtz Bay, far via Attu after all Kiska planes had been knocked out of the air. Kiska is the only base within striking distance of Dutch Harbor.

Japanese offensive attempts have been similarly pattierless. Bombing of Dutch Harbor, north of Kiska information immediately y other bombings, and landing attempts, have been on a haphazard, sapsacaes tried nothing offensively.

When the air attack it was with one or two planes at a time in the early days of the Japanese raid. One of these bombing was done by a slow plane which came in from the west side of the main in order to get away safely.

$1,000 Damage Caused by Fire

Damage estimated by firemen to the extent of $1,000 was caused late Saturday night to an apartment house at 175 Front street as believed to have started above the furnace in the basement and consequently gutted the flooring and ate its way into one or two partitions before being discovered.

According to members of the Belleville Fire Department, the alarm was burned in the blaze which was confined to the basement and first storey floor, but considerable loss will be felt by tenants through water and smoke damage. The apartment is owned by Mr. R. P. Ponton, real dealer, 175 Front Street.

Tenants in the building were a family named Pinkle, with a second floor apartment, Irving in the ground floor, while Provincial Constable R. W. Duncan and family occupy the flat on the third floor. The fire caused the first floor of the apartment to be unfit for tenants to live in and considerable repairs will be necessary, it is reported.

Firemen stated that the fire apparently originated from the basement furnace and ate its way through the first floor by the way of the hot air register. According to Fire Chief William Lynch, it appeared the top of the furnace was too close to the woodwork for safety.

All tenants in the building were at home when the fire started but owing to the peculiarity of the origin, there could be no warning of the impending danger, but the fire actually broke out, it was stated this morning.

"Iceland"

One of 20th Century-Fox's merriest musicals, "Iceland," made its local debut at the Belle Theatre Saturday, and first-nighters added their voices to that applause as well as "Sun Valley Serenade," the picture was not only an entertainment gem in its own right, but added more laurels to those already earned by a scintillating Sonja Henie, who just seems to state with even more enthralling grace than she has in her previous films.

The film is highlighted with romance and comedy, Sonja Henie turns in an excellent performance with John Payne, her handsome co-star, who took even more romantic in his uniform as corporal in the U. S. Marines. Jack Oakie that hilarious savvy as usual, adds the hearty laughs that climax the combined efforts of a virtual monopoly of Hollywood comedy talent—Oakie, Sterling Holloway, Felix Bressart and Fritz Feld.

Miss Henie and Payne receives other excellent support, particularly from Osa Massen, the pretty Danish screen star, and Joan Merrill, the singing delight who has proved a surprisingly good actress. Finally, but certainly not the least important, an integral part of "Iceland's" success is due to the music of Sammy Kaye andhead for New York for fun and relaxation. And when they get to the big city, things happen! 20th Century-Fox's latest production "Iceland" opens at 8.30 o'clock Instead of 9.00, will return at 1.15 p.m. and discontinue at 4.15 o'clock, instead of 4.30 o'clock. ## Little Benny's Note Book

I was just getting ready to start to do my homework, and pop was smoking a cigar in the private chair, saying, If I was a great sculptor, I could probably make myself still richer by interesting you in marble just the way you are now, surrounded by your school books and writing materials turned into the ceiling in youthful inspiration. Just wrist branch of your studies are you thinking about, my son?

Well, no branch, exactly, I said. I was just wondering how it would be to get struck by lightning just hard enough to get a holiday but not hard enough to actually hurt you. I mean just about hard enough to make a fellow faint, but, I said, and pop said, That's a very interesting speculation but it's a few moons, and sofia removed from your homework. Yes gosh, if I didn't show any more concentration than that down at my office, my business would go on the rocks in a week, he said.

Well O. pop, what's the most concentration you'd have if you had to? I said, and pop said, sufficient for any Holy emergency, I'm sure.

Well if you had a bad case of noodle soup do you think you'd have enough co-ordination to eat every single noodle out of it with your fork before you drank even a drop of the soup part with your spoon? I said, and pop said, Well, I don't know, but I'm willing to get rid of concentration.

Well that's how much I've got, because I'm exactly what I did today at lunch, I said, and pop said, in that case I suppose I'll have to give you credit. No doubt a feat like that shows a high power of concentration that some day may be turned into practical channels. But what's the matter of taken hours. Weren't you late for school? he said, Only a little, I said, and pop said, Yes gosh, do your lessons.

Which I did.

MURDER ON THE AVENUE

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER 22
Search for Wiley

"I shall start back to New York as soon as the funeral is over," Miss Elkins said Vali.

"Yes, I think you would be wise to do so."

"And what do you mean by that? Is the other faction—"

"Yes, they are. We can't say another faction, but the point is, the Stone Improvement Society is pretty eager to get the fortune, and if you are here working against them, they can't feel very kindly toward you. And as there is nothing you can do in the matter, it would be better for you to go back to New York."

Miss looked at him. Was the man sincere or was he in sympathy with the village people? He would put it up to Fleming Stone.

He left Vali's office and made arrangements for the funeral, all subject to Mrs. Holden's approval. Then he went back to the Webb house.

"Sarah," he said, when they were in the parlor, "I left Miss Vali that Brand Herrick was not here because he was ill. I thought it better not to have it told around the Corners that he is in prison and anyway, it doubtless be out in a few days."

"I'm glad you see it that way, Mr. Miles. I thought of asking you to do it. Now, he can tell over know it. What do you want us to do? Can we stay here?"

"I thought the house was left to you in the will."

"It is, but I want you to say. Can we all stay right here?"

"Yes, Sarah, it is your house; Mr. Vail will tell you so. And you and your boys belong here, and can stay here forever. I shall tell Mr. Herrick all about you, and next day he will come here to see you."

"God bless him," said Sarah fervently.

v v v v v

To an interested audience of two, Clarence Bliss told the story of his flying trip to Michigan. Fleming Stone listened with close attention and a critical mind. Herrick Bell-amed with bewilderment. Was this his house now? Bliss was talking of some hundred crude enough, about? It scarcely compared to the but it was clothed compared to the memories of Brandt's early years. The last time he saw it, Brandt and son had not invited him and did not invite him to come again. Then, why, why, had they left him the Webb fortune? With a string to it that was worth quite a banker or a cable!

Sarah Holden is a remarkable woman," Clarence was saying. "She took care of old man Webb, and did so appreciated his good sense and good nature that he left her the house and ground, and told her to keep it going."

"Stone didn't receive a complete copy of the will, then?" Stone asked.

"No, Vail told me there were several codicils, but they are of minor importance. The fortune are well fixed and Vali said everybody was glad of Sarah's good fortune. Now as to Webb's daughter, Sarah told me all about her. She was Webb's only child, born in 1890. Sarah, then about 20, was parlor maid in the Webb house, and was later nurse to little Jane. Well, Jane had inherited her father's disposition; she had few friends and no relatives.

"When she was 21 years old, she eloped with John Wiley. He was the only man who had ever asked her, Sarah said and old Jason refused his consent. Wiley not being much of a man. So, when Jane eloped with him, she had to her father for forgiveness, he sent her a letter, disowning her and forbidding her the house. Well," Jane Wiley came once, several times, to plead for mercy and for help, but her father wouldn't even see her. She brought her baby daughter with her, but even that didn't soften the curmudgeon's heart. That infant was Genevieve Wiley. The little one was the apple of eye of Jenny. So there's the girl we have to look for."

"The mother is dead?" Stone asked.

"Yes. Nobody knows where Wiley lives, or whether he is alive. And the same of Genevieve Wiley. Can you find her, Mr. Stone?"

"Can do," said Stone. "He has his eye on her, whether they are together or not. She's the meal ticket. I daresay he scrubs along, at a poor living rate, waiting for the blessed event of Jason Webb's death. Now, let's put it this way: as the will's as soon as he can run to it."

"That's just what Mr. Vail thinks," Bliss said.

"Is our Mr. Vail true blue?" Stone asked.

"That's just it," Clarence frowned. "I suppose he stands him, but the whole population of Bellamy Corners hates the memory of the Webb name title are all for the improvement of our city. They feel ready to subscribe to any fund for it, if they can find them, to diminish the Webb name and the village beautiful treasury."

"Can they do it?"

"Not by the grace of God, Mr. Stone. Now, that there's little Webb left. Now that I've trotted home again I'd like to help some more."

"You've got your political job, a job as you put over deserves another."

After a few minutes talk between the partners on their business matters, Bliss went to the office, now given over to Chadwick's kindly oversight and Miss Ripley's keen knowledge and wisdom.

"Bliss acts cheerly enough," Stone said, thoughtfully, "but he doesn't see deeply enough. He says there is nothing to be done at The Corners, and I quite agree, but this, then, is the situation. The population of the village are all eager for the Webb money, which is natural. And they have no active opposition. If any one of them knew where the girl is, I am not sure he'd tell. They are hellbent to get the funds for their fair city, of the future. Now there must be an opponent, and a strong one. We are the opponent, we represent the other side of Webb's will, indeed, the first, the most important side. If we let up and fail, so be it. But we mustn't fall without trying."

"That's the talk! I'm with you to the last ditch! But where is the girl?"

"The first one is to find sweet Genevieve. Or to find that she is not alive, if that is how it is. It will, I think, be wise to find the girl, for herunder the father. Do you know where he'd be likely to hang out?"

"For a guess, I'd say Chicago."

"A harder place to find people in than New York, I understand."

"No. I've said, if you can't find her in Chicago, you probably can't find her anywhere."

Fleming Stone looked at his young client, with a half-vacant stare.

"Brand," he said, "I'm in a—mat."

"As how?"

"I can't go to Chicago now, nor anywhere else. I'm on a job. I'm getting you out of this place, and I'm on the trail just now, and I can't go away now."

"It fairly takes my breath away just to think of getting out of this! Can you do it?"

"I will do it, whether I can or not. My new hunch will see me through. It must! Brand, there's another think about that night. You feel pretty sure it was Haynes who said Al-us, as he came in the mount Al is Al Sanford."

"Yes, I know it was—"

"But you don't think he killed her?"

"He most positively did not. He might kill a burglar, or he might do in a chap who'd beaten him at pool, but not a girl."

"All right! That leaves Murray Haynes and Delerna. Your choice?"

"Of those two? Well, then, Murray. Delerna is too sentimental. He'd ats don't go around killing people."

"All right, lad; take care of yourself." I'm going on some errands."

Stone telephoned and then went to his own apartment where he was joined by a young man, Peter Burke, a detective of Stone's who had already proved himself a good worker.

"Are you game for a dangerous sortie into the wilds of Chicago?" the detective asked.

"I am that! The wilder the better."

"But you will have to be smart and get trap and wise and canny and dexterous beside."

"I am already half way there! Then I suppose I'll know of the Webb affair? The missing heiress and all that?"

"Yes. You want me to find one? And in Chicago?"

"Or points more or less adjacent. It's the father of the missing girl that you're after."

"A missing father of a missing girl! What does he look like?"

"Seems to me Bliss said he had a picture of her. Why didn't he give it to me? You telephone to the office, Cobb, and ask him if he has one. Tell him I'll send a messenger for it. You on that while I look over these letters!"

The letters and documents Cobb said that Bliss would send the picture right along, but it wasn't much good as it was a baby picture.

"Well, I'll look it up, so I think you'd better work something like that. I've decidly know is that the Webb girl eloped with the Wiley man in 1917. She was then 21 and they went to Chicago to live. Now, suppose you start out by getting hold of old Chicago telephone books for 1917 and on, and see if you can dig up John Wiley. If you can't, then go to the post office or the City Hall or Information Bureau. If any—or see what you can think up yourself, in the way of finding him."

"Shall I fly there?"

"Yes, do everything you can to hurry matters. Keep me informed, telephone daily, every more you make. And be where I can get you at all hours a.m. and seven-p.m. unless you strike something desperate. You see, Burke, I look for Wiley to turn up, as all you can about the girl. She was born in '21, that makes her 21 now, whether she's in Chicago or Timbuktoo, nobody knows."

Akyab Heavily Bombed

A joint communique of the R.A.F. and American air forces in India today said Akyab, the northernmost point in Japanese-held Burma, Rangoon and Magwe were bombed in day and night attacks by Liberators and on Sunday. Many bombs fell on runways, it was said, and enemy fighters were machine-gunned by fighters near Buthidaung.

There was little evidence of activity U.S. airmen of Brig.-Gen. Claire L. Chennault's American air force in and sank a Japanese ship at Haiphong, French Indo-China, Observers said the ship, of 12,000 to 15,000 tons, was probably a transport or possibly an aircraft carrier. Fires from the ship were reported started in Haiphong's dock area.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Cairo, Nov. 22.—Splendid pioneering developments are being carried out on the Burma end of General Stilwell's operations in connection with the allied campaign and a striking upgrade of this is a great airport at which I spent some days en route to Egypt.

This port must be nameless although the existence of the airport is no longer a secret from friend or foe, for it has become too important to hide under a bushel.

Newspaper articles have been written about it and you hear it mentioned freely in New York, Rio, Rio De Janeiro and even in Lisbon, where Axis agents rub shoulders with Allied Nationals.

I arrived at the airport in this strange land of a certain sweltering hot day. It soon became apparent that this was on a good scale, as things stand, may be one of the world's chief airports after the war.

It provides unique facilities at a point that should be extremely valuable in aerial shortcut from the Atlantic clear through to the Orient.

Less than a year ago this was just another fever spot in the swampy jungles of Africa's West Coast. Now it is a healthful little community which is no menace. It has electricity lights and refrigeration. Eight vitamines in its nourishing foods have been hitched to the tail of this comet of civilization.

Lovely Bay

The port has the appearance at first flush of a huge bay, from which nature pushkinly set down beside the mother Atlantic. Actually it is a lake at all but a huge bay which is almost surrounded by land for a mile long and three miles wide and is so shelter-ed that is would accommodate a well nigh limitless Armada of flying boats, behind it are facilities for land planes.

Thus you have a perfect base for war or commerce.

This development is a pan-American airways project and must form a great asset after the war is over of the company's pioneering.

A sturdy little army of pan-American workers has faced tropical diseases and fierce discomfort to make this strategic spot with the help of 700 natives recruited from the surrounding village.

Some 30 acres of bilid have been wrested from the dense jungle, which continually reaches out to reclaim its own. Neighboring morasses have been drained and on the high ground overlooking the airport have been erected many comfortable and well-equipped buildings, including administration offices, a recreation centre, a dining hall, a laundry and five barracks complete with fans, baths and electric lights.

You have to see this region to understand what a tough job has been done. The daytime heat is terrific, although the nights aren't bad, and the humility is so great that the least exertion leaves one a limp rag.

The port has 229 inches of rainfall a year, and that's not all. As it falls on the hot earth, white clouds of steam rise from the low country of the surrounding jungle.

Beneath the vivid green of the palms and other trees are endless stretches of morass. It's death for man or beast to fall into one of these bottomless bogs.

These primeval swamps near the settlement must be drained, for they harbor malaria and yellow fever mosquitos—the great scourges of Africa.

List of Entries for Cheese Show About Same as Previous Years

With a list of entries comparing favorably with those of other years, the fifth annual British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition will get under way here on Monday through to Dec. 3.

The show this year will be held in the Rigas Block, Pinnacle Street, instead of the City Hall as heretofore, however, it is stated that physical changes in the City Hall will necessitate the use of the show to be held there.

Outstanding dairy industry men from Belleville and Toronto will be here as will representatives from Montreal and Ottawa. The show is sponsored by the Central Canada Cheese Makers Association and its directors are leaving no stones unturned to make this year's exhibition outstanding.

Entries are now arriving in the office and will be made ready for the show. Judging will take place over the week-end and prize lists will be posted in the show rooms on the morning the exhibition opens.

Col. George Drew, Ontario Opposition leader, will be the guest speaker at the Association banquet being held in Memorial Auditorium Sunday School Rooms on Wednesday, Dec. 1st. It is expected that a large crowd will turn out for this function.

Devastating Raids Carried Out By Allied Bombers

New Delhi, India, Nov. 22 (AP)—British, United States and Chinese bombers have carried out a series of devastating raids upon Japanese airfields, docks, shipping facilities and airdromes from the Yangtze Basin to the Gulf of Siam.

Chinese bombing crews struck at Canton, Swatow port of Hupeh Province, and Shayang, on the Han River line to Hankow, the latter on yesterday, the Central Chinese News Agency said. Other raids struck over Chungking from a secret airdrome. It was the first time the Chungking airdrome's air force since its raid upon Hankow military establishments in 1938.

The largest formation of United States bombers to leave the Chinese air from an Indian base, joined the British Empire forces in bombing of explosives upon Rangoon, Mandalay and Toungoo, major cities of Burma, Indo-China, Shanghai, Nanking and Hankow.

Simcoe, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)—Two soldiers from No. 36 Canadian Army Basic Training Centre at Simcoe were Saturday on charges of stealing a cash register from the office of Lorne Simcoe's Battenberg Hotel. The register contained $60.

The two prisoners are Pte. Michael Onuska, 28, of Sudbury, Ont., and Pte. Thomas James D. Duke, 30, of Winnipeg.

Arrested with them on the same charge was John Kosiuk of Hamilton, Ont., a civilian. Onuska, two other soldiers, believed to have been in the party of five which stole the register.

Another $10,000,000 For Doris Cromwell

Somerville, N.J., Nov. 23 (AP)—Doris Duke Cromwell passed her 31st birthday Sunday with what came into all inheritance of her own—$10,000,000 bequeathed to her by $90,000,000 legacy from the estate of Doris Duke's father, James B. Duke, tobacco tycoon.

She received the first $10,000,000 at age of 21 and four years later was handed a similar amount. Between the two inheritances she married James H. R. Cromwell, author and sportsman, but they separated in May, 1940.

Miss Duke lived in Ottawa a short while during Cromwell's term there as United States Minister.

Nazi General Dismissed With Scant Courtesy

New York, Nov. 23—(AP)—How Gen. Franz Halder was ousted as chief of the German Army General Staff by Hitler was revealed Sunday in a letter smuggled out of Germany to Dorothy Thompson, the Swedish Magazine Trots Alli and reported here by the office of war information.

Hitler, in the presence of his entire staff, was reported to have told Halder:

"I am under the impression that your achievements do not keep up with my demands and you are unable to grasp the greatness of my tasks.

"These hats are killer-dillers these days, aren't they?"

U.S. PACT REACHED WITH MARTINIQUE

American Occupation of French Possession Not Likely Necessary

Washington, Nov. 23—(AP)—The United States has reached a satisfactory agreement with Martinique, Secretary of State Hull said today, as a result of which there is not likely to be any necessity for American occupation of the French Caribbean possession.

Hull said his agreement provides the new agreement covered all Western Hemisphere, including French Guiana.

In effect, he said, it is a renewal of the agreement originally made with Admiral Georges Robert, French High Commissioner on Martinique, with important additions and modifications.

Hull said he had conferred with Admiral Robert, the Vichy regime's representative on the island, and with Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, commander of the United States naval forces in the area.

Under the agreement, Hull said, the United States will have the right to establish a naval base on the island, and will have the right to use the airfield at Fort de France.

Hull said the agreement was reached after "long and difficult negotiations" and that it was "entirely satisfactory" to the United States.

Hull said the agreement provides that the United States will withdraw its forces from the island as soon as the war is over.

Hull said the agreement was reached through the efforts of Admiral Greenslade and Admiral Robert.

PIERRE LAVAL FAVORS ALLIANCE WITH GERMANY

Declares Only Hope for Peace Lies in Reconciliation and Entente With Germany

Vichy, (From French Broadcasts) Nov. 23—(AP)—Pierre Laval advocated an alliance with Germany as Europe's sole hope for peace in a broadcast to the people of Nazi-occupied France last night and declared new volunteer legions would be raised to answer "the fresh insults which France has had to suffer" from the Allied campaign in North Africa.

"We are again seeking reconciliation and an entente with Germany", Laval declared in his first address since he was given dictatorial powers and named as political heir to Marshal Petain.

He accused Britain and the United States of "tearing away bit by bit at the French Empire because of their losses in the Pacific"; said he was certain of a German victory.

Attacks Roosevelt

"From what has happened in North Africa we have discovered the fate that waits us tomorrow if Roosevelt gets away with it", Laval said. "We would have to submit to a domination by Communists and Jews."

(The dark little collaborationist's talk of volunteer legions such as the detachments which have fought alongside the Germans on the Russian front—suggested Laval was not prepared at this time to thrust the country into a formal state of war against the Allies. He did not mention the existing French army regiments and the Toulon-based fleet which still take orders from Vichy.)

To Show Where Party Standes

In his 15-minute speech Laval assured his people that Germany would not lose the war, declared he had tried to maintain peace with the United States and blamed President Roosevelt for bringing French and Americans to gunpoint after centuries of friendship.

He scoffed at British and American assurances that the French North African Empire would be restored to a democratic France after the war, and said that instead those nations are "seizing the (French) Empire seeking compensation for losses (to Japan in the Orient) which they know are irreparable."

Urging his people to lay aside their ancient animosity for Germany, he said, "an entente with Germany is the only guarantee for peace in Europe." He asserted "I will never accept for my country a parliamentary government as we had before."

Making no direct reference to the recently-completed occupation of all France by German armies, Laval warned that food shortages are coming to the already-hungry country and blamed them upon allied occupation of North Africa—a source of supplies for France and for the Axis for the last two years.

He warned his countrymen against listening to the British and American radios, saying "don't let your spirits be misled to serve interests that are not yours."

Full-Powered Allied Invasion In the Making

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

This weekend marks an Axis war anniversary Hitler has not forgotten but will not celebrate. It was Nov. 22, 1941, that his armies rolled into Rostov-on-Don. That was the highwater mark of his Russian campaign of that year.

A week later his troops rolled out of Rostov again, in retreat. What he has since recorded as his darkest hour of the war was upon him with the Russian winter.

Within recent weeks Hitler has recapitulated events of that dread winter of '41 to tell his people "it cannot happen again." Yet by every available yardstick this Nov. 22 is more ominous for his made-in-Berlin Axis. Disaster is stalking it not in Russia alone, but in Africa, at sea, in China and in the far Pacific.

A full-powered Allied invasion threat actually is knocking thunderously at its European southern postern gate from North Africa. Before this winter ends, its counter-parts may be hammering also from the west across the English Channel and the North Sea. In the Pacific, Japanese sea power, the vital weapon on that front, is being bled white by American victories.

Storm Brewing.

And in unconquered and unconquerable Russia itself a storm also is brewing. Still at bay short of his objectives in the Volga-Don corridor and in the Caucasus as another winter closes in, Hitler must know that the deadliest Allied attack of all is in the making. Red armies inured to winter, of proved skill and unrivalled courage, are massing for attack, not defense. And no delaying water hazard need be spanned from the east as from the south or the west.

Yet there are two other factors in the war situation at this moment which may be giving Hitler even graver concern. They are the air power he can still muster and maintain to meet his expanding defense needs and the fuel oil resources on which he can depend to power his merchanized armies and operate his war industries.

The major mystery of the war at this crucial stage is Nazi air power. There is growing suspicion that it has been an overrated element in the Allied problem for months if not from the outset of the war.

Most recent British unofficial estimates credited Hitler last October with approximately 5,000 first-line planes of all types. Half of them were supposed to be in the east, 1,500 engaged in the Volga-Caucasus battles alone.

Where Is Luffwaffe?

The other 2,500 by this estimate were variously distributed. Some 400 were with Rommel in Africa and another 400 covering the Mediterranean with Malta as their prime target. Another 800, a majority of them fighters, appeared based in France and the Low Countries, some 200 in Northern Norway endeavoring to cripple Russia's Murmansk supply route and 500 or more retained in Germany to meet British air raids.

That British calculation obviously flowed from careful appraisal of the degree of enemy air strength encountered by the Allies on each front and there are many things to indicate that is comes much closer to the truth than vague reports that Hitler has 50,000 or even 100,000 combat planes still at his call. And if it is anywhere near accurate, his present plight is far more serious than the most optimistic Allied calculations have yet dared venture to guess.

Lack of air power to match Allied concentrations was a primary cause of the disaster that has overtaken the Axis in Egypt and Libya. It underscores the initial and expanding success of the American-British surge eastward from French Africa.

Except at Stalingrad, over Malta, and on the Murmansk supply route there has been no evidence of strong German air concentrations this year. Where is the vaunted Luffwaffe?

Auxiliary Landing Field Under Construction At Former Camp Mohawk

Construction on an auxiliary landing field for the Trenton Station of the Royal Canadian Air Force at the former Camp Mohawk, near Deseronto is proceeding apace.

Several buildings have been completed from a program of twenty-six all told, while work has been finished on one hangar. Runways have also been finished and more are under construction.

The work has resulted in a decided boom for the bayside town and several new residents, who are connected with the new construction project have taken up residence there.

Work on the landing field started nearly two years ago, and the interest of George H. Stokes, M.P., for Hastings South working in collaboration with the Deseronto Chamber of Commerce, was one of the main factors in the transforming of the former airfield site to its present capacity.

NAZIS FACE ENCIRCLEMENT AT STALINGRAD

Reds Score Fresh Gains Northwest And South of City

Estimate 50,000 Nazis Killed or Captured in First Four Days of Offensive

MUCH BOOTY TAKEN

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Nov. 24—(AP)—The paws of a double Russian offensive which battlefront reports said had bit deeply into the cold steppes west of the Don bend and cost the Germans 50,000 dead and captured were closing steadily today upon the Nazis' whole Stalingrad salient.

Despite desperate German resistance in an effort to keep open a corridor of reinforcement or escape to the long-besieged Volga bastion, the Russians reported new gains to maintain their average of six to 12 miles a day northwest of Stalingrad and nine to 12 miles a day southwest of the city.

The deepest reported penetration was at Chernyshevskaya on the Chir River, 125 miles west of Stalingrad and 75 miles west of Kalach, the railroad town on the Don bend which the Russians seized during the weekend.

Chernyshevskaya is 40 miles southwest of Kletskaya, the Don River citadel 100 miles northwest of Stalingrad which the Nazis over-ran in their fall drive toward the Volga. Now German holding positions at Kletskaya are menaced from two sides, since the Russians also are on the offensive in the Serafimovich, 30 miles farther up the Don.

Southwest of Stalingrad the Russians were pushing along the rail line which leads from Stalingrad across the bleak Kalmyk steppes into the northern Caucasus. They reported driving on after taking Aksai in a 10-mile advance from Abganerova, 40 miles southwest of Stalingrad.

Nazis Admit Advances

(The German High Command apparently regarded the turn of the tide on the eastern European front as too great to conceal from the people, and a communique acknowledged that the German defensive lines had been penetrated.

(The communique said the Russians were attacking south of Stalingrad and in the Don bend without regard to losses, and added that "counter measures are proceeding.")

Battlefront dispatches said the Germans were suffering heavy losses in the Kalmyk steppes where they had penetrated late in the fall. Two infantry divisions were declared routed there and the Russians were said to be advancing on a 12-mile front.

Frontline dispatches indicated that the Germans were using reinforcements and battling desperately to hold their Stalingrad corridor.

"Several tens" of German and other Axis divisions were reported entrenched and fortified in positions guarded by minefields and tank traps and laid out in a defence system in some paces five or six lines deep.

Details of the advances were not given but many hundreds more Germans were reported killed, adding to the previous Russian estimates that the enemy lost 50,000 killed and captured through the first four days of the drive.

The regular mid-day communique did not name any of the towns captured through the night but said that "our units occupied a number of populated places" northwest of Stalingrad, indicating the Axis forces that have been battering at that city for three months are in growing danger of encirclement.

125 Mile Advance

The Russians were reported to have driven one prong of the two-pronged offensive as far as 125 miles northwest of Stalingrad.

Siege-toughened defenders of Stalingrad helped themselves, too, clearing the Germans from seventeen blockhouses, killing 250 and capturing two guns and an assortment of smaller arms, the communique said.

The offensive columns northwest of the city were said to have smashed enemy resistance at several points, knocking out nine German tanks, capturing seven guns, an ammunition dump and a wireless station in one area while in another 13 tanks were disabled or fired.

'Seafire' Plane Used by Navy A Smart Craft

London, Nov. 24 (CP). — The "Seafire", Britain's swift modification of the Spitfire plane, was used by the navy from aircraft carriers, and proved itself in protecting troopships and warships in the North African campaign, it is disclosed.

Naval correspondents said yesterday that the plane, armed with cannon and machine guns, can meet a land-based air attack "on something like equal terms".

Seafires have an arrester hook fitted in front of the tail wheel for landing on a carrier deck.

Gordon Reassures Small Retailers On Goods Supply

Ottawa, Nov. 24—(CP)—Donald Gordon, chairman of the Prices Board, Monday branded as "rumor mongering of the most destructive kind," the "fantastic stories that have been circulated about the board's intention to close down hundreds and even thousands of retail outlets."

Addressing a large delegation representing independent retail merchants, Mr. Gordon said the Prices Board intended to do everything possible to ensure equitable distribution of available supplies. This means that the small retailer will have equal opportunity to obtain his proportionate share of available goods."

'Good Hunting And Good Luck In Race for Tripoli'

Cairo, Nov. 24—(AP) — Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, sent a message yesterday to Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, 8th Army Commander wishing him "good hunting and good luck in the race between you and Anderson for Tripoli."

The "race" to which he referred is the 8th Army's westward pursuit of Marshal Rommel's Africa Corps and the eastward drive of Lt.-Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's British, American and fighting French forces through Tunisia.

Rising Axis Air Power Slows Allied Tunisian Advance

ALLIES FIGHT WAY YARD BY YARD TOWARD BUNA

Japanese Apparently Choose To Be Exterminated Rather Than Surrender Position

MOVE INTO GONA

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Nov. 24—(AP)—Australian and American soldiers fought their way yard by yard toward Buna today against Japanese forces that apparently have chosen to be exterminated rather than to surrender their southernmost New Guinea beachhead.

Extending the picture of relentless envelopment, today's mid-day communique reported an Australian jungle column had moved into Gona, enemy anchor 12 miles north of Buna, and was mopping up the garrison there.

Simultaneously, American forces over-run Cape Endaiadere which is three mile southwest of Buna, overcoming stiff resistance from many machine-gun nests and tree-top snipers.

While some of the Allied left wing forces were completing the mop-up job in Gona, others turned down the coast toward Sanahanda, between Gona and Buna, which the enemy was reported to occupy in force.

The Japanese were resisting fiercely around Buna although they were forced to fight with no air support and no sea support. Allied bombers kept close watch along the coast for any effort to reinforce or evacuate the Japanese units which are being slowly shoved back into the sea.

Number of Rafts Sunk

Allied planes continued to support the ground advance and one formation swept over the Kumisi River, which curves around the battle area to the northwest, to sink a number of rafts on which Japanese who had been cut off from their Buna base were trying to reach the sea.

With Gona entered and Allied troops reported on the beach between Buna and Gona, the last points of resistance seemed to be at Buna and at Sanahanda. American troops were reported fighting yesterday at Buna mission, a mile from the town and it was

8,500 Day-Shift Ford Workers Go on Strike

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP).—Day shift employees variously estimated to number between 7,000 and 8,500 were on strike at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant here at noon today and it was reported that another 4,500 workers on the two later shifts would also walk out.

The strike started with a walkout of more than 1,000 employees from one department and a statement by the United Automotive Workers (C.I.O.) said that the walkout was caused "by the recent action of the company in employing women at less pay for jobs formerly done by men". It was believed two women had been employed at 50 cents an hour.

Opening in Plant No. 1 of the huge manufacturing concern which is engaged on war orders, the walk-out spread to plants No. 2 and No. 4, virtually closing down the giant industry.

Possibility of a city-wide strike in war plants in which members of the union are employed was rumored but no other plants reported difficulty. The Union claimed there would be walkouts at the Chrysler Corporation plant and at some smaller industries.

The Ford Company issued a statement giving the number of strikers as 7,000, and said that no word had been heard from officials of the U. A. W. concerning the cause of the walkout.

Union sources claimed the entire day shift of 8,800 employees was on strike, 1,500 from Plant No. 1, 4,300 from Plant No. 2, including foundry workers, and 3,000 from Plant No. 4.

Police Called.

Police were called to the scene as a precaution against any disturbance. About 300 workers remained outside the building an hour and a half after the strike was called.

The Ford Company had applied to the Regional War Labor Board some time ago for permission to hire women workers at a starting rate of 50 cents an hour and Union officials strenuously opposed the application. The board's decision has been awaited for some time.

The union is understood to have stood out for a 75 cents an hour starting rate for women shop workers.

"It is not a union-ordered strike," said George Burt, regional director of the U.A.W. "But now that it has happened we are going to take the necessary steps to get the situation under control. The contract (between the union and the Ford company) says that women shall not be employed in factory work until a conference has been held between the union and the company. Such a conference has not been held."

"Because the men know this and knew that women are working in Stock Seven (of Plant No. 1) they took the reins in their own hands," said Harry Rowe, assistant to Mr. Burt.

Mr. Rowe said that two weeks ago representatives of the union and industry in Windsor went to Toronto and met the Labor Board. He said the union and industry were generally in agreement at that conference that women should be hired at the same rates as the men. Both union and company representatives asked an order from the board to that effect. But to his knowledge no such order, nor any other order regarding the hiring of women shop workers, had been issued.

ALL SLAUGHTERING OF LIVESTOCK TO BE BY PERMIT

Measure Designed to Obtain More Control Over Meat Supplies

EFFECTIVE JAN. 1

Ottawa, Nov. 24—(CP) — The Prices Board today issued an order placing under permit all slaughtering of livestock for the sale of meat. The measure is designed to obtain more complete control of meat supplies throughout Canada.

The order specifies that after Jan. 1, 1943, "no person shall, unless he has previously obtained a permit from the Foods Administrator (J. G. Taggart) or any other person authorized by the board, operate an abattoir or slaughter-house or slaughter livestock, or have livestock slaughtered for him, if the meat so obtained is sold or offered for sale in fresh, frozen or other processed form."

The measure will enable the board to obtain a record of all places where livestock is slaughtered for the sale of meat, and will provide a more comprehensive picture of the sources of meat supplies in all sections of the country, the announcement says.

It will provide wider control of the conservation of valuable by-products, particularly much-needed fats, as well as hides and other items. Custom slaughtering will be controlled, as this now is added to the list of services regulated by the board.

Prices Designated

The board order designating custom slaughtering a service for purposes of the price regulations also provides that maximum prices therefore are to be determined by those established in the period Oct. 26 to Oct. 31, 1942, both dates inclusive. Jurisdiction over this service is assigned to the Foods Administrator.

Those who slaughter livestock outside a recognized abattoir or slaughter house and offer the meat for sale also will require permission.

The board says it is felt that the control established under the new order will be valuable in eliminating "black market" practices which have been reported from time to time in some areas, interfering with normal regulated domestic supplies and those required for the armed forces.

Board Has Full Control

Broad control is vested in the foods administrator or any other person authorized by the board, who "may in his discretion, with respect to any matter affected by any provision of this order, make an order or grant, refuse, cancel or suspend any permit, exemption or other authority in such cases as he deems proper."

GERMANS PLOT EXTORTION TO GET FOREIGN CURRENCY

Netherlands Gov't. Charges Sale of Exit Permits in Vast Scheme

WARNING BY ALLIES

London, Nov. 24 (CP).—The Netherlands government in London today charged Germany with organizing a vast scheme of extortion by selling exit permits from occupied territory for great sums and said it would combat the traffic with every means in co-operation with the British and United States governments.

"Relatives and friends in Allied and neutral territory receive a communication that persons in occupied territory will be allowed to emigrate on condition that a considerable sum, in the currency of a neutral country, be made available to the enemy," it said.

"In some cases the request emanates from the prospective emigrant. In other cases the attempt is made through associates of the enemy in neutral territory. The request is sometimes accompanied by an open or veiled threat that those concerned will be sent to a concentration camp should the ransom not be forthcoming.

"Evidence which has reached the Netherlands government and the government and the governments of the United Kingdom and the United States indicates that the practices are organized by the German authorities and that our enemies are doing their utmost to increase their holdings of neutral currency."

The sums demanded, it said, are sometimes as high as the equivalent of $20,000 a head.

"The Netherlands government after consultation with the British and United States governments," it announced, "reluctantly have come to the conclusion that they cannot yield to German attempts at extortion."

It said that while a few might escape "the sadism and terror of the Nazis", there remained the accumulated misery and starvation of those left in occupied territory and "they will remain subjected to Nazi rule as long as the enemy's foreign assets will enable him to stave off the day of his defeat and the liberation of the oppressed European peoples."

It added that "submission to intimidation is incitement to increase pressure." . . .

Warns Against Making Payments.

Lord Selborne, Minister of Economic Warfare, made a similar statement for the British government in the House of Lords.

He warned that all persons making payments or facilitating the traffic will be regarded as "being engaged in transactions for the benefit of the enemy" and will be put on the British blacklist. If living in the

ROMMEL'S FORCES EVACUATE OASIS S. OF AGEDABIA

British 8th Army Enters Agedabia And Continues Pursuit Of Axis

LIGHT AIR ACTIVITY

Cairo, Nov. 24 (AP) — The British 8th Army entered Agedabia, 100 miles south of Bengasi, yesterday and continued its pursuit of the broken Axis army toward El Agheila, 70 miles to the southwest, British headquarters announced today.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces have evacuated the Gialo Oasis, south of Agedabia, and were reported continuing their withdrawal toward El Agheila, where a stand may be made. The oasis was occupied by British units.

British advance forces maintained contact with the rearguards of the retreating Axis forces on the road to El Agheila, the communique said.

On Small Scale

Air activity over the Libyan desert was on a small scale yesterday, the communique said, but torpedo aircraft were active over the Mediterranean and an enemy merchant vessel was reported hit amidships and sunk southeast of Sardinia.

The Allied bombers also attacked Bizerte, Tunisia, where German and Italian troops have been landing to oppose the Allied forces driving into Tunisia. Results of the attack were not announced.

Axis aircraft at Palermo, Sicily, were strafed by other Allied planes. Sicily is one of the main Axis bases supplying the German and Italian troops in Tunisia.

The communique reported that three large enemy planes were shot down by Allied fighters off the east coast of Tunisia yesterday and a schooner was attacked with cannon fire.

Two Allied aircraft are reported missing from these operations.

Hon. J. L. Ralston May Become Chief Justice

Ottawa, Nov. 24 (CP)—The Ottawa Journal said in a newspage story today the tribute to Defence Minister Ralston paid at a dinner tendered by Defence Headquarters officers last night "is believed to foreshadow Mr. Ralston's retirement from the cabinet to accept the post of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada." Mr. Ralston is 61.

The story added: "Should Mr. Ralston be offered and accept the judicial post, he would succeed Sir Lyman Duff, present Chief Justice of Canada. Sir Lyman celebrated his 77th birthday in October and is said by his associates of the court to have considered retirement for some time past. . . .

"For some weeks past it has been rumored widely in parliamentary circles that Mr. Ralston would accept the highest judicial post in the gift of the Dominion, were it offered to him.

"Although active in Federal politics for upwards of 20 years, Mr. Ralston retained close interest in his legal practice. He is a partner in the firm of Mitchell, Ralston, Kearney and Duquet, of Montreal. Between 1935 and 1940 he had retired from the House of Commons and devoted most of his time to private legal practice."

Mr. Ralston returned to the cabinet as Finance Minister after the outbreak of war in 1939. He was appointed Defence Minister in July, 1940, succeeding the late Norman Rogers, who was killed in an airplane crash.

Germany Gathers Great Plane Fleets In Mediterranean

General Picture In Africa Improves With Acquisition Of Dakar

CAN USE NAVAL BASE

By E. C. DANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 24 —(AP)— A violently erupting struggle for air supremacy was fought over Tunisia and along the Axis Mediterranean shuttle route today while British and American forces on the ground were getting set for the all-out assault upon Tunis and Bizerte, once the enemy is driven from the North African skies.

There was every sign that the aerial conflict would be a hard one, for great fleets of German planes were gathering in the Mediterranean theatre and Axis reinforcements still were reaching Tunisia through the Allied gauntlet.

"The fight is going to be tough and longer than might be expected," said a spokesman at Allied headquarters in North Africa.

Bearing him out were reports from both sides telling of the mounting fury of the struggle.

The British Middle East Command announced at Cairo that at least three large enemy planes, which may have been troop transports, were sent plunging into the sea yesterday off the Tunisian coast.

Air War Intense

Broadcasting an Allied communique, the Morocco radio said that Allied air activity had grown "very intense" and that another violent bombing raid had been made on Tripoli, in Libya.

The Algiers radio said nine Axis planes were destroyed in an Allied raid on an enemy-held air field in Tunisia and a Vichy broadcast told of heavy air raids last night by Germans and Italians on Algiers, Bone and Bougie, Allied-held ports in Algeria.

A heavy bombing assault on Bizerte and strafing of grounded enemy planes at Palmero, the Sicilian base from which Axis reinforcements are being flown to Tunisia, were carried out Sunday night by the R.A.F., the Cairo war bulletin said.

Burma Airdrome Heavily Bombed

New Delhi, Nov. 24—(CP)—R. A. F. bombers raided a Japanese airdrome at Meiktila, Burma, south of Mandalay last night and, in addition to bombing the runways, started large fires in other parts of the airdrome, a British communique said today.

Smoke from the fires rose to 7,000 feet and fires could be seen from a distance of 100 miles, the communique said. No British planes were lost.

American bombers, striking at Mandalay for the second time in three days, hit a railway repair shop and showered bombs on railway sidings and freight cars on Sunday, a communique said.

On Friday night the Japanese-held railway centre was the target for attack by the largest American formation ever to operate from an air base in India.

Bombs then fell on repair shops, switching yards and a large warehouse, starting large fires.

In the follow-up raid, by daylight Sunday, bombers operating "in some force," concentrated on damaging or demolishing targets which escaped Friday.

E. Little Mooted 'As Dark Horse' Says Free Press

London, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—The London Free Press said in a newspage story Monday:

"The name of Elliott Little, who resigned last week as Director of National Selective Service, is being mooted as a dark horse for the leadership of the Conservative party.

"Those who are proposing his name say that he has all the qualifications to make a leader of the Conservative party in the present crisis. He is young—only 42 years of age. He has the confidence of labor, while he is a successful executive."

Free Press adds that "he was born in Ontario and lives in Quebec, so that he knows the problems of the two provinces.

"Mr. Little has shown that he has courage and is no 'yes man'. He is a dynamo of energy. Those who are suggesting his name feel that he is a man who can unite all elements in the country who are dissatisfied with the government's conduct of the war.

"Mr. Little feels strongly on the subject of the war and it is believed that if he was offered the leadership he would undertake it as a patriotic effort."

17 Canadian Corvettes Took Part In Current Campaigns in Africa

Ottawa, Nov. 24 (CP) — Navy Minister MacDonald announced today at a press conference that 17 Canadian corvettes, with approximately 1,200 men of the Royal Canadian Navy, took part in the current North and West African campaigns.

In addition, men of the R.C.N. manned a number of landing craft and others served with the Royal Navy in the operations.

Mr. MacDonald did not name the corvettes involved.

He said no detailed reports have yet been received of the work they were able to accomplish.

Mr. Macdonald said 14 ships had been sunk this year in the area served by the Gaspe navy base and six in Cabot Strait and the Strait of Belle Isle—20 all told in the St. Lawrence River and Gulf.

The submarine situation in the North Atlantic is still very grave, said the minister. Despite employment by the enemy of many submarines in the Gibraltar area because of the North African operations, there was still a very heavy concentration on the Atlantic convoy routes.

The minister said he wished to "put the record straight" on the number of ship sinkings in the St. Lawrence River during the past summer. There were reports that the sinkings ran as high as 40 and a Quebec member of parliament, whom he did not name, had been quoted as saying there were 30 ships sunk in the area served by the Gaspe base.

"The number sunk in that area was 14 from the beginning of this year to date," said Mr. Macdonald. "There were none sunk there last year.

"In addition, there were six ships sunk in Cabot Strait and the Strait of Belle Isle, making a total of 20 in the whole river and gulf area.

"On the whole, the ships were smaller than average."

Mr. MacDonad said it was quite possible for enemy submarines to land people on Canadian coasts, in remote areas. They had done that in the United States and an American party had landed from a submarine in North Africa and come away if there were any such landings it would probably be for purposes of sabotage.

There were no reports of submarine crews landing to purchase supplies. The submarine carried ampel supplies and there was no necessity for them to take that risk.

Some of the new tribal class destroyers being built for the Royal Canadian Navy in Britain will be in operation soon, said the minister. He added that the navy now has more than 500 ships of all kind.

The participation of Canadian corvettes in the North African operations was not the first time the Canadian Navy joined with American naval forces in operations of the kind, since five Canadian ships took part with Americans in the operations at Kiska in the Aleutian islands.

PURSE SNATCHER GIVEN 9 MONTHS

Must Serve Three Months on Each of Three Charges Consecutively

Convicted on three counts of purse snatching, 28-year-old Gordon Dempsey of Belleville was sentenced to serve nine months in the Ontario Reformatory after he pleaded guilty to the multiple charges before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today. Ida Worship sentenced Cooney to three months on each count, the terms to run consecutively.

The offences occurred on Hallowe'en night last when the purses of three local ladies were snatched and a total of $20.00 stolen. Dempsey of Harman today told the court that Cooney's associate in the crimes had been given a two years' suspended sentence upon making full restitution of the amounts stolen.

"There is a distinction between the two," Magistrate Lloyd said when he has a record of previous convictions" revealed. Crown Attorney W. C. Mikel and Police Chief Ross presented the list to the court.

"You haven't been in trouble in four years and I might say I was drinking Hallowe'en myself," Magistrate Cooney.

If you had not been apprehended on those charges you might have been snatching purses yet," continued the magistrate. Lloyd as he ruled the jail terms must run consecutive-ly.

Mayor Outlines Position Taken With Utilities

Reads in Council Letter Addressed to Citizens of Belleville

SHORT SESSION

"Before the close of the business session of the City Council on Monday evening," Mayor Ellis, one of the shortest of the present term, Mayor Ellis in a letter read to the council on a couple of matters having to do with the Belleville Gas Light Co., the Belleville Utilities and the City Council.

Mayor Thompson's letter addressed to the citizens of Belleville' outlined his position on the question of establishing a distributing system and also his position on the impending suit between the Utilities and the City Council. The other letter was addressed to the electors of the Corporation. The first letter to the Citizens of Belleville follows:

November 19, 1942.

To the Citizens of Belleville:

In the matter of the report of a meeting of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission, to be published a statement over the signature of Mr. Commissioner A. Bell, in which he says that he wishes to inform the public of certain facts relative to the action between the City of Belleville and the Utilities Commission. He further states that if the Council is so disposed, Mr. Commissioner Bell will call a meeting of the Commission to go with the work, if so, he points out the suit must go on, for the dispute is a matter of law and the Utilities Board will be in the right, and on such a point the decision must be given by the highest authority, namely a High Court Judge.

Now, I think these "facts" are quite correct, such as the increase in water consumption since 1935; that the water storage for Bleiker water is limited; and that the communication from Mr. Commissioner Gore and Sterrie, Consulting Engineers, that the Utilities are not delivering the water in sufficient pressure and quantity as set by our manager.

He is in great error when he says that I gave a "casting vote". His statement is not quite clear as to whether he is referring to the vote or whether the Council would authorize the disbursement for the expenses of the vote that placed the injunction on the Utilities Commission. In paragraph he speaks of both reservoir and the injunction. Does one or does not matter, for both votes were taken in the same manner, that is by question at the Council table at a regular meeting of Council, on April 27, and on the injunction at a Special meeting of Council on May 14. In both cases a "Yeas and Nays" were demanded, and in such a case, the Mayor votes last. Mr. Commissioner Meagher voted after my vote was polled, and he voted "Nay" and not a casting vote.

Mayor Bell is not strictly correct in the matter of inviting the Consulting Engineers to the Council Chamber. Mayor had informed us that the fillers were not delivering as much water as they should, and our motion was that the Engineers be asked to advise us on the case. They did that readily enough, but their report was much further than the filler-beds. They laid out a program of improvements to the Water Supply Plant that would extend over a term of years and would amount to, in the aggregate over $300,000.

I wish to make my position perfectly clear to you. I am not opposed to providing any necessary storage for filtered water, but I am not convinced that it is an immediate necessity, and we can manage with what we have until the war is over, and prices revert more nearly to normal, the cost will be less; and further when our boys get back from "over there" many of them will want employment, sewers and sidewalks. Whatever profits there are at present were created by the present citizens, and if they are used for that work, you will pay the whole cost, while future citizens will get the benefits at no cost to themselves. It is my contention that the surplus profits from our water utility should be placed where the law specifies, namely in the hands of our City Treasurer for the reduction of taxes. This, fellow citizens, is the point in dispute, and I sincerely trust that the approaching non-jury suit will settle the point of law, so that the two bodies may be able to work in harmony for the best interests of you, our citizens.

Yours faithfully,

Glencoe E. Thompson,

Mayor.

The letter addressed to the electors of the Corporation is harsher in tone.

Belleville, November 22, 1942.

To the Electors of Belleville:

We are approaching the election for the various elective bodies for the year 1943. The topic that seems to be uppermost in the minds of the people is the controversy between the Commissioners for our Utilities and the City Council.

Commissioner Duff was elected three years ago and must now appeal before you for your approval, or otherwise. I understand that he is asking for re-election.

Commissioner Reid was elected two years ago, but claims that he has a ruling that under the Special Act of the Legislature he has still another year before appealing to you for a vote of confidence.

I would like to point out to Mr. Reid that there will be an election in the city on December 7, 1942, and it would not add to expense to place his name before the electors at that time. It would by this means find out whether or not the people have any faith in his actions, are satisfied with his stewardship. "Surely Mr. Reid would not want to sit as a Commissioner if he has not the confidence of the people. I am prepared to go on either side, so Mr. Reid does not have no excuse for refusing to offer himself for re-election at this time. Nomination Day for the Utilities election is December 1, and I urge him for the above position.

Yours truly,

Glencoe E. Thompson,

Mayor, City of Belleville.

A resident, who purchased a lot from the city in 1911, has built on the lot now being in the process of being reclaimed by the city, applied for a permit to erect a new dwelling more time, but he was notified that he must wait at least before the next meeting of the Council with it's new members, to guarantee to erect a house, the plans of which have been approved by the City Engineer. If he understood some complaints have been received from residents in the vicinity of the lot on which a small house has been erected and a number of trailers have been placed there. The complaints were that the owner of same was requested not to add any more until permission had been obtained from the City Council or the City Engineer. The Engineer was to make a report on these trailers at the next meeting.

ALLOWED TO ERECT SIGN

The Alliance Theatre was granted permission to erect a sign in front of their property and the City Council has decided to accept the figures of the City Assessor as to the amount to be paid. ### MISS DAISY CARRE

(Formerly of Belleville)

Miss Daisy Carre died early this Tuesday morning in the Belleville General Hospital, where she was in failing health for some time.

The late Miss Carrie, Elmsbelt, Mand, Daisy Carre was born in Belleville, a daughter of the late Mr. Henry Carre, D.L.S., and Mrs. Carre, late residents of Belleville. For some time she lived in Brockville and came with her family to Belleville, where she was a nurse-in-charge of study at the institution she practised her profession in Ottawa and later in Belleville. In this city many friends will learn with regret of her death. Of late years she made her home in Toronto.

In religion Miss Carre was a faithful member of the Church of England and during her residence in Belleville, she attended St. Thomas' Church and took an active part in the Women's organizations connected with the parish. In Toronto she attended the Church of St. Simon on Simcoe Street.

Surviving her are three brothers, Mr. Fred J. Carre, Belleville; Mr. Eric Carre and Mr. Harry Carre both of Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. Gundy Carre, died some time ago at Lethbridge, Alta.

Interment will take place in the family plot, Belleville Cemetery on Thursday. The funeral announcement will be made in this paper tomorrow.

GRANTED HIS DIVORCE

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 24—(AP)—Peter Miller, 72, testified in court here today that his 50-year-old wife attacked him with a meat cleaver almost every night—and she kissed the corpse's cheek at the funeral of his enemies, attacking from the rear, he said in his suit for divorce.

Miller testified that during the well wave of this danger and persecution, his spokesman said, only a few days ago told of a new and formidable Japanese menace in the Indo-China and in the small slice of Yunnan along the Indo-China border, that Japanese seized last spring. Sunday's punishing Allied air attack on Haiphong, northern Indo-China's chief port, probably was aimed to interfere with such concentrations.

Burma's chief strategical value to the Allies is that its possession closed the one effective avenue of Allied aid to China. But conquering the Yunnanese will achieve the same purpose and at the same time bring Japanese armies within striking distance of the heart of Free China and Chungking. Japan's bases in Burma and Yunnan Japan must send ships all the way around the Malay Peninsula, nearly 3,000 miles from Japan's home bases and nearly 2,000 from her main South China base at Hong Kong. If her Burma-Yunnan armies could be supplied by way of Haiphong and the long mountain railway through northern Indo-China and Yunnan to Hunming, the distance from Hong Kong could be cut by some 2,000 miles.

Japan's shipping shortage is becoming dangerous; she may well decide she must shorten her line somewhere.

Search Continues For John Semple In Brighton Area

After remaining dormant for many years, the High Bluff Island mystical gold treasure attracted the attention of Provincial Police Monday in their efforts to locate John Semple, 50, missing Brighton fisherman, who is wanted on a charge of murder in connection with the old grandmother and the shooting of his wife and daughter at their home in Brighton Saturday night.

It's a problem but not probable," Knox told a press conference, "as to cause Semple to leave his boat and his working day and night."

The Japanese have not taken reported losses in troops on the island since their unsuccessful drive almost two weeks ago to land reinforces and overwhelm the defenders of the airfield there.

Prior to the big push, the Japanese had the matched of feeding in an average of about 900 men every second night, landing them from cruiser-destroyer groups.

It was this practice that Knox was asked about at his press conference and his answer clearly indicated a belief that at least for the time being the Japanese troops on the island, principally in the vicinity of the American positions, are virtually cut off from the rest of their forces in the northeastern Solomons.

Widen Area of Control

Knox said the American meanwhile are continuing to widen their area of control particularly by pressing back the enemy forces on the Lunga area, to the northwest.

He confirmed that fighting has been going on in the vicinity of Point Cruz, which is a little more than four miles beyond the airfield.

From the extreme of this action in the west to the farthest point of action on the east flank at Tenaru, where a Japanese force of several hundred men was wiped out early this month, is a distance of approximately 16 miles, while the depth of the American-held area at the entire sector can be stirled at about four miles.

This expanding territory, however, is less than three per cent of the entire island of Guadalcanal.

Asked whether the objective of present operations is to drive the Japanese out of the island, Knox said that elimination of the enemy from Guadalcanal naturally has always been the purpose.

Japs Not Getting Reinforcements On Guadalcanal

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Navy Secretary Frank Knox said today it is very unlikely that the Japanese are getting reinforcements in their troops opposing American forces on Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands.

"It is possible but not probable," Knox told a press conference, "because of the great distance and probable working day and night."

The Japanese have not taken reported losses in troops on the island since their unsuccessful drive almost two weeks ago to land reinforces and overwhelm the defenders of the airfield there.

THE WAR TODAY

By GLENN BABB

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Japan can not win by defeating China alone, it was declared today as long as Chiang Kai-Shek holds together the resistance of China and his armies in the few provinces that remain of free capital the business program of conquest is incomplete.

So the next major undertaking of the Japanese army may be a new effort to knock China out of the war. That is a similar prediction was made in this column only six months ago, when enemy preparations were underway for the Japanese drive which seized last spring. Sunday's punishing Allied air attack on Haiphong, northern Indo-China's chief port, probably was aimed to interfere with such concentrations.

Burma's chief strategical value to the Allies is that its possession closed the one effective avenue of Allied aid to China. # Fire Destroys Valuable Home On Paudash Lake

Bancroft.—(Special)— Fire destroyed the summer home of Mr. W. W. Wise of Paudash Lake on Highway 28, nine miles west of Bancroft, Saturday evening shortly after six o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Wise spent Saturday morning about seven o'clock for Canton, Ohio, several miles south of Cleveland, spending several days visiting with relatives. Having had one of their cabins recently rented to a Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Coughen, the former being employed on the Canton and Briggs Contract, Mr. Wise left the key of his home with Mrs. Coughen asking that she might open a fire on Saturday morning and each succeeding day, until his return. Mrs. Coughen went into the home about six-thirty Saturday evening and found quite fairly large pieces of wood in the stove and returned to her cabin. In about fifteen minutes she happened to look out her window and noticed the home burning fiercely. Several men were available, having taken up quarters in the Mcalpine inn adjacent to the Wise property, but they were unable to extinguish the flames or remove any of the contents.

Mr. and Mrs. Wise have been in this locality just a couple of years and took both for themselves a lovely home on the lake shore where they intended living the year around. Mr. Wise is a pensioned railroader and his hobby centered about sportsmen equipment, of which he had a wonderful collection of fire arms, tackle and fine outboard motors, all of which were destroyed. Later 4 ammunition explosions were heard intermittingly for quite some minutes when the fire reached the room in which he kept his treasures. It is believed that the property and contents are only partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Ross Viscoff of Madoc spent Friday visiting with relatives in town.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Wiggins and Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Kellar motored to Gilding and Belleville on Friday.

"A" Company of the 2nd Hastings Battalion, H. & P. E. Regiment, held its semi-monthly dance in the Community Hall Friday evening, November 13, during a very good attendance. Miss Ursula Russell drew the ticket announcing the lucky winner as "Teddy" Maxwell who is now with the R.C.A.F. in England.

Miss Avis Fuller of Belleville spent the weekend at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Fuller of Bancroft.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wiggins of Belleville spent over the weekend with relatives in Bancroft and Baptiste.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Leedy and family or Peterborough spent over the weekend at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Robinson of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiggins returned home to Kingston Sunday afternoon having spent the last few days visiting with his parents in town.

The ladies of Oakwood Lodge, L.O.B.A. No. 926, held a successful sale in the Orange Hall Saturday afternoon.

planes southeast of Sardinia, Canrom-carrying British planes attacked a schooner off the Tunisian east coast yesterday.

The Middle East Command said aerial activity was on a small scale yesterday over Libya, where the British 8th Army has occupied and passed on west of Agedabia at the heels of Marshal Rommel's Afrika Afrika Corps making for El Agheila.

From Rome, the Italian High Command broadcast that heavy harassing clashes occurred yesterday in Libya and on the Tunisian-border while in aerial operations eight Allied planes were claimed shot down and five Allied ships, including a destroyer, heavily damaged.

The general picture in Africa was improved greatly by the announced adherence of French forces at Dakar to Admiral Jean Darlan, now co-operating with the Allies in North Africa, but the task of driving Axis troops and planes to the sea grew in magnitude hourly.

Advance Slows Down

The Allied advance toward the core of German resistance in the Tunis-Bizerte region of northeastern Tunisia has been hampered and slowed down by Axis air forces, reports from Algiers declared last night. Although Spitfires and other Allied fighter planes now are in action and have won aerial successes.

German bombers, operating from Italian bases in Sardinia and Sicily, can reach the battle area in little more than an hour and the Axis air bases in Tunisia have been mightily reinforced with fighters and bombers, some flown from the Russian front, it is believed.

A Great Advantage

The action of French leaders in Dakar in throwing in their lot with Admiral Darlan and the Allied Allied quarters in North Africa as "purely a French matter," but the gain to the Allies in excellent naval port by Darlan was recognized as a great advantage to the Allies.

It was assumed the port would be thrown open to Allied warships and shipping as were Casablanca, Oran and Algiers, and this is important, base in the South Atlantic, but the Allies also realized the possibility the base might be used for Axis submarines and as a base for a large threat to shipping in the South Atlantic.

Disposition Not Announced

The disposition of the French warships now at Dakar was not announced.

With the Dakar problem settled, the hold of the Axis on Africa was confined to a narrow coastal strip stretching from the region of El Agheila in Libya to the region of Bizerte, on the extreme northern tip of Tunisia.

This line has been reported cut by French troops near the Libyan-Algerian border and in the region of Gabes, but the Allied position there was apparently not the best. One man radio claimed yesterday the entire Tunisian coast down to Tripoli was in Axis hands.

DNB, the German News and Propaganda Bureau, reported this important railway junction in the frontier area between Algeria and Tunisia had been captured in "the last few days" by the German-Italian armored troops.

There was no confirmation of these reports.

Four Air Alarms

The Germans also reported this morning that Algiers had four air alarms and two raids, but that no damage was caused by raiders, Several Axis planes were reported shot down during the raids.

A R.A.F. and American Flying Fortress bombers were busy although much work obviously must be done to fit Algiers airfields and furnish supplies for the fleets of Allied planes to come.

The R.A.F. bombed docks and ships at Sicily, setting one ship on fire and scoring near hits on others, it was reported. Six more enemy planes were destroyed with carry reinforcements from Sicily to Tunisia were reported shot down in the latest dispatches.

Allied bombers attacked Sicilian airports and airports in Tunisia apparently in preparation for attacks by Allied bombers.

There were only scanty reports concerning the fighting in Russia, but the Allies took 40 German prisoners in one recent engagement and Allied communique reported that movements of Axis reinforcements continued "according to plan".

The Moscow radio reported without other confirmation that British, American and French troops had launched an attack against Axis positions in Northern Tunisia and said the weather was growing "more and more violent. . . .

apparent the Japanese foothold there and at Guadalcanada could be no more than two or three miles deep, at best.

While ground forces were shoring up the enemy out of one of his best bases for potential invasion of Australia, Allied airmen gave continuing attention to Japanese-held bases on Portuguese Timor which is threateningly northwest of the island of Celebes. Attack planes and medium bombers raided Beco and Raimean, the communique said.

Along the New Guinea coast some 225 miles northwest of the battle area, an Allied air reconnaissance group shot down an enemy plane that attempted interception over Vitiaz Straits.

REDS SCORE FRESH

Considerable Equipment Taken

In a surprise attack on one front the Germans were reported to have been unable to organize a defence and 1,200 of them were killed while 70 trucks and 35 planes were destroyed.

South of Stalingrad, one unit was said to have killed 850 of the enemy and captured 530, along with 25 guns, 19 trucks and 4 armored light machine-guns.

Elsewhere in this area Russian forces continued their fierce pursuit of the fleeing invaders destroyed 14 more tanks and eight guns in one attack on a recently won position, and killed hundreds of Germans in fighting from a fortified point. Only light action was reported in the Caucasus southeast of Nalchik.

To the northwest near Leningrad, a Soviet detachment was credited with the capture of an enemy strong point and nowhere along the front lines was there any indication that the Red Army had made any gains.

The midnight Russian communique count on the enemy equipment destroyed in the two-pronged advance included 70 planes, 157 tanks and 186 guns. Added to this was the following booty: 556 cars, 2,826 trucks; 2,625 machine guns; 32 planes in full working order; 127 tanks and, a large quantity of other material not yet listed.

Fierce Fight at Nalchik

While the full-scale offensive in the Stalingrad area sent Russian spirits soaring, fighting around Nalchik, holding solidly southeast of Nalchik, deep in the Caucasus, where the German invaders are reported with two companies lost in a counter-attack against recently won Russian positions.

The action in Stalingrad itself continued to be the grinding trench warfare type but on both sides of the city the Red Army is removing offensive show with the Russians apparently making brilliant use of the same swift flanking and turning manoeuvres that the invaders employed with such deadly effect in the early months of the war.

On the west the Red offensive was indicated by the numbers of prisoners netted in the fighting in various points, 4,000 killed in one engagement, 1,000 in another near Stalingrad, for instance; 2,000 captured in the same area and 1,200 in the Caucasus unit was encircled by the fast-wheeling Russians; 3,000 in the area of the Don salient a few south of the city; and 1,000 trucks captured in the same area swift blow.

German Dead Piled High

A front-line dispatch from south of Stalingrad said that in some places the white of the snow is covered over the barren Kalmyk steppes and in other places the bodies of the dead were piled high around wrecked pillboxes.

While the Russians drove ahead in the offensive that has been averaging 12 miles an advance in six days on the various sectors, long columns of captives were reported moving southward in the cold. Many Germans and Rumanians marched with dead bodies swathed in shawls and blankets.

Latest front-line reports indicated that at most points the German forces retarding the Russian advance fiercely, throwing in reinforcements in desperate efforts to straighten battle lines and precipitating farflung battles.

With the Stalingrad besiegers' line remaining corridor of land communication with the encircled army narrower, it was assumed here that enemy communications along this strip were under heavy artillery and plane bombardment.

With the Soviets in Kalach, due west of Stalingrad, it seemed apparent that another few days of continued Russian advances would see the corridor completely shut and leave the Germans at the Volga city isolated except for air communication.

The capture of Tundutovo and Abganerovo, south of Stalingrad deprived the enemy of two more railway stations, vital links in the country as the Kalmyk steppe between Stalingrad and Astrakhan.

Window samples are to be supplied to customers and advertising labels are not to be attached to shoes; distinguishing name stamps may not be used except when they can be applied in one stamping operation, and no such marks must be made with the purchaser's die, and must be paid for by the retailer.

No Costly "Brand" Boxes

The use of costly "brand" boxes can no longer be used. All shoe boxes must be of uniform size, except where the use of standard boxes would increase the manufacturer's costs. All boxes may be constructed only in white or natural kraft paper, and may carry no expensive labels.

For the duration, the size, description and price of shoes are to be affixed to the box in one operation.

The order forbids speculative buying, such as shipping on approval and consignment, and shoe orders must contain a minimum of 15 pairs for men's shoes, 30 pairs in up to five widths.

Leather conservation is effected by the restriction of the use of 8 1-2-gauge outsoles, by the restriction of vamp linings and facings on certain types of five ounces or more.

The Boy Scout knife, with loops and tag for the score, is a thing of the past, as is other footwear of similar kind. Leather linings are restricted to heavy boots that require a leather quarter lining.

Most heels will be of wood, and will not be leather covered. The color range in women's shoes has been reduced. White is no longer available in men's shoes, and brown will be limited to one shade in each boot.

Novelty Variations Restricted

Novelty variations have been sharply restricted.

Heels will be withdrawn from the shoe "industry except for use as replacements for standard heels and support shoes recognized and approved by the Administrator.

Every manufacturer must, within 15 days from the date of the present order, submit to the boards' footwear administration drawings or photographs of every shoe and pattern which he intends to use in the manufacture of footwear subject to the order, and no footwear is to be produced from a pattern which has not been so submitted.

Exceptions

Exempted from the orders are the special types of footwear made or designed for invalids, infants or maimed; footwear specially designed for and necessary to, active participation in sports.

The order also exempts from its provisions footwear made according to specifications for use by any of the uniforms prescribed for a police or fire department and footwear for the use of the armed forces.

Shoes which are to be imported must conform with the restrictions of the order.

No change in construction is to be utilized by the manufacturer which has not been utilized by him during the period between Oct. 1, 1941 and the effective date of the order, excepting markers which do not involve any additional expense.

TOO COLD FOR SUICIDE

Toronto, Nov. 24—(CP)—Police say Lake Ontario now is even too cold for suicides, after recording reports of a man and woman who threw themselves into the water, only to swim shivering to shore and seek assistance.

The Royal Canadian Navy

Canada is producing the war materials at the rate of two and a half million dollars a year and she is producing the supplies. Munitions Minister Howe several weeks ago pointed out, that of the munitions production, thirty per cent is for Canadian forces at home and abroad, some fifty per cent for the United Kingdom or to British combat areas and to Russia and some twenty per cent to the United States, China, Australia and the Pacific theatres of war.

But as Canada's Minister of National Defence for Naval Services, the Hon. Angus L. Macdonald says "it would be vain and fruitless for us to speed up and greatly increase our production of war supplies for overseas unless we could transport those supplies overseas."

And so Mr. Macdonald added, "to the utmost of our ability to produce and man them, we and our Allies must turn our fighting ships to guard our freighters, our tankers, our supply ships at all times."

It is to the men of the freighters, the tankers and the supply ships, as well as to the men of the fighting ships, that the Navy League of Canada has this year dedicated its annual observance of Navy Week.

This war has seen the Merchant Navy given full recognition as the fourth arm of the fighting services. From the very beginning its seamen have been in the front line of action. On the night of the day that war was declared they suffered their first casualties when the the torpedoing of S.S. Athenia showed that Germany, once more, was to concentrate her naval activities in skulking underwater attacks.

Merchant ship losses since that grim night have been heavy indeed but, despite the hazards of attack by submarines, surface raiders and aircraft, the men of the merchant service have undauntedly taken their ships to sea, and the supplies they carried have reached the fighting fronts.

In seeing that these ships are protected in their ocean crossings, the Royal Canadian Navy has had a mammoth task. Today more than forty per cent of the escort work in the Atlantic is being undertaken by ships of the Canadian Navy. Ships have been lease, both of merchant ships and of warships; losses which must be faced by men at war. There have been successes as well, high-lighted by the sinkings of enemy submarines but measured accurately in the fact that the Atlantic life-line has been kept intact. Less than one per cent of ships in convoy have been sunk during this war.

Canada's Navy, from the very beginning of war, knew what its major task was to be — the affording of protection for the merchant ships, of destroyers and corvettes and minesweepers. Starting with only six destroyers it now counts its fighting ships by the hundreds and sends them forth "to seek out and engage the enemy" in the Atlantic and in the Pacific, north to the Arctic and south to the Tropics. They are as much at home in British ports as they are in our own ports of Canada, and wherever duty calls them there their crews take them.

It is for these crews and for the crews of the merchant ships that Navy Week is tribute.

Value of Confidence

Eddie Rickenbacker who says he never doubted that he would survive the ordeal of three weeks on a raft in the Pacific, is a lesson for everyone. As everyone now knows, Mr. Rickenbacker did not lose hope but expressed her confidence that her husband would be found. And besides there was a feeling abroad that he would be found alive.

So much for a man's confidence. It was not over-confidence, it was not rashness. It was the realization that he had done everything that was possible and that he also knew he was unsurrenderful. And this was the spirit of the man which had inspired his wife and others.

Many people in such a situation would not show the resourcefulness that Rickenbacker commands — itself a fine support in danger.

Nothing that Rickenbacker did lowered his faith in himself. It is an admirable trait of character to have this equanimity in the face of danger and to have in oneself and to inspire in others, confidence and hope.

Can you see the big tanks rolling
O'er the desert's ancient sands
As steadily they march on, mile by mile?
Can you hear the big guns thunder,
Manned by eager, willing hands
Of the valiant British Army of the Nile?

Can you hear the airplanes spitting,
Dealing death from out the sky,
As forward, ever forward, goes the thrust?
Can you see the foeman vanquished?
His hopes of conquest gone,
As his armies fall to mingle with the dust?

Can you see the men in khaki
Sweeping onward like a flood,
Their sweating, grimy faces in a smile?
Do you thank God for England
And the Allies who are there
With the valiant British Army of the Nile?

THE MAN OF VIRTUE

At the age of 36, Adam Slee, master joiner, of Blindcrake, Cumberland, Eng., has never been to a dance. He does not drink, smoke, play cards, tell lies, or gamble in any form. "I only see films of intellectual value," he says.

But this is how Judge E. C. Burgis described him at a conscientious objectors' tribunal at Carlisle last week:

"Applicant is a self-righteous person. He has given us a long category of his virtues. He tells us at great length what he does not do, but tells us nothing of what he does do.

"For very obvious reasons. He does nothing for anybody. His life is devoted to advancing the interests and well-being of Adam Slee.

"There is a son living with his mother, and no doubt he is the apple of his mother's eye. But he wishes to lead an undisturbed life."

The judge remarked that Slee was financially well off, and had strong views on pacifism, but in seven years' membership of the Peace Pledge Union he had contributed only one shilling in support of this movement.

"Slee has given a list of negative virtues, but Christianity is a positive thing," said the judge.

"What is where the pacifist is so selfish. Other people may serve him, but he won't serve them."

The tribunal registered Slee for non-combatant duties. Slee said he would appeal.

DRIVING A JEEP UPSTAIRS

There is a fragrant and venerable song about keeping the pig in the parlor just because the pig is indispensable, says the Baltimore Sun. Perhaps that is what was in the mind of the young American army officer in Cairo, who, according to the despatches, insisted on parking his indispensable scout car, or jeep, in his second-floor bedroom for the night.

Naturally this involved driving the jeep up one flight of stairs. For an army jeep, nothing is impossible and this feat proved not to have been even difficult, though the young officer took it, perhaps regretfully, in low. Even that concession, however, did not satisfy the hotel concierge and the Cairo police, and after two weeks' effort to change the young officer's practice they complained to a higher authority.

Now the officer faces a court martial just because of following what he thought were orders. Commands had been given against leaving jeeps in the streets overnight, and the young man could think of no alternative but to take his jeep to his room. High authority is notoriously unreasonable.

NEW YARD-STICKS

America and Great Britain, authors of the Atlantic Charter, are truly the Have nations, says the New York Times. Hitler, Mussolini and Japan are truly the Have-Nots. How?

We have free speech. They have not.

We have free thinking. They have not.

We have free teaching. They have not.

We have respect for religion. They have not.

We have practices described as justice, charity, mercy. They have not; they have only the highest interests of the state.

We have the common welfare, by which we mean men, women and children. They have not. They have only the state.

AN UPRIGHT JUDGE

A New York magistrate has ruled that bridge is a game of chance, not a game of skill.—News Dispatch.

"Oh upright judge!" as skylock cried,
"A ruling, come to judgement!"
now
Accept the plaudits far and wide
Of all who fear some haughty blow
Accept the thanks and high regard
Of all who "never get the cards!"

Too long the sneers and frowns
we've borne
Of those who boast superior skill;
Too long we've suffered rags and scorn
And looks described as "fit to kill."

Here's judgment wise to end our woe
"Who holds the cards will win the game."

Belittled long by players smart,
Ignored and shunned by all who hold
To bridge a slam is classic art,
This frees us from the table cold.

Tricks are by kings and aces taken
But who holds the cards brings home the bacon!

Russian Claims Unchallenged By Berlin

By KERMIT L. SIMPSON)

Even before the Allied offensive in Africa reaches its crisis, a synchronized Russian thrust in the Don-Volga corridor has put Hitler on notice anew that his greatest immediate danger lies there, in the East.

By his own admission, that Volga bastion, the Stalingrad salient, is key to the whole southern front of Russian campaign. If it fails, an Axis winter retreat in Russia brought with deadlier peril even than that of last year would be inevitable. And Russian claims of startling advances on both sides of Stalingrad to threaten encirclement of the whole Nazi siege army on the Don-Volga corridor go unchallenged by Berlin.

It may take time for the Anglo-American offensives across the Mediterranean to establish their first objectives completely. If the Russians succeed in closing the huge trap they have sprung on the Axis in the Stalingrad salient, however, the collapse of Rommel's whole east front from the Don-Donets basin to the Central Caucasus could be very sudden.

Moscow Reports Overlooking

His retreat may already have started in Russia a week earlier this month. Moscow reported on October 30, at Hootoo. Moscow versions of a deadly pincers movement already across main Axis road and rail supply line in the rear of the Stalingrad front itself sound convincing. They are specific. They name towns, and give two prongs of the great trap converging across the Central Don basin from points miles from a junction.

Soon or late, there seems small chance of an Axis escape from utter disaster. The question is only whether and how Rommel has elected to make his last stand to attempt flight by sea control of the Mediterranean.

There are indications that British forces hard on his heels are already thrusting at his flank and defence line both frontally and around its southern flank. Word from French forces from Lake Chad are also coming up. The Anglo-American forces in Algeria and Tunis is impending to the west if not already set. The African forces are rendering the Allies vitally important aid in denying or preventing a consolidation of Axis troops for a defensive stand in Tunisia.

And Dakar apparently has been taken beyond reach of the Axis. Admiral Darlan, who went over to the side of the Allies after the North African occupation, said in a broadcast from Algiers that all of French West Africa, including the port of Dakar, has placed itself "freely under our control."

Advantages of Dakar

The strategic advantages can scarcely from this. Dakar ceases to be a potential springboard for an Axis jump across the South Atlantic or a base for its raiders; the port can be of value for supplying Allied ships and planes which patrol the South Atlantic, and the manpower and resources of West Africa can be added to the growing pool of United Nations' strength.

To what extent the reported shifting of Axis troops and Nazi air power from the Russian front to the Balkans and Italy have contributed to initial Red Army counter-offensive successes west of Stalingrad is a matter of guesswork. It can hardly be doubted, however, that Axis forces on both flanks of the Don-Volga salient have been thinned dangerously and that the Russians promptly seized their opportunity.

If only as a new example of coordinated United Nations offensive action on a world-wide military scale, however, the Russian advance west of Stalingrad is notable. It was timed to catch the foe in process of the readjustment of his forces necessitated by the doubleheaded danger of the Allied invasion of African campaign. If it succeeds, however, Nazi losses in men and war gear in the Stalingrad salient probably would greatly exceed those in Africa and Hitler's grip on a treasure house of war resources in the Ukraine and Caucasus would be loosened if not broken at a blow.

ADVERTISING IN WARTIME

(Ottawa Journal)

People sometimes heard to ask why advertising should be allowed in wartime. The answer is that it is wasteful and useless practice that should be abolished or at least curtailed.

Sensible answers to such people are provided by the Retailers' Bulletin, an official publication of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The Bulletin states simply that if the production of particular goods or services is permitted then it is permissible to sell them, and it is permissible to sell their sales by using advertising media within the revised regulations set forth by the government. Moreover, the Bulletin outlines the following ways in which advertising may contribute to the stabilization of business and the economical distribution of goods and services:

"Informing customers of the effect of government regulations upon purchasing.

"Giving current information regarding available goods to prevent panic buying or hoarding due to rumors or temporary shortages.

"Interpreting priority or simplified practice rulings by giving retailers clear rulings on limitations of supply, reduced deliveries or other curtailments of service.

"Guiding the buying public quickly to available perishable goods or other goods in plentiful supply."

The Bulletin further makes clear that merchants may advertise commodity prices in so far as more perishable, out-of-season stock or broken ranges of stock which are offered at special prices. Such advertising is helpful to the whole commerce, although it should not encourage unnecessary buying, nor stimulate the desire to hoard.

Concludes the Bulletin:

"Until practical limitations are restored, advertising will find many new and different functions to perform urging customers to restrict their choice and to make their purchases more to spend, educating the public to more economical and fuller use of available commodities, informing consumers of the facts behind the elimination of 'frills' from new standardized and simplified products, etc."

HYDE PARK

General Dwight Eisenhower, head of American forces in Europe recently announced that Colonel Kurt Thalwitzer of Bernardsville, New Jersey, had been awarded a Soldiers' Medal for risking his life in a vain attempt to save a child from drowning in the Serpentine in Hyde Park. The lake is a long, winding, artificial lake in Hyde Park, London.

It covers a total or about 50 acres, ranges in depth from 4½ to 14 feet.

The Serpentine, supplied with water by a well at its north end, was a project sponsored in 1830-33 by Queen Caroline, wife of George IV. This artificial lake was formed out of a string of small ponds fed by the Westbourne River. It is now stocked with swans, ducks, and other waterfowl, and provides bathing and swimming in summer and occasional skating in winter.

Hyde Park itself contains about 364 acres and is the largest park in London. It received its name from the fact that it was once the manor of Hyde, part of the property of Westminster Abbey.

In the days of King Henry VIII the park was a fenced deer park, and under James I and Charles I it was used for horse and dog races. Charles I laid out

Exercises for Neck Beauty

Dinah Shore has a lovely neck.

By HELEN FOLLETT

TAKE CARE of your neck, you women who are edging toward your fortieth birthday. If you don't, you may awaken some sad morning, and find that your neck has gone back on you. It may show evidence of fiddle strings, it may have necklace lines, and they are no good looks bargains, let me tell you.

Don't let your beautifying efforts stop under your chin. After the nightly face washing, begin the creaming on your collar bones. Make that a habit. Smooth up and down with flattened fingers. Keep the fibres of the neck relaxed; massage can't accomplish much if muscles are tense Tip the head forward and treat the back of the neck and the sides. While you're at it, give your ear lobes a lubricating; often the flesh there gets dark and dry. Place the fingertips on either side of the chin, smooth toward the ears. That is where tissues soften, causing a second chin to appear. Twin chins are beauty detriments.

Neck Exercise

While the cream is on turn the head from side to side with muscle pulls that you can feel down in your chest. That's a grand way of keeping the neck youthful.

That duty done, you can proceed with the facial petting.

Spread on the cream from chin to temples. Upward movements are vitalizing to the flesh. Skip across the forehead with rotary motions.

Place a creamed finger on the eyelid close to the nose, sweep outward, do a circle there, come back to starting point. That treatment is to warn turkey tracks to keep their distance. Finish with a brisk patting and slapping.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

War Wife Includes Her Husband's Name on Their Christmas Cards.

Your husband is in the Service? Perhaps stationed in this country . . . perhaps far away in some "unnamed Somewhere"?

You're wondering if, on your Christmas cards, you should include your Phil's name with your name, wherever Phil may be?

The answer is YES. Naturally you want to do this, are proud to do it. And naturally your Phil would be proud and pleased to know that his greetings are being sent, by you and with yours, to his relatives and friends at Christmas-time.

Your next question, I am sure, will be: "What form of name should you use on these cards?

Before this important question can be answered, by you or anyone else, you must decide what "feeling" you want your Christmas cards to register toward those to whom you are sending the cards. If you want them to express formality then (and only then) it is logical to use the formal name. I'll explain this in another article.

But if you decide "I want — and I am sure that Phil would want this too—to have our Christmas cards informal, personal, 'warm-hearted messengers bringing our good wishes to his relatives and mine, to our friends; and to many of our acquaintances too," then naturally and logically, you would use the informal names, the "personal" first names these people would expect you to use.

While formal Christmas cards are more like "announcements" of your greetings, informal cards can be made to glow with the warmth of your friendly feeling . . can be as personal as a letter, as cordial as a handshake. And this is just what most of us really want our Christmas cards to be!

So, if you decide on having this personal note for your cards, and still want to have your names imprinted on them, you choose the form Anne and Phillip Strong. (The wife's name usually comes first, even though the husband's name first does follow the Mr. and Mrs. form.)

Or, if you want to hand-write the signature (this makes them even more personal), you use the same form—Anne and Phillip Strong — or Anne and Philip, or Anne and Phil, if, as would probably be true in most cases, this is ample identification.

And now may I please make, most enthusiastically, another suggestion to you? These Christmas cards of yours will be so particularly welcomed by your and Phil's relatives and friends that I think it would be an ideal plan, whether you have the informal names imprinted on the cards or sign them yourself, for you to write one or two sentences that would give, to a relative or close friend, the latest news about your Phil. For example, "Phil is 'somewhere in Africa', and I know that he will be thinking of you at Christmas-time and will hope that I am sending you his devoted Christmas greetings with mine. And here's to a Victorious New Year! Please do write to Phil . . . he would cherish a letter from you. This is the address—"

Or, to a not-so-close friend or to an acquaintance, you might write, "I know that you will want to know the latest news of Phil. He is still stationed at San Diego, is very well and extremely enthusiastic about his 'outfit.' He (through me, as his proxy) and I send you cordial Christmas greetings . . . and prayers for a Victorious New Year Phil would love to hear from you . . . this is his address at present —and I'll let you know when I know a change of address."

These two or three sentences will accomplish a world of precious results: they will be personal and warm; they will bring heart-to-heart greetings and longed-for news from you and from and about your in-service husband; they will be a proud way to tell of a promotion or any other special news about Phil; they will bring you in touch with, or renew your relationship with, far-away relatives and friends; they will show that you are a thoughtful and friendly person, a generous-spirited wife, and they supply your husband's address and an appealing hint for the letters that will give great happiness and comfort to your soldier-or-sailor husband.

Surely an easy and grand way for you to be "of service" to your beloved one "in service."

Courtesy Tip

When you are speaking to an officer, do not address him by his title alone. That is, don't address him as "Major" or "Commander". Always add his name to his title, "Major Smith", "Commander Robinson."

Addressing an officer by his title only is as bad form as addressing a civilian as "Mister," rather than "Mr. Jones."

Unpopular Dancer Can Learn at Home

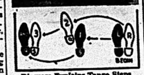

Diagram Explains Tango Steps

Wait! A tango's not a hundred yard dash! A girl hates to dance with a man who rushes her, Apache fashion, around the room.

Lots of men do that who aren't sure of their steps or how to lead. Are you? You could learn the steps from diagrams.

The tango count is a simple 1, 2 and 3. Doing the Cross and Side-Close Step, on Count 1 you step sideways on your left foot. AND—Uncross left foot quickly and take short step to side. 3—Close with right foot. Pause.

Our 32-page booklet has complete dance instructions for men and women and gives footprint diagrams for the smartest steps—in the tango, rumba, Conga, waltz, fox-trot, Westchester, Samba, Peabody, shag.

Does Vitamin D Prevent Decay of Teeth?

Well the Drs. Mellanby were able to show that much of tooth decay could be prevented by simply adding Vitamin D to the diet, there were physicians, dentists and teachers who believed that nothing could be done to prevent decay of teeth as poor or good teeth were inherited just as is the tendency to rheumatism, eczema, asthma, tuberculosis and other ailments. Since that time, however, many physicians and dentists have found that Vitamin D does prevent tooth decay.

Later, the Drs. Agnew were able to show that dairy products and green vegetables—protective foods—will prevent tooth decay.

Dr. E. C. McBath, New York, whose dental research work I have mentioned before, together with Dr. W. A. Verlin, report further studies showing that Vitamin D prevents tooth decay. In the Journal of the American Dental Association they report five groups of about forty children each, who were observed under identical conditions during one school year with no changes in diet except the addition of Vitamin D to the milk of four of the groups given in chocolate syrup milk. The fifth group (control group) received no Vitamin D whatever.

The research work was carried out amid surroundings favorable to outdoor life and exposure to the sun's rays. Two groups receiving Vitamin D received it as cod liver oil direct and two other groups received it in the form of viosterol.

What were the results obtained without and with Vitamin D? It was found that in the group that received no Vitamin D, there was an increase of 4.50 (nearly 5) new decaying (carious) surfaces during the year. In the group receiving a daily supplement or extra amount of 400 units from cod liver oil, there were 2.48 (nearly 2 1-2) new decaying surfaces, and as low as 1.65 surfaces was obtained by large amounts of cod liver oil. The best results were obtained in the group receiving a daily supplement of 800 units of cod liver oil Vitamin D per child.

What about visterol —irradiated ergosterol—another form of Vitamin D obtained from plants? The use of 800 and as high as 3,000 units of viosterol daily showed 2.48 decaying surfaces.

The above observations show, then, that Vitamin D in cod liver oil and in viosterol both help prevent tooth decay, the cod liver oil being the more effective.

N.H.L. REDUCES PLAYER LIMIT TO 14 PLAYERS

Suspend Existing Rule to Require Minimum of 12 to a Squad

OTHER CHANGES

(By The Canadian Press)

The National Hockey League has experienced the peallized changes of war-born retrenchment, but the club registers continue to make a merry tune.

Four N.H.L. contests last week-end, for instance, attracted 23,047 cash customers. Statistically-minded fans will tell you that makes an average of more than 11,000 for each game. The National League may have drawn fatter attendances in halcyon days, but it's not much fatter.

Maybe its the law of compensation. Bigtime hockey officials with large investments in the sport do not care to trifle rashly with established habits and conventions. So there must have been some wry faces yesterday when the Board of Governors decided to reduce active players limits from 15 to 14 and to suspend the existing rule requiring a minimum of 12 players on each club.

Those were the major decisions of the board meeting in Montreal yesterday. The governors also decided upon some minor rules changes, such as a ban on the face-off area after intentional offsides.

The new rules will be written into the constitution and will be effective tonight when Detroit Red Wings meet Montreal Canadiens at the Montreal home ice and Chicago Black Hawks travel to Boston for an engagement with the resurgent Bruins, who have added four players after downing an equal number to start the season.

Chicago and Detroit are tied for the league lead with Toronto Maple Leafs and tonight's meeting probably will declare a new league leader, but a four-way tie for first place could be created if Boston defeated Chicago and Canadiens bested Detroit. In that event, Boston would join the present three leaders and Canadiens would rest in fifth spot, just one point behind.

Swedish Angel's Manager Gunning For Maurice Tillet

Jack Pfeffer, the Long Island N.Y. wrestling promoter who hooked Tillet, the "Swedish Angel", is campaigning throughout the Eastern States and Canada for expressly one specific reason—to get an effort to get a match with Maurice Tillet, the French Angel.

Pfeffer, diminutive little Russian, contends he is managing the world's best wrestler. "People come to see me wrestle, but after seeing me in action they always come back as the fans realize the "Swedish Angel" is the most powerful wrestler today in the business," chortled Pfeffer over the long distance telephone to promoter Frank Tunney yesterday.

Wrestling fans who saw Swenka Ficka, the name under which the "Swedish Angel" was christened, in action at the Hums Arena two weeks ago agree he is a powerful package. And then again so is John Katan, the Palermo powerhouse who pinned Lester Tunney to bend muscles here Wednesday night. The packed wrestling crowd ever to see this important match in Belleville pleaded Tunney to secure, who has an all-star pair of preliminaries to precede the main attraction.

G. A. Freeman Named President Quinte Golf Club

G. A. "Gus" Freeman was elected president of the Bay of Quinte Country Golf Club at the annual meeting of directors following the club's annual meeting. Mr. Wilfred Lapsley acted as chairman and E. B. Van de Water appointed secretary-treasurer for the season.

Retiring President C. L. Jewell outlined the activities of the club for the past season with the annual reports showing the club to be in the best financial standing throughout 1942. The Board of Directors elected included Messrs. C. L. Jewell, E. R. Morgan, J. S. McKeown, R. E. Orr, E. M. Parker, L. R. Wilson, H. J. Allen. Other club officials named included William Little, vice-president; H. Orr, chairman of games, while William Little was again engaged as club professional.

Other chairmanships named included Membership, A. Bentzion; Finance-C. L. Jewell, Greens-J. S. McKeown; House, E. McLean; Entertainment and Publicity-C. E. Morgan.

A motion carried to encourage the playing of golf for 1943 the Bay of Quinte Country Golf Club executive voted to reduce its annual membership fee from $40. to $30. per person and lowered the guests membership to $15. per guest season. Also to reduce members to full playing and social privileges. Considerable discussion took a note of optimism regarding the future of the club particularly in view of the fact that gasoline restrictions should doubtless encourage the playing of golf as well.

BALMY BEACHERS PROMISE CHANGES IN THEIR LINEUP

Three Regulars Will Not Perform Due to Injuries

WILL SWITCH SWARD

Toronto, Nov. 24 (CP)—Coach Alex Poston of Toronto Balmy Beach plans four lineup changes for tomorrow's Ontario Rugby Football Union final against the formidable Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes—three born of necessity and one of expediency.

Poston will start Bobby Porter at halfback when Balmy opens at wingback for the first time this season, hoping to strengthen his forward pass from close to the line. The other changes are dictated by injuries.

Replacements will have to be found for Jack Young, one of the club's best defensive halves, and Coach Dave Perris who scored the winning touchdown Saturday as Balmy defeated Oakwood Indians 11-8 to gain the final Eastern Section berth, suffered a stomach ailment and Young has an injured leg.

Fleet Ed Jakubowski is also considered an uncertain starter because of a bad ankle, and Poston may give young Bill Bell of Toronto Malvern collegiate a chance on the half line. Johnny Widman will be called upon to fill Young's spot and Bill Zock will return to the lineup to take up the slack left by the absence of Perris.

Despite the casualty list, Poston predicts that Beachey will give Hurricanes "a swell battle" in Wednesday's sudden-death game which will determine the O.R.F.U. representative in Saturday's eastern Canada final against an Ottawa R.C.A.F. team. If Hurricanes succeed in defeating Balmy, they will meet still another team with an Air Force badge—Winnipeg R.C.A.F. Seconds—in the Dominion final Dec. 5. Fifteen of Winnipeg's players belong to the R.C.A.F.

Both Flyers and Beaches plan secret workouts today. Hurricanes will be minus only one player Saturday—Flight Lieutenant Mike Osacko, who suffered a twisted left knee in the first game of a doubleheader eighth win in 10 league starts.

Two Air Force bands are scheduled to make an appearance Wednesday, and club officials expect the whole squad may also give an exhibition.

ARMY DAGGERS WIN CLOSE ONE

Yank Boyd Scores 4 for Research but Effort Not Enough

Toronto, Nov. 24—(CP) — Army Daggers took a close 6-5 decision from Research Colonels in a fast O.H.A. tilt at the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" playground rink yesterday in action after a week's lapse. There were no games scheduled in the intermediate group.

Yank Boyd, hockey veteran who played last year with St. Paul in the American Association, scored four goals for Colonels, two of them on passes from Red Horner and Bill Goodacre, to lead the Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League with 10 goals to his credit.

It was the first win of the season for Army Daggers, who are in third place in the three-way tie for first place in the standings with the Air Force and Navy teams. It was the second straight loss for the Colonels.

Army moved into a 2-1 lead in the first period and led 3-2 at the end of the second. Goals scored by Boyd, started the third period with a drive that netted three goals. Army came right back in the last half of the period to wear out the civilian team.

Nyrehold set the pace for the winners, scoring two goals and an assist.

Hurricanes Place Five Men On O.R.F.U. All-Star Team With Stukas Getting Most Votes

Backfield Packs Plenty of Power With Stonewall Front Line

HAYMAN COACH

By FRASER MACDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 24 (CP)—The runaway race staged by the Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes in the Ontario Rugby Football League schedule this year was reflected today in the All-Star team selected for The Canadian Press by coaches and sport writers in the Union circuit.

The Hurricanes, coached by FO. Lew Hayman, placed five men on the All-Star team with three coming from the ranks of the Toronto Balmy Beach club—which meets the Hurricanes here Wednesday in a sudden-death game for the Union title—three from Hamilton Wildcats and one from Toronto Navy.

Flying Wing: Al Lenard, Hamilton.

Half: Flt. Lt. Eddie Thompson, R.C.A.F.

Half: ACz. Jack Parry, R.C.A.F.

Half (Secondary Defence): Sammy Sward, Balmy Beach.

Quarterback: ACz. Bill Stukus, R.C.A.F.

Snap: ACz. Jake Gaudaur, R.C.A.F.

Inside: Edward Remiglo, Hamilton.

Inside: Len Staughton, Balmy Beach.

Middle: OS. Steve Levantis, Navy.

Middle: Bob Cosgrave, Balmy Beach.

Outside: Jimmy Fumio, Hamilton.

Outside: LAC. Ed Pascovage, R.C.A.F.

Stukes Stands High

The closest to a unanimous choice fell to Stukus, brainy field general of the Hurricanes, who had much to do with leading them to eight victories and one tie in their 10-game schedule. He was given eight of the 10 votes.

Gus Schiers of the lowly Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers was the only other player to get any votes for the position.

The backfield picked by the All-Star selectors packs plenty of scoring power. Strangely enough, Al Lenard, Hamilton's triple-threat son and leading scorer in the league with 54 points for the season, was picked for flying wing although he usually plays halfback. Had he not, however, he received only two votes for the flying wing job where the experts showed considerable divergence of opinion, splitting their 10 votes among eight candidates.

Lenard's one vote for half and two votes for secondary defence had gave him the nod.

Thompson Second in Scoring

Thompson, great all-round back who tallied 51 points for the Hurricanes this season and came second in the scoring race, was the leading candidate for half with seven votes. Parry, his fellow teammate who has 15 points to his credit in the season's play, received five votes for them came OS. Hugh Cuddie of the Navy.

Sward, kicking star of the Beaches who has tallied 21 points during the season with 15 of them coming on singles, was picked for the secondary defence half spot. The long-distance punter and fierce tackler had four votes, his closest rivals being Lenard and Cpl. Fred Kilpt of the R.C.A.F. with two each.

Jake Gaudaur drew seven votes for the snapback job, which he has excelled all season. Bunk Turner of Balmy Beach with two votes standing next to him.

Twelve players figured in the voting for inside wing where Remiglo and Staughton led with three votes apiece. Next to them came seven sturdy performers as OS. Frank Morris of the Navy, WO. Mike Latendresse of the R.A.F., Levantis and Art Young of Balmy Beach with two each.

Levantis Best Middle Wing

Levantis, formerly of the Navy, led the voting for middle wing with eight votes while Cosgrave, Balmy Beach scorer was the Union's lineman with two touchdowns for his points, had five votes, ACz. Art Evans of the R.C.A.F. ran a close second with four.

The Union's high-scoring end, Fumio who has 19 points, drew seven votes to make certain of an outside wing post while Pascovage of the Air Force got eight and OS. Pat Reid of the Navy.

All told the members of the All-Star team have tallied 192 points this season in 10 scheduled league games, 13 more than the Hurricanes rolled up in leading the parade.

Here are their scoring totals:

Lenard 54, Thompson 51, Parry 15, Sward 21, Gaudaur 0, Remiglo 5, Cosgrave 10, Fumio 17 and Pascovage 19.

Six of the players were picked on All-Star teams in 1941, Lenard, Parry and Fumio were named to the O.R.F.U. team, the former as a half and the latter as outside. The others were on the Eastern Rugby Union All-Star team, Sward as flying wing, Stukus as quarterback, Staughton as inside and Cosgrave as middle.

Jack (Chesterfield-Freshoder) Park's wife, Mrs. McAtee's luck, most of it bad, came to the surface when Red's name was stationed at Cornwall last puck season. Conny Dion was already an established favorite with the Cornwall goal when McAtee arrived but Red was given an chance and in his first game, the club collapsed in front of him, kicked three goals into their own net and were badly beaten. The fans blamed McAtee and the goalie didn't get a chance afterwards. This season he was ready to battle Ban Bastien and Dion for the goal job when one of his army mates caught the mumps and Red was quarantined 21 days. The stretch was almost up when another buddy came down with the disease. "Red never had anything more than the miseries," says Park, "and could not get out to practice with the team." ## They'll Do It Every Time— By Jimmy Hatlo

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

SO GAMBLING FOR LARGE stakes is out, insofar as the Brooklyn Dodgers are concerned in 1943, according to terms of Manager Leo Durocher's contract, signed by President Branch Rickey. There is no doubt gambling was heavy in the ranks of the Dodgers under Durocher, with "The Lip" spewing one of the most prolific players on the team. Generally speaking gambling for small stakes is permitted among baseball and hockey players, but when large stakes enter the picture it quite frequently means disaster.

Gambling is not confined to professional clubs alone, as the spirit of betting during the golden age of sport" in these parts along about the early '30s. Then almost any gambling was enjoyed (well, at least by the players) in the days when local hockey and baseball clubs travelled by train, and always in chair cars, mind you.

IT WAS A BLEAK FEBRUARY day in 1922 when Eddie Thomas' Belleville pucksters entrained for Cornwall and no sooner did the boys settle down in the comforts of a chair car, than a deck of cards appeared and the poker game was on. Those adapted to the art of making "the best of a bad thing" were not perturbed by the "whopping dominoes" retired to the smoking compartment and there where set after making six straight passes, shouting "about the works," he passed down the line dicing for a second thought he snatched sixty bucks and on his next pass he passed him a couple of "box cars" and promptly picked up his money and chuckled. Another player took a spooner. In Cornwall our hero had $48.00 on the line and after a whale of a game, Belleville winning 7-4. On the return trip the cards are scrapped and the boys settle down to sleep. Ted was the only one who had any money left in that game, but he was "no sap" so he quietly pocketed the embrace of Mokeburn and the way home, and when he awoke in Kingston, who was he to say naturally eager to get their takes hands that had caused.

WITH THE BASEBALL TEAM in those roarin' 20's the "African boogey" was the rage. Each player had a pair of dice and the game was on. Some players would "shoot" for a quarter, others for a whole lot more. Ted accepted the embrace of Mokeburn and the way home, and when he awoke in Kingston, who was he to say naturally eager to get their takes hands that had caused.

VARIOUS TEAM MANAGERS have experimented at gambling, bridge being the principal game played by major league ball players although only small stakes are permitted. Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees, is a manager with very definite ideas about cards. He never will allow his players to hold a poker session. Yes, the Yankees are permitted to play bridge and rummy, but for small stakes. Poker and dice are banned.

Here's the story of the first time McCarthy brought a Yankee team home from a Southern trip back in 1931. Accompanied by several players, Marse Joe walked into the dressing room at Yankee Stadium and they looked upon a deck of cards, a new deck at that.

"What's that?" he inquired, pointing.

"Don't take it out of here, but we can set and deal," replied Lazzeri.

The players who overheard the conversation offered no protest. They knew how McCarthy felt.

"I don't want any card-players in the clubhouse," announced Joe McCarthy. "And speaking of cards, I'm not going to play them in the clubhouse. This isn't a barber shop."

No Yankee since has ever shaved with cards in the Yankee dressing room.

REMEMBER WHEN FRANK "King" Clancy, one of hockey's all-time great, turned as a player six years ago today? He turned professional with the Ottawa Senators in 1923 at the age of 18, going on to play 14 years and in 565 NHL-1 season for a sale price of $35,000. Frank was also the highest priced player paid for a professional hockey player.

THE NATIONAL HOCKEY League magnates lowered its choke roster one player from 15 to 14 yesterday and cited another reason for the change: "It is no longer necessary to carry a spare player," they declared. Minor changes in the playing rules decided upon at the meeting are intentional offsides, face-offs would be at the circles five feet from the blue line instead of at the centre mark-er; the area in which play could be resumed after the puck was struck by a puck would be extended to two zones instead of one as in each zone; and a face-off would be required after a linesman has handled a puck less than three seconds and dropped it anywhere between the blue lines.

THIS AND THAT — See where Henry Armstrong, now light-title boxing champion on his way back, has signed to meet Beau Jack, Jr., in San Francisco next month. . . . The two leading batters in the American League, Ted Williams, .356 and Johnny Pesky, .331, have been called to report for flight school at Amherst, Mass. Both were with Boston Red Sox. . . . Katan is a sadly missed, especially in the pull-pounding department in 1943.

MEIGHEN SPEECH WILL DETERMINE PARTY'S TREND

Likely to Declare Whether He Will Continue as Conservative Leader

MAY CHANGE POLICY

Ottawa, Nov. 24 (CP) — The keynote speech of the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, National Leader, at the Conservative National Convention at Winnipeg on December 9, 10 and 11, will have historic significance for the party, Conservative sources said today.

These are the factors involved:

1. The Conservative party stands at the crossroads, the convention delegates expected to decide where it will turn to the left or to the right in the development of its policy.

2. Mr. Meighen is expected to indicate whether he will support a drive for National Government in Canada, with Conservative and Liberal forces working together, or a rebuilding of the party's policy on modern lines with the objective of Conservative success in forthcoming Federal elections.

A prominent Conservative said the Port Hope, Ont., Conservative Leaders' conference in September, and the statement of aims published as a result of its deliberations, represented the views of many party supporters who believed the party should "streamline" its policy and "modernize" it in order to win a return of a Conservative Federal Government.

Makes Strong Charge

A year ago, when he assumed leadership of the party, Mr. Meighen said a government on a strictly party basis "is the negation of democracy, and was exercising "despotic power."

"This state of affairs in a war like that dividing humanity today," he continued, "Such a government cannot in the nature of things command the confidence fairly or efficiently given where their employment is not dictated by party considerations but by the whole nation to its maximum effort. It is responsible for a maximum endeavour means our ruin.

"A strong ministry on a wider basis can be formed, party control can be ended for the duration, and should not be tolerated."

Since then, in addition to his addresses, has been critical of parliamentary practice, particularly by the present Federal administration, but he has not made any definition of what he will have at the convention.

Opens December 9

The National Leader will speak to the convention delegates on December 9. He will declare whether he will continue to lead the party, or whether he will leave the office of leader or whether he deserves his leadership to be confirmed by the convention to review party policy and his conception of what the party organization should be.

Conservatives said that if Mr. Meighen leaves the party's leadership directed towards a coalition government, there would be almost certain to arise from those who believe a modernized policy would be a better vote getter at the polls.

Convention arrangements are being completed rapidly, convention officials in Winnipeg said. More than 210 constituencies of the total of 245 have chosen their delegates and others is coming in day by day.

Small blue badges are being issued to delegates travelling to the convention so they can recognize each other readily. The badges bear the words, National Conservative Convention, Winnipeg, December 9, 10 and 11."

ALL SLAUGHTERING

The order defines an abattoir or slaughter house as any place in which livestock is regularly slaughtered, and the term livestock is taken to include cattle, calves, sheep, lambs and hogs.

The order does not apply to any farmer or livestock producer who slaughters animals on his premises solely for his own use, or that of his household consumption only. But if he slaughters animals for sale, or any other sale, on a public market or otherwise, a permit is required to operate in accordance with Farmers

The board emphasizes that the only control measure is not intended to interfere in any way with the country's regular system of obtaining his own supply of meat from animals he slaughters or has slaughtered for him.

Interim permits to slaughter livestock may be issued in the case of custom slaughtered, will be issued to all persons applying for them. Such permits must be signed by regional and sub-regional offices of the board. When the permits have been forwarded to Ottawa they will be dealt with, and the applications reviewed by the foods administration, permits for continued operation will be issued, replacing the interim certificates.

Applications for Permits. Permits must include particulars of the applicants' businesses which qualify them to engage in the slaughtering of livestock.

Each permit holder must display it conspicuously in his place or places of business. Such a permit is not transferable. The board may also be required to supply any information required by the foods administration from time to time.

THEATRE FEATURE TIMES

AT THE CAPITOL

"Blossoms in the Dust"

The stars of "Mrs. Miniver" were welcomed to the Capitol Theatre on the screen of the Capitol theatre last night in technicolor's greatest love story, "Blossoms in the Dust."

"Blossoms in the Dust" is the thrilling story of a woman who defied convention! The fashioned dress inspired by the career of a living woman becomes technicolor's greatest love story on the screen. Its lovely star and the company that made it, bring you another towering triumph a memorable event in the theatre. "Blossoms in the Dust" stars Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon.

"Cadet Girl"

(First Belleville Showing)

We always knew Carole Landis could sing — and now she has a real opportunity to convince all! 20th Century-Fox is justly proud of its swiftly rising young star, and its belief her in a new film with George Montgomery — another youngster who is going places in filmland. The result is a compact, fast-moving, tuneful hit called "Cadet Girl" which opened last night at the Capitol theatre.

Carole is in the middle of a muddle in "Cadet Girl," which tells the story of a West Pointer (Montgomery) who is ready to come to blows with his time honored brother (John Sheppard) over the lovely vocalist. Happily mixed in with the engaging story are five grand new tunes by Robin and Rainger. These include:

"Uncle Sam Gets Around," "She's A Good Neighbor," "I'll Settle For You," "It—Happened. It's Over, Let's Forget It," and "My Old Man's An Army Man." When you see that gorgeous blonde, remaining Carole warbling these tunes it's worth the price of admission alone!

AT THE McCARTHY

Walter Pidgeon

With Walter Pidgeon, great star of "Mrs. Miniver," beautiful Joan Bennett and George Sanders, head a brilliant cast, the newest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production, "The House Across the Bay" opens yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre.

"The House Across the Bay" is the story of Brenda Bentley, a beautiful and alluring woman, who is left in a hostile world when her husband is convicted for income tax evasion and sent to a federal prison in San Francisco Bay. It is Brenda's problem to battle this hostile world and to work for the faith and loyalty expected of her by the man behind bars. Brenda is exposed to temptations from all sides, but her love for her husband remains a blinding emotion to which she clings against all odds. However, when Walter Pidgeon, impersonating the second romantic lead, comes into her life, the picture moves swiftly and dramatically to a climax that is as punchy as it is unexpected.

For the first time in her career, the lovely Miss Bennett, looking even more alluring than usual in an impressive array of stunning gowns, does an exhibition strumba on the screen. This dancing required long hours of practice and many studio rehearsals before the star was satisfied that her performance of this highly technical terpsichorean feat was well nigh perfect. And perfect it is. And the lovely star proves, again that she is not only a fine dramatic actress, but also a clever comedienne, but also a past master at handling the light fantastic toe.

George Raft, who is noted for his excellent screen portrayals, clicks brilliantly as the latter-day gentleman who is extremely gracious and timely comes to grips with the law. It is one of the most versatile roles that Raft has handled in a long time and anyone once used to this actor's ability is based on long experience and natural talents.

If you like motion pictures that tell an exciting story that has everything that entertainment should have, chalk up "The House Across the Bay" as the picture not to be missed by anyone.

Starring lovely Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda, the stirring drama, "Blockade," now at the McCarthy Theatre, makes up a program of entertainment that offers theatregoers a show that has not been surpassed in screen history.

AT THE BELLE

"Iceland"

20th Century-Fox's latest fun-fest "Iceland" now closing at the Belle Theatre, is another of those films that helped make "Sun Valley Serenade" and "Orchestra Wives" such fine box office sensations. The film has added to this duo of Sonja Henie and John Payne, the laugh provoking antics of Jack Oakie and the celebrated music of Sammy Kaye and his orchestra.

Four excellent and varied short features precede the feature attraction.

Lovely Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda, co-stars of the stirring drama "Blockade," now at the McCarthy Theatre, in addition to Jean Bennett, George Raft and Walter Pidgeon in "The House Across the Bay."

AT THE BELLE

Acting talent galore is what 20th Century-Fox presents in "Confidence from West Point," coming to the Belle Theatre Army, Navy and Air Corps. John Sutton and Lolet Craven combine at seats this film team in entertainment. "The Magnificent Dope" is the second hit.

"20 Gentlemen From West Point" From one of the latest known and most romantic episodes of early American days, 20th Century-Fox brings to the screen the stirring, action-packed story of the United States Military Academy in "Confidence from West Point" which is next shown at the Belle theatre. Starring George Montgomery, Maureen O'Hara and John Sutton, the film has been called a rousing successor to "To The Shores of Tripoli," and boasts a climax which previewers claim will make you stand up and cheer.

It took 20th Century-Fox two years to piece the "Gentlemen From West Point" for the screen, and more than three months to get the story set in the days when the future of the Point hung precariously. On the shoulders of ten courageous cadets rested the existence of the "Citadel of heroes" and it is to their everlasting credit that they did not fail. They braved the storm of criticism, proved their worth in battle, and enabled America to keep its "Sun Valley Serenade," so that in future cries American could look to West Point for leadership.

Topping the featured cast is that talented young character actor Laird Cregar in the important role of the commandant of the Academy.

"The Magnificent Dope," Funny as a crutch, backward, too compliacent? Are you lacking in the qualities of which successful businessmen are made? Do you need a good, loud laugh? Then look up Professor Dwight Dawson, alias Don Ameche, the renowned character builder who, co-starred with Henry Fonda and Lynn Bari, will conduct classes at the Belle theatre in the added feature hit "The Magnificent Dope," new mirthful 20th Century-Fox comedy.

Whoever doubts the efficacy of the course, and its effect in a short space of time, is invited to "pillar into pillars of ability, need only refer to the case of "Dud" Dugan (Henry Fonda). When he first heard of Dwight Dawson, Dud was a gangling, indolent scamp and lazily ignorant of what made the wheels of industry turn. But after the prescribed time at the good professor's feet, he was still lanky . . . Well, anyway, Dud was not a very willing student.

For he is too imbued with the glories of his native Vermont to take his city ways. And, had he not succumbed at the very outset to the beauty of Claire Harris (Lynn Bari) the institute's prize agent, he would not have tolerated the high-pressure professor for so much as one day.

CHAPTER 24

Cobb Makes Good

A messenger brought the picture of Cassandra Wiley Dillon, it showed a mother and daughter, the little one about 3 years old.

"Small good to that!" Cobb said, but Fleming Stone caught a hint.

"Look here, it isn't much, but don't forget it. See, they are both laughing; both have front teeth, slightly separated. Well, if a girl comes up to you and says she is Jenny Wiley, you make her laugh, and then you can tell whether she is or not."

"I thought I was to look for a man. What are his teeth like?"

"I don't know. You are looking for John Wiley, but as a lead to his daughter."

"I've seen more promising outlooks. But I'm proud to have you send me. Might Wiley be dead?"

"He may well be, especially as he hasn't shown up at the home of his abused father-in-law. But he was forbidden the house. The wife, I understand is dead."

"Maybe he married again."

"Quite likely. Run along, now, and good luck to you."

Peter Cobb ran along.

Stone again visited the McCleod apartment. Sleuth was not at home, so he asked Foo Chow to send Mr. Dickson, the valet, to him.

"Is Linda Lee mail, here?" Stone asked, when Dickson appeared.

"Yes, sir; she is still attending to Mrs. McCleod's wardrobe."

"Has she the jewels in her keeping?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, Dickson, I want that necklace. Mrs. McCleod was wearing the night she died, the one Hugh is reported to have given Emmy later."

"You want to take it away, Mr. Stone?"

"Yes, Dickson, I will bring it back—no, I'll leave it for you at your brother's shop. If Linda Cleod should ask for it, tell him I took it."

"Very well. I'll get it."

Dickson went away and returned with the bangle, wrapped in white tissue paper.

The detective called at two of the largest jewelry shops in city, both diachlorous knowledge of the bangle and were certain it had been bought elsewhere.

Stone prepared to call at some of the smaller jewelers. These offices numbered many of the fashionable aristocracy among their clients.

After three unsuccessful attempts Fleming Stone found a broker who recognized the trinket.

"Yes, I sold that bangle about a week or ten days ago," he said.

"Who bought it from you?"

Stone learned that Van Dyke Haynes had bought it and paid for it.

"That is all," said the detective, "and thank you. I assure you, your name will not be mentioned in connection with the matter."

Then Stone stopped into a friend's office, called a messenger and dispatched to Dickson's brother the bangle that Haynes had given to Linda Lee.

v v v v v

Peter Cobb, a handsome, clever youth, boarded an airplane for Chicago on an errand for Fleming Stone. He knew he had a difficult assignment, but if he succeeded, he might mean further work with the great detective. Who knew what that kind would be?

He established himself in a big hotel. As it start he consulted the telephone book in his room. But no John Wiley was listed in it. He went to the post office, but was unable to find a record in the city directory. A few other places of possible information proved equally fruitless. He went to the Telephone Company's headquarters and succeeded in getting access to a file of back number telephone directories.

Some of the directories for the years of the early married life of John Wiley, listed his name, but the telephone numbers and addresses changed. Cobb copied all the addresses.

No telephone number was listed in Wiley's name for the last few years Cobb concluded he was man had moved from Chicago, or his fortunes had fallen so low that he had no business address.

Patiently Cobb called at the addresses he had found; except for a scattering and contradictory report, he learned nothing of Wiley's present residence.

But at last he learned that Wiley's wife, Helen, conducted a smart dress shop in a fashionable section. So, he concluded; Wiley had married again, and if still alive, was being supported by his wife.

He went to the dress shop and interviewed Mrs. Wiley. John Wiley appeared well established, and now he about 50. Mrs. Stolen Wiley appeared vain in her middle thirties.

Though polite, she was not responsive to his pleasantries, and seemed to resent his questions.

"I am anxious to see your husband," he said. "Will you tell me where I can find him?"

"Why do you want to see him?"

"Because of his connection with the family of Jason Webb," said Cobb. "His first wife, I am told, was Webb's daughter."

"Yes, she was. But I am his wife now, and anything you have to say about the Wood affairs you can say to me."

"Very well." Cobb spoke genially. "Tell me, does Mr. Wiley's daughter live with you?"

The woman looked at him warily. "She doesn't live with me now," she said. "I think she lives—I don't know where she lives."

Cobb didn't believe this. "If there is any chance of Mr. Wiley getting any of the Webb money, it would be through his daughter. Do you know the terms of his will?"

"I do not, and you do not either. He left no will."

"How do you know that?"

"My husband told me so."

"He is interested in the matter then?"

"How can he be, when there is no will and when he is forbidden to go to the Webb house?"

"Why is that? He was the husband of Webb's daughter."

"Well, he isn't now. And I want him to keep away from the whole business. He'll only get into trouble."

"Perhaps you are wise. Now, Mrs. Wiley, I want you to tell me where John Wiley is, or tell why you are unwilling to let me know that."

Stolen Wiley lost her temper, stamped her foot and ordered the young investigator out of her shop.

Scenting some deeper trouble than her indignation at being questioned by a stranger, Cobb went away thoughtfully. He telephoned Stone, who praised him for what he had accomplished, and told him to go next to Police Headquarters and get their assistance.

Cobb eagerly obeyed, but his success was not immediate. John Wiley's name had appeared on their jail list. The police would continue their investigation, and would let Cobb know results.

Baffled, but hopeful, Cobb tried again to get some facts about the daughter, Jenny Wiley. The lady of the dress shop gave him another interview, but the only information he gleaned was that Jenny Wiley looked like the paternal roof when she was about 16.

"When you then married to Wiley?"

"Yes; his first wife died a year before we were married. But—"

"But what?"

"Oh, nothing."

Peter Cobb had an inspiration. After several broad hints from the owner of the dress shop he realized she might be amenable to financial argument. So he hinted that if she chose to be more garrulous, she would lose nothing by it, and perhaps might gain.

This sort of talk Helen Wiley understood. Though Cobb admitted that he could make no definite promises, he was sure that there would be reward forthcoming for definite information about Gentleness.

"All I can tell you is," Helen began, "that Jenny and I couldn't get along together. I told Wiley that she must leave the house or I would. He is a poor shrimp, and I was supporting him anyway, so he put the girl board with a woman he knew, here in Chicago. I suppose he paid for board. I don't know. I never heard of the girl again and I don't think he ever did. But, I'm pretty sure she landed on her feet somewhere. She was smart as a steel trap, She had a knack of painting little doodads and she studied art as a specialty shops."

"What was the name of the woman she boarded with?"

"I don't know. I heard that somebody took a notice to her, some rich woman, and she took her home to live with her. It may be true, for I know Wiley couldn't keep on paying her board because he had no funds."

Cobb sighed. "Well," he said, "tell me where to look for Mrs. Terrill and, I'll do my best to get you a bit of recompense. Where is Wiley?"

"Well," she said, with an air of surrender, "if I must tell you—he's in jail."

"Are you sure? I've asked the police, and they have no record of it."

Mrs. Wiley smiled. "My dear boy, you don't know all the tricks of the trade. John Wiley has a real talent for getting into jail, but he seldom goes there over his own name. So when you look for him he is locked up, but not as John Wiley."

"I see, exactly what I mean, but I can't give you his assumed name because I don't know it. He doesn't use the same one twice. He is the most shiftless good-for-nothing that ever lived!"

"Why did you marry him? A smart woman like you?"

"Oh, it was nine years ago. He was fascinating then, and he had fascinating ways I've left him two or three times, but he drags me back. He is—"

"Where is he in jail? How tall I find out what name he is using? It will be really worth your while to let me at him."

"But I don't know. There's only one person who might know. And that's Ben Monk. He's John's pal and I think they keep pretty close touch."

WPB Given Power To Control All Business Activity

Ottawa, Nov. 24 (CP) — Extension of Prices Board authority to accomplish the closing of manpower from non-essential industries and to control unified war undertakings and activities in the national interest was contained in order-in-council made public today.

The order amends the Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations of November 1, 1941.

New clauses added to the Board's regulations permit it to prohibit the "formation, commencement, operation, amalgamation or transfer of any business or undertaking."

The board may prescribe the terms and conditions under which and the manner and circumstances in which, any business or undertaking may or may not be formed, operated, merged or transferred.

The board may require any person engaged in any business or undertaking to discontinue or limit such business or undertaking in the whole or part," in such manner as the board may prescribe.

Atrocious Murder Reported in Boston

Boston, Nov. 24 (AP)—The torch slaying of Mrs. Louise Schlicher, 40-year-old widow, in the kitchen of her apartment and the search for a man identified only as having "much blood on his clothing".

"This is an atrocious murder," said Commissioner William J. Britchley when he viewed the body. "The woman was not only severely beaten but she was burned while alive."

Police investigators said her head had been bludgeoned with a flatiron found on the floor nearby, that inflammable liquid had been poured on her body and that kindling wood had been piled around her and set on fire sometime yesterday afternoon. Neighbors said Mrs. McGinley, known throughout the Charlestown district for her generosity to needy, is a substantial bank account and that she often carried from $200 to $400 on her person. They expressed belief she had been slain by a robber.

Her son, John, returning from work at the Boston navy yard, smelled smoke and sought to kitchen, discovered the body. The clothing had been ripped off.

Police took two suspects into custody shortly after the slaying was discovered, but released them and said only "wanted murderer" a man with blood-stained clothes.

DEATH SENTENCES GIVEN THREE MEN FOR TREASON

Convicted of Aiding Haupt, One of 8 Nazi Saboteurs Who Came to U. S. by Submarine

WIVES GO TO PRISON

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP) — Three men convicted of treason were sentenced to death today and their wives were each sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment and fined $10,000.

The men were sentenced to die by electrocution January 22 "at a place in northern Illinois."

Each of the defendants stared fixedly at the judge as the sentence was pronounced, displaying no emotion. There was no demonstration in the court room.

The defendants, convicted of aiding and abetting Herbert Hans Haupt, one of the eight Nazi saboteurs who landed in the United States by submarine last summer, are:

Hans and Erna Haupt, parents of the saboteur; Walter and Lucille Forsching, the uncle and aunt; and Otto and Kate Wergin, friends of the Haupt family.

Each was convicted of treason.

It was the second treason conviction in 148 years of American history.

On August 6, Max Stephan was convicted at Detroit, Mich., and sentenced to be hanged for aiding the flight of a Nazi airman who escaped from a war prisoners' camp at Bowmanville, Ont.

The six defendants in the Chicago treason case were convicted November 14.

Subsequently Anthony Cramer was convicted in New York, November 18, for helping two of the saboteurs, who accompanied Haupt, to get a false identity on a mission of destruction.

Judge William J. Campbell, in passing sentence, read a statement in which he said in part:

"Had Fair Trial"

"These defendants had a fair trial, a trial the like of which in the country they had sought to befriend."

Sentence was passed in a heavily guarded courtroom, where deputy marshals standing around the walls, behind the bench and at the closed doors.

As the defendants filed into the courtroom none made eye contact with Haupt. He said to the marshal standing him: "It looks like payday."

15 Nazi Fighters Downed in Raid On St. Nazaire

London, Nov. 24 (CP) — Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the U.S. army air forces, supported by R.A.F. fighters, raided the German submarine base at St. Nazaire, France, yesterday, touching off a lively air battle in which 15 German fighters were destroyed. Four bombers were lost.

Despite the obviously heavy aerial opposition to the daylight attack at the important U-boat nest near the mouth of the Loire River, a joint (Air Ministry-United States army air forces headquarters communique today reported many bursts were seen on the target."

The fall of Nazi ands down indicated the enemy threw up larger fighting units than at any other time since the October 10 raids on Lille, France, when 48 Germans were shot down.

Yesterday's thrust was the seventh foray this month against the base used at St. Nazaire.

In all, the bombers have been on 20 missions since they took their place in the action alongside the R.A.F. in mid-August.

Appoint Committee to Consider Major Questions on Food Supply

Ottawa, Nov. 24 —(CP)— Appointment of a food requirements committee representing five Federal departments, to consider with the Prices Board, empowered to investigate questions of food policy on production, and supply of food in Canada and the provision of foodstuffs to other nations, was made public today.

The committee, assistant undersecretary of state for external affairs Hume Wrong, chairman; Leslie Chapman and Dr. C. H. Wilson of the Wartime Information Board; Department's Bureau of Statistics Branch is secretary.

Establishment of the order-in-council setting up the committee said Prime Minister Mackenzie King had reported that formulation of policies most helpful to the war effort in regard to food production and supply would require consultation between departments and agencies of government.

Canada's undertakings to export foods, to the United Kingdom and the United States, must be reviewed constantly in relation to the Canadian food position, the domestic price ceiling and the essential requirements of food for home consumption, in order to achieve complete mobilization of resources for the war, the order said.

The committee will also serve to keep the closest touch with, and established by the United Kingdom and United States Governments on Canadian supplies, requirements and plans for production of foodstuffs.

In particular, the committee will supervise the preparation of such recommendations as may from time to time as may be required by the combined food board or other bodies, and consider matters affecting food supply which are referred to it by the governor-in-council, the cabinet war committee, or any government department of the board.

The committee is required "to make reports to the proper authorities on questions of policy arising out of the need for co-ordination of Canada's undertakings to export foods to the United Kingdom and other United Nations with the price ceiling, the essential requirements of foods for home consumption and other factors which must be taken into consideration to ensure a balanced war effort."

CHASED, ATTACKED SUB WHICH SANK FERRY CARIBOU

Minesweeper Dropped Charges, Results to U-Boat Unknown—Caribou Was Escorted at Time of Sinking

Ottawa, Nov. 24 (CP)—The Canadian minesweeper Grand Mere chased, attacked and probably sank the Newfoundland-Nova Scotia ferry Caribou last Oct. 14 pursuit and depth charge attack patterns of depth charges, Navy Minister Macdonald announced today.

Outcome of the minesweeper's attack was not known.

The Caribou was sunk on a voyage from Sydney to Port aux Basques, Nfld., with loss of 135 lives. She had been under escort of the Grand Mere.

Mr. Macdonald said he had refrained from making a statement even before today because an investigation was necessary to establish the facts fully and to avoid any premature hand. Serious charges had been made about the incident; that she was not escorted, that she was not adequately escorted, and that she was travelling with lights on.

He now had the report of the board of investigation, sailed today by Capt. M. O. Dalton, Marine Superintendent, R.C.N., Newfoundland Railway, owners of the vessel, and also the report of the commanding officer of the minesweeper, James Cuthbert, R.C.N.R.

The latter report, said the Minister, showed the vessel was escorting the Caribou and that after her life-saving equipment was in first-class condition.

Rescue work was carried out its duties in accordance with the standard instructions for a minesweeper escorting a single ship," said the minister.

Lieut. Cuthbert, he added, was positive the submarine did not shell survivors in the Caribou after the sinking. It was possible some of the survivors were killed when depth charges fired by the Grand Mere in the search for the submarine for enemy gunfire.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 24—(AP)—Selling of new stocks developed to a certain extent in today's market but there still was enough to put many issues definitely on the defensive at point or so.

Combined good news from Russia, Africa and the South Pacific led to buying in the oil portfolios. The offerings again received part of the blame for the lack of recovery.

The peace group maintained a fairly steady demonstration making a great deal of progress.

Slightly lower trends persisted at the start. Scattered gainers of minor amounts were evidenced for the first hour. Aside from sizable blocks of low-priced issues, dealings were small.

Speculative rail bonds slipped. Curb dealings were quiet and generally steadied.

Unlisted Canadian stocks Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram eased fractions. In the bond market Canada 4s were 1-4 point lower.

SUGGESTS CANADA SEND TROOPS TO AID MACARTHUR

Maj.-Gen. Odlum Says the Turning Point Has Not Yet Come in War

IMPORTANCE OF SHIPS

Toronto, Nov. 24. (CP)—Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum suggested today that Canada send troops to the southwest Pacific theatre of war to assist General Douglas MacArthur.

In an address prepared for delivery before the Canadian Club of Toronto, the newly-appointed Canadian Minister to China said: —

"The best defence for this country is not a group of divisions sitting passively in Canada but some additional force —even as little as one division—sent to General MacArthur so that, on the Japanese tender southern flank, he be relieved from the defensive to a vigorous local offensive".

Gen. Odlum, former Canadian High Commissioner to Australia and former officer commanding the Second Division of the Canadian army overseas, said he felt that some members of the United Nations was "the spirit of criticism and carping plaint that I found everywhere—except in Britain".

In Canada, "I find that the bitterest things come from 'Toronto', he said, and added "Toronto is the cruel become Toronto the shrill".

The turning point of the war has not yet come, he said, adding: "nothing that I believe in looking the worst squarely in the face".

General Sir Bernard Montgomery's victories in Egypt and Libya have demonstrated that the British army has at last mastered the technique of the "warfare of the air successes and the landing of United States troops in North Africa "are only two moves, never in a big game that is yet to be played".

Not two per cent of the German army was engaged in Libya, Gen. Odlum asserted, adding that "only when the United Nations field forces, in terms of divisions trained and equipped for battle, are strong enough to begin their drive into Germany, will the turn of the war have come".

The bottleneck in preparation for the offensive against Germany is shipping, not manpower, and shipping tonnage is not nearly progressing "in spite of . . current press reports".

Taking every factor into account for the production of a complete ship, Canadian yards "are doing as well as any yards in the world and without any glamor publicity", he said.

In Britain, he said, "the confidence and trust of the people is amazing".

Internal criticism in Australia was of a more personal nature, partly in Canada it "is group against group". "As I range Canada," I find that the bitterest things come from Toronto", he said. "Nowhere else are tongues and pens as sharp as in this city . . .

"Canada as a whole expects better things from Toronto and Canada as a whole is disappointed".

The copper contest which was to have ended at that meeting was extended to the evening. The winning side, Grandview or Silver Hill is to be announced at the Sunday service. The losing side is to put on a program at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Sandercock. A lunch will be provided by all the members.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reading a book with a red cover, and all of a sudden he banged it shut, saying to me, This is ridiculous.

What, Murder in a Flying Forecast? me said. Why, I thought this was a wonderful mystery, she said, and pop said, I mean it's ridiculous for a cast of characters and broad outlook to be wasting his time reading any murder mystery, and I'm going to abandon this one right smack in the middle just to show the power of mind over morbid curiosity.

Why William how wonderful, I wish I had that much will power, ma said. Now you get an award for your strength of character I'll tell you how it's done anyway. Do you remember that apparently casual character with one eye that they call flicker? she said.

No and I dont want to, pop said, I can take a letter pill without any sugar coating, thanks just a same, he said, and ma said, But William, it seems so unfair for me to know all about it while you suffer in self enforced ignorance, I'll just give you a strictly idle and idle hint and satisfy your natural curiosity, she said.

You mean safely your own unnatural craving to reveal plots, pop said. For pete sake will you leave me alone with my will power? he said, and ma said, Now William if I was just going to tell you that this Slicker is really Baron Slickbock's trusted agent and the interesting code is imbedded in his artificial eye, and now you cant drag any more out of me with wild horses, so dont try.

You haven't started this one yet, have you? pop said.

Meaning a book with a green cover, and ma said, Death in the Desert? No I haven't, she said, and pop said, Then I'm going to abandon my principles and read it just so I can tell you the whole plot while you're still on the first chapter.

And he started to read it and ma kept on telling him if he dared to tell her a single word she would leave the house and never come back.

TRULY FREE PRESS SEEN AS GUARD OVER AGGRESSION

Publisher Says Aggressors Had to Poison People's Minds Before They Could Drag Them Into War

LESSONS OF WAR

Ottawa, Nov.23 —(CP)— Arthur Sulzberger, president and publisher of the New York Times, said today that "no leader of any nation has been able to plunge into a war of conquest any people who had a truly free press."

The publisher in an address prepared for delivery before the Rotary Club of Ottawa said:

"Not until Hitler was able to keep the truth from the German people and poison their minds with his monstrous lies, and not until Mussolini and the Japanese war lords were able to do the same, were they able to drag their people into war.

Sulzberger warned against what he described as "the dangerous illusion" which threatens a lasting peace at the end of this war.

"Make no mistake," he said, "the fallacy of Anglo-Saxon superiority," the fallacy that everything in our old pre-war way of life must be changed" and "the fallacy that nothing must be changed."

Lessons of the World's Weak

He contended that people "must learn the lesson of the middle ground" which "is the only one by which to preserve and maintain the peace and progress of the individual and the individual states now under the Nazi heel.

"The Young Germans is a fanatic engrossed in the extraordinary national revival. He is a fanatical enthusiast and a bigot on racial theory, and despises the Christian virtues of love, humility and forgiveness.

"The free spirit is not in line with German theories" Padre Cameron declared, "and so the creative spirit is crushed. As long as the men administer life there will be press injustices."

Democracy has its evils, too, he said, it is most imperfect and has many injustices and only by a reconstruction and progress for a future be made possible.

Men must take their responsibilities of citizenship seriously, and free themselves' of political, financial and economic grasping. For this struggle is one for the rights of individuals in every aspect of life.

Disagree With Wilkie

He did not agree with Wendell Wilkie's criticism of Winston Churchill's statement, that he was "not made Prime Minister to preside over the disintegration of the British Empire. What we have we shall hold! In 1940". He said, "Sir Winston opposed the murder of her colonies to the nations of the world. Wilkie forgot that Democracy, Communism and materialism are two of the greatest evils that face democracy. . . . The politicians, Canadians' responsibilities as citizens' should be unselfish, and truly patriotic. Men must not be judged by their financial standing. . . .

"We must not forget that everywhere, thousands of people are suffering and we must live here in comfort and ease. We should not be content to do half, while the nation is in a death struggle against terrorism".

"There will be years of complete satisfaction after the war". Padre Cameron concluded, "because we know we are doing the things on the right side with God and man. If we keep our lamps trimmed, they will prove a blessing to all mankind, and not a curse".

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian John Deacon and Club appreciation expressed by Rotarian Rev. Percy President Lloyd Hicks was in the chair.

Dakar Command Under Darlan

Vichy (from French Broadcast), Nov. 23 (AP)— French West Africa has placed itself under the orders of Admiral Jean Darlan, the admiral declared in a broadcast over radio Algiers tonight.

Admiral Darlan, once one of the top men in Vichy, is co-operating with the Allies in North Africa.

"The listening post said reception was "not too good" because of static, but that the broadcast from the French Governor of Dakar said:

"Frenchmen and Frenchwomen: In view of the situation in France, which has taken the decision as commander-in-chief of French armed forces in French West Africa, to rally to Admiral Darlan as the commander-in-chief of all French forces."

The listening post said the message then said the French army will "defend the colony against any aggression."

It asked Frenchmen to be "calm and disciplined" and to obey the orders of their commanders.

It said the Dakar governor was "not denying" his oath of allegiance to Marshal Petain, chief of state at Vichy, but that rallying to Darlan had been necessary because of the "situation in France."

The listening post said that in its regular 8.30 a.m. E.D.T. broadcast that Dakar radio had sensed "very friendly" toward the United States and that it was announced that postal service between French West Africa and French Morocco—now occupied by British and United States forces—was being resumed.

The broadcast said that the morning broadcast ended with the words "Vive La Marechal! Vive a France!" (ong live Marshal Petain! Long live France!) The afternoon broadcast ended with "Vive La France!" But the "Vive Le Marechal!!" was omitted.

R.C.A.F. Padre Addresses Rotary

All the good things that Germany has were taken from the democracies, Flight Lieutenant Padre Cameron, Presbyterian padre at the Mountain View Air Station, stated in an address to the Belleville Rotary Club Monday.

The story of life face the world, he said, Christian Democracy; Paganism with its tyrannous Nazi Socialism, and Communism. Each means a radical change from the others.

Europe at present is a prison of the mind. The creative spirit is crushed and men may no longer think for themselves.

"We are going through a revolution, one which will become more apparent when the active fighting stops", he said.

Fundamentally we are in a struggle for the freedom of the individual and the individual states now under the Nazi heel. The Young German is a fanatic engrossed in the extraordinary national revival. He is a fanatical enthusiast and a bigot on racial theory, and despises the Christian virtues of love, humility and forgiveness.

"The free spirit is not in line with German theories" Padre Cameron declared, "and so the creative spirit is crushed. As long as evil men administer life there will be press injustices".

Democracy has its evils, too, he said, it is most imperfect and has many injustices and only by a reconstruction and progress for a future be made possible.

Men must take their responsibilities of citizenship seriously, and free themselves' of political, financial and economic grasping. For this struggle is one for the rights of individuals in every aspect of life.

"Well hold your place"

IN EVERY city, town and village throughout Canada today there are gaps where once were young men. They heard a call and put on navy blue, khaki, horizon blue, and they have gone, answering a call . . .

They are missed—missed not only in their homes but also in the business places which once they filled.

They have gone from every institution in Canada; but from none more than from the chartered banks. There is hardly a branch office from coast to coast which is not today the poorer—and the prouder —for those who thus laid down their pens.

But every branch manager, as he shook parting hands, had this consolation: he could say, "We'll hold your place. It will be waiting for you when you come back. That is a pledge."

So it is the part of those who remain to serve their country in such a way that the promise may be kept: "We'll hold your place."

There were 14,433 single and married men from 18 to 45 years of age employed by the Chartered Banks at the outbreak of war. 5,053—or 35% of them had joined the armed forces by October 31st, 1942; 1,243 others when joined bank staffs since war began have also enlisted.

NAZI LOSSES AT STALINGRAD NEAR 100,000

Corridor of Escape Whittled Down To Thirty Miles

Red Armies Penetrate 80 Miles in German Defence Line N. West of City

OFFENSIVE UNCHECKED

(By EDDY GILMORE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Nov. 25. (AP)—German losses in dead and captured alone had rocketed close to 100,000 as the Russian counter-offensive gained momentum and squeezed the invaders' escape corridor from Stalingrad down to a width of thirty miles, battlefield dispatches reported today.

From the long-besieged city the Russians reported rolling back a Nazi wedge in the Volga, clearing another avenue for supply and reinforcement of the garrison which is lashing out from its defensive positions and beating back the Nazis street by street.

Northwest of the city the Russian offensive penetrated eighty miles into German defences within the Great Don Bend area as the soldiers of Joseph Stalin had stabbed west for sixty-five miles into the inner flank jaws of the nutcracker were closing.

44,000 Killed in Six Days

A communique added 3,400 German dead overnight to the toll in the Stalingrad-Don Bend sector alone, raising the official count of the killed to 44,400 in six days, and battlefield dispatches said that a fully similar number of wounded were in would be close to 80,000.

The communique gave no specific figure on Germans captured overnight, but said that in addition to previous total of 36,000 now, 100,000 were known to Stalingrad.

(No official figures were given on the number of Nazi wounded, but in dispatches from London and Moscow estimated by the military attache of a neutral country and by every soldier killed that the wounded totalled 130,000).

13,500 Workers Now Strikebound

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP)—The Giant plant of the Ford Motor Company of Canada was strikebound today for the second day in a dispute over employment of 2 women workers but leaders of the striking union, the United Automobile Workers of America— said the possibility of a city-wide strike had been averted.

George Burt, Canadian director of the Union, said in a statement that if the strike "extends beyond the Ford plant, it will only be due to layoffs in other plants caused by the refusal of that company (Ford) to accept delivery of supplies."

"In the meantime we are urging the workers in these plants, who are also vitally interested in the employment of workers without discrimination for sex, to continue at their work".

J. C. Adams executive director of the Ontario Regional War Labor Board, arrived last night and has met representatives of the union, management and the Union today. Union Leaders said that he is here to investigate and has no authority to settle the dispute.

Other government officials are expected here today.

Meanwhile Arthur Reaume sought the intervention of Ontario Labor Minister Peter Heenan in the dispute which involves an estimated 13,000 workers.

2,000 FEIGHTERS TO CONVOY PASSAGE THROUGH STRAITS IN LAST TWO YEARS

London, Nov. 25. (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that Britain had passed 2,000 freighters in convoy through the 30-mile-wide Strait of Dover in the last two years in the face of German gunners and fighters and powerful guns mounted on the French coast.

It said the Channel mobile balloon barrage flotilla steamed 227,000 miles protecting the ships from low-flying aircraft.

British Units Maintain Pressure

Cairo, Nov. 25 (AP).—Advance British units maintained pressure on the retreating army of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel between Agedabia and El Agheila yesterday, but poor weather conditions again held aerial activity down to desert battle area to a small scale, British headquarters announced today.

British medium and heavy bombers ranged out over the Mediterranean, however, and attacked Axis airfields in Crete and Sicily.

Two enemy fighters shot down at least two German planes flying northward off the eastern coast of Tunisia, the communique said. One British plane was reported missing.

Fighter-bombers, raiding the axis airfield in Sicily, across the Straits from Bizerte, scored hits on the airfield's gun positions, the communique reported, and fires were started on the airfields of Crete by medium and heavy bombers.

Nazi Besiegers In an "Awful" Military Position

London, Nov. 25.—(CP) — The Nazi besiegers of Stalingrad are in an "awful" military position, compelled to withdraw from the Volga city through a menaced, narrowing corridor if Russian armies and to cross the Don River if they are to get free of the Soviet pincers, a British military source said today.

This information added, however, that there was no confirmation here that the Germans had ordered a general withdrawal from Stalingrad.

He said any German counter-attack to relieve the encircled army would be tremendously difficult.

This informant pointed out that Russian reinforcements proved to be the first major land action of the war not commanded by Germans in the fighting. Two possible reasons, he said, might be Hitler's confidence or the diversion of much German air strength in North Africa.

RESERVES COLLECTED

Factory Workers Speed Production By Devising Time-Saving Devices

BY JACK WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. Catharines, Ont., Nov. 25—(CP)—Employees of one of this city's largest factory, more than 4,000 of them, have turned amateur inventors and are doing a good job at devising wrinkles to speed production and simplify strategic materials.

The employee suggestion plan in operation at McKinnon Industries, a general motors subsidiary, has been recommended by munitions department officials to more than 2,000 other Canadian war plants. In the six months the plan has been operating workers have collected $7,500 in prizes for ideas that have effected an annual saving of more than $200,000 in time and a saving in vitally-needed materials of at least 150,000.

Meanwhile Arthur Reaume sought the intervention of Ontario Labor Minister Peter Heenan in the dispute which involves an estimated 13,000 workers.

All employees, with the exception of engineers whose duties are creative, are eligible under the plan which offers a top prize of $750. The worker making the suggestion is paid in war saving certificates equal to twice the first one-sixth of the annual saving of his idea. The worker on the job knows the ins and outs of his spoiles gets 1-12th of the saving.

Typical of the men is James Delgaty, 33, an inspector who has been employed by the plant for eight years. Delgaty spotted a stud and nut on an army truck steering assembly that could be replaced by a simple bolt. The job was simplified, a valuable material was saved and Delgaty collected $661.

Another inventor, a 43-year-old Ukrainian who is employed as a machinist examples of savings com-pounder in the plant foundry devised a handle for a plate used as a protection over hot moulds. Previously the worker had been kept busy putting sand on the plates to keep them from sticking. He got $250 and the prize.

This month's winners include two girls. Marjorie Thomas, a 11-year-old mail clerk employed in the office, who has designed a mail pouch to facilitate interdepartmental mail delivery, and Loca, 20, received $5 for an idea to prevent gears from damaging the teeth.

Ideas are dropped in the suggestion boxes scattered throughout the plant. If the employee prefers he fills in a numbered stub and makes the suggestion anonymously. Judges, selected from employees engineers meet and carefully study the suggestions.

If the suggestion is turned down the reason is explained to the worker by mail. He is told to write his name and on a bulletin board a report is filed of each.

"The idea behind the plan is this," an official explained, "is that the employee will not get what he thinks the way your job is done always is a free for all. Every idea is put before the committee for consideration. However, the said any stories submitted to it approved by the censors cannot be the subject of prosecution".

"Crown Counsel Speaks

"The most serious matter is that the publication of this article, as written, undoubtedly provided enemy propagandists with a recent useful weapon to be used against the United Nations," said Mr. McRuer.

CLOSE-QUARTER BATTLE AT BUNA NEARING CLIMAX

Bitter Fighting On A 12-Mile Stretch Between Buna And Gona Bases'

HEAVY AIR ACTIVITY

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Nov. 25—(CP) — Australian and American troops are gripped in bitter close-quarter battle with a "last-stand" force of Japanese on the beaches of northeastern New Guinea today as they neared the Buna-Gona area approached its climax.

Every plane the Allied forces could muster was sent skimming over the Japanese positions with machine-guns and cannons blazing. Bombers added high explosives to the confusion and death below. On the ground Allied troops, who have surrounded the Japanese on three sides, closed in.

The hottest fighting was taking place on a coastal strip 13 miles northeast of Buna, and 12 miles from Sanananda.

At Buna, Allied units were reported established on the Buna Rest House of stiff enemy artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire.

Heavy fighting was reported to have erupted again on the Gona end of the battle line. The Australians entered the village Monday and found 100 Japanese dead. Other dead and wounded Japanese were found floating on the beach near the community.

The Japanese have made more than 100 sorties over the battle area yesterday, dropping bombs on the Allied troops and enemy Zeros—hundreds of rounds of machine-gun bullets on positions held by trapped Japanese.

The aerial action was particularly intense on a six-mile stretch between Gona and Sanananda. Two score planes appeared to contest the air with the Allied fliers

BURMA DRONE BOMBED

New Delhi, Nov. 25—(CP)—R. A. F. bombers blasted a railway yard and drome at Mokthila, Burma, south of Mandalay, last night for the second night in succession, starting a number of fires, a British communique announced today. No planes were lost.

Suspect Double Murder, Bodies of Slain Couple Found Near Cobourg

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP)—Deputy Attorney-General Cecil Snyder of Ontario today identified a man found dead and killed near Cobourg, Ont., as William Wallace Cunningham, whose wife is described as a divorce investigator for the W. T. Telfer law firm of Toronto.

Mr. Snyder said that the woman whose body was found near Cunningham's, had not yet been definitely identified but she was believed to be from Cobourg.

The deputy attorney-general added that Cunningham had been at the Telfer law office yesterday afternoon and that when he left he seemed to be "in good spirits".

Premier Gordon Conant said in his capacity as Ontario attorney-general that the question of an inquest had not been definitely settled. Professor W. L. Robinson of the University of Toronto, consulting pathologist of the attorney-general's department, is conducting a post-mortem examination.

Inspector W. H. Lougheed of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Provincial Police had been here to direct the investigation into the shooting which also claimed the life of an unidentified woman.

Police planned to take fingerprints of the woman in an effort to establish her identity.

There were some reports at police headquarters that her name might have been Bishop.

Provincial Police Constable David Adair of Cobourg and Inspector Lougheed of Belleville ar; both working in the case.

Cobourg, Ont., Nov. 25 —(CP)— Provincial Police today pressed their investigation of what they believed to be a double murder after the bodies of a Toronto man and an unidentified woman had been found four miles from Cobourg.

The man was identified as William Wallace Cunningham who was described in Toronto by Cecil Snyder, Deputy Attorney General for Ontario, as a divorce investigator for the W. R. Telfer law firm of Toronto. The woman was believed to be from Cobourg.

Body of Cunningham, whose age was variously described as 35, 40 and 43, was found lying on the shoulder of the highway about one foot from his car which was parked partly on the highway and partly on the shoulder. The woman's body was found 25 feet away, lying near a fence. Both had been shot through the chest.

Police advanced their theory of a double murder after close search failed to reveal any gun in the vicinity.

The bodies were found at 8 a.m. and Police believed to have been dead for about four hours.

The woman is also shot about 30 years of age.

Inspector W. H. Lougheed of the Criminal Investigation Department or the Provincial Police arrived here to take charge of the investigation. With him was Provincial Constable R. Wrigley, fingerprint expert.

2-YEAR SUSPENDED SENTENCE GIVEN E. G. ROHRBOUGH

Accused Admits Charge Laid Under Defence of Canada Regulations

CONCERNS NEWS STORY

Barrie, Ont., Nov. 25. (CP)—Edward Gay Rohrbough, 27, described as a Canadian Press newspaper correspondent, pleaded guilty in court today to a charge laid under the Defence of Canada Regulations, and was given a suspended sentence for two years.

Magistrate Compton Jeffs said the would suspend sentence on the charge—which concerned transmission to Three Mountains Air Port, York, of a story dealing with disturbances in a prisoners-of-war camp at Gravenhurst in violation of censorship regulations—on condition Crown Counsel J. C. McRuer and Defence Counsel F. R. Cartwright of Toronto, agree for such action.

"In view of the attitude taken by the counsel for the prosecution the Court has no desire to deal harshly with you," Magistrate Jeffs told the accused.

"Sentence will be suspended on your entering into a recognizance, satisfactory to the Court and the prosecution, for a term of two years."

Mr. Cartwright told the Court that Rohrbough was born in the United States, but came to Canada and that his father was recently elected to the U. S. Congress from Pennsylvania. Who was a teacher for several years, sought to enlist in the U.S. Army in Texas and when he was unsuccessful came to Canada where he enlisted in the Canadian (Active)- Army Aug. 10, 1940. He was discharged in April, 1941, because of eye trouble.

Since his discharge he had worked as a correspondent for a Toronto newspaper (Star). He wrote to Senator Dandurand about disturbances and sent it to his Toronto paper. He sent a duplicate story to Time, adding that he assumed it would be sent to the censorship. The accused had no desire to evade censorship, Mr. Cartwright said.

Mr. McRuer outlined what seemed to be grounds for prosecution in Canada under which a publication is free to write anything it likes if they are not submitted to the censors and approved by them. Otherwise liable to prosecution. However, he said any stories submitted to the approved by the censors "cannot be the subject of prosecution".

"Crown Counsel Speaks

"The most serious matter is that the publication of this article, as written, undoubtedly provided enemy propagandists with a recent useful weapon to be used against the United Nations," said Mr. McRuer.

JAP AIRDROMES IN SOUTH CHINA HEAVILY RAIDED

Subjected to Punishing Attacks Without Drawing Opposition

DIRECT HITS SCORED

By J. REILLY O'SULLIVAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With the U.S. Air Forces in China (Delayed) (AP)—American bombers, accompanied by the largest fighter escort yet seen in China theatre, subjected two of Japan's airdromes in South China to punishing attacks today without drawing opposition from the enemy.

Three hangars believed filled with Japanese planes, a barracks and a large workshop area at the Sanchu airport received direct hits and were destroyed. Five tons of bombs were dropped on the field, Japan's principal fighter base, and fires and airplane repair and storage buildings were left smouldering. Not a single enemy plane was believed aslain.

A string of bombs exploded on a runway as three enemy planes were taking off. One was demolished before getting off the ground. Fighters attacked the others, probably damaging one.

"Foolish Situation" Created Says Speaker

Toronto, Nov. 25.—(CP)—A "foolish situation" has been created by the overbuying of butter, Harris Parsons told the United Farm Women of Ontario at their annual convention yesterday.

"This overbuying, I will not call it hoarding, reflects a state of mind which should be avoided. It only describes as that of undisciplined children," he said.

She explained that shortage in some districts was the consequence of mal-distribution.

HEROIC TREATMENT

Los Angeles, Nov. 25 (AP).—Dr. A. D. Trotter, police surgeon, made this report: Charley Williams, 46, boxing instructor, had a nosebleed. Friends twisted a handkerchief around his neck and removed him to hospital. The tourniquet was unwound from his neck gagging Williams died in time. Anyway, it stopped the nose bleed.

AFRICAN BATTLE IN CRITICAL PHASE DECLARES EDEN

Declines to Discuss Arrangements Between Gen. Eisenhower And French Authorities

SPEAKS IN HOUSE

London, Nov. 25. (CP)—Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons today that the battle for North Africa is "in an extremely critical phase" and declined to discuss arrangements which Lt.-Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has made with the local French authorities. Eden did not elaborate on his statement.

Allied spokesmen, however, have repeatedly pointed out that the arrangements made by Gen. Eisenhower in French North Africa were probably even to the extent of drafting plans for the invasion of Russian front.

This warning of the degree to which the Axis is girding to save its set footholds in North Africa came after Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that the conquest of North Africa has reached an "extremely critical phase."

Strongest at Bizerte, Tunis

The strongest enemy ground concentrations are gathered in the area of those holding defensive ares are some 20 miles outside Tunis and Bizerte and in flight there Britain's 8th Army in Libya, although the Vichy radio yesterday reported strong formations landing at Gabes and Sfax in southern Tunisia.

British, United States and French forces reported roaming the length and breadth of Tunisia, shelling occasionally with enemy positions in short but violent engagements and preparing for the final showdown with the Axis in Africa.

Eden did not specify how or where the military situation in Tunisia was "critical," but London observers said developments must be expected to unfold slowly compared with the first phase against the French, where surprise, long planning and Allied control of the air would seem to be helpful to the extremely-tense and serious operations now going on in Tunisia," Eden said.

"We could not take the responsibility for allowing anything to happen so far as we had the power to control it which might hamper the responsible commanders in the field in their task of saving and those of our Allies more difficult."

Allies in Battle of Egypt, Libya Use Almost Wholly Canadian Mechanism

Winnipeg, Nov. 25 (CP)—Munitions Minister Howe left here by train today for Ottawa after a one-day inspection of Canadian Pacific Railway and a Winnipeg North Centre Federal by-election address in support of the Liberal candidate, Rodney Johannesson.

Mr. Howe, speaking of the growth of Canada's war industry, said last night that plants now are producing in a year 400,000 pounds of ammunition every minute. Airplane, mechanical and shipbuilding production are increasing, he said, and after the first year's production of 10,000 new plants to utilize the power.

He said the Allied forces in the battle of Libya and Egypt fought almost entirely with Canadian mechanized equipment. Value of munitions produced this year would be $2,000,000,000.

Warning that careful management would be necessary to convert the war machine to peace time uses, Mr. Howe expressed the belief unemployment would be solved by development of natural resources and demand for articles that have been deemed non-essential during the war.

Mr. Howe described the growth of war industries in the dominion. To-day, he said, Canada is supplying several thousand planes for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, for coastal work and overseas service.

Canada now is going into production of bigger planes, he said. Plans are underway for production of the Lancaster bomber and the Mosquito bomber, he said, adding that "we hope to be in substantial production in Canada on Lancasters this spring". The "Hell-Diver", which Mr. Howe described as a fast dive bomber, also will be in production early in the next year.

TAKE TWO

In addition to corvettes, minesweepers and other naval craft, Mr. Howe said "we hope to deliver a finished destroyer each month" by the end of the manufacture.

Eighty-seven 10,000-ton merchant ships have been launched in Canadian shipyards in addition to several 1,000-ton ships, bringing the Dominion's output of merchant ships to about the same level as Britain's.

The cost of production has declined, Mr. Howe said. He also predicted that before many months Canada will be building ships for every one. Official admission 10c. Nominal charge for features attractions. Children accompanied by Adults. Auspices Women's Association. 11-24,26

Allies Roam Over Breadth of Tunisia Preparing Ground

German and Italian Concentrations Are Heavily Attacked By Air Force

MANY PATROL CLASHES

By E. C. DANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 25 — (AP) — The Allied air attacks in North Africa was reported authoritatively today to show that Hitler is backing up his land forces with great air power for a bitter-end stand on the American shore—probably even to the extent of drafting planes from his African Russian front.

This warning of the degree to which the Axis is girding to save its set footholds in North Africa came after Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that the conquest of North Africa has reached an "extremely critical phase."

Herbert Morrison A Great Fighter

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
London, Nov. 25 (CP Cable)

Promotion this week of London's Home Secretary, Herbert Morrison, gave Britain's war cabinet a fighter and strong member for Hackney who for two years has been ordering the people around and making them like it.

If Mr. Churchill is the bulldog of British politics, Morrison is the terrier. It's a rare month when he doesn't get his teeth into something and it's a rarer one when he doesn't win a scrap or two.

In the war cabinet Morrison will retain his portfolio of Home Security and Home Security. This being the case, he probably will continue to make the decisions concerning the future conduct of the war which affect the home front.

Morrison will take up additional cabinet functions concerned with co-ordination of certain departments of which he is a great organizer and for all his rockety combativeness a hard worker.

Morrison's loyalty to the Union government was exemplified when he led and won the fight against members of parliament who sought to end the electoral truce at the party conference last spring. This doubtless had a lot to do with his promotion.

ENGLISH MOTHER EXPRESSES THANKS

Appreciation of the reception accorded members of the Royal Air Force in training in Canada, is seen in a letter received by Mrs. Royle, 212 Coleman Street recently.

The note was one of "deep appreciation for the kindness and hospitality afforded our son Paul, while training in your lovely country," and was written by Mrs. Rose Newns, Hoole, Chester, England.

Mrs. Newns' son, Paul, of the R.A.F., has been a guest several times at the Royle home and his mother writes, "It is a great comfort to us to know of this fine treatment. He is our only son and has been very fortunate while in Canada. Many thanks and good wishes to yourself and family."

LAYING OF SEWER PIPE TO BE FINISHED IN SHORT TIME

Completion of 960 feet of sewer pipe on that part of Dufferin Ave. extending between Pine Street and Victoria Avenue is expected within a week or ten days, weather permitting city officials stated today.

The installation completes the severage facilities for this part of the avenue which is expected to be opened as a city street soon. Sewer pipe of 390 feet had already been laid from Pine Street in a southerly directio nprevious to the present work.

Water facilities now extend for a distance of 960 feet south of Pine Street. Thirty-two lateral sewer pipes beside the main are included in the work affording facilities for potential residents of the street.

Excavation earth and stone is being utilized as a fill for the southern end of the avenue leading into Victoria Avenue which at present is of a low-lying nature. The fill will raise the street level at this point some three feet.

The city and the public utilities co-operated in the installation of sewerage and water facilities.

The next step presumably will be to intern Krebs as an enemy alien, since he cannot be returned to Germany during the war.

The Justice Department declined to comment.

11 Prospective Kiwanis Members Are Introduced

Through the membership committee headed by Jack McIntosh, Kiwanis membership took a decided boost at Tuesday's luncheon at the Quinte Hotel, when eleven prospective members were introduced to the club members and they will be initiated into the club at the next luncheon in a colorful ceremony. This is the largest number that have entered the club at one time in its history and the Kiwanis Club now boasts the largest membership of any service club in the city and much higher than any Kiwanis Club in this district. At the luncheon Bruce Lattimer, whose father, the late William Lattimer was one of the first presidents of the club, was introduced as the new president for 1943 and in accepting the high honor asked for the co-operation of all the members and expressed his thanks to the members for election to the important post. Ross Stiver, who has been a member for many years and has served on many committees with ability was chosen by the directors as secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year.

Norwegians Entertained

The members entertained two members of the Norwegian Air Force now stationed at Mountain View and LAC. Wanberg, who went through the occupation of his country by the Germans and escaped to England and thence to Canada for training, told of some of his experiences during the hectic days of 1940 and his desire to again take up the fight on behalf of his beloved country. Wanberg told the members that ninety-nine per cent of the Norwegians were loyal to the United Nations and the other one per cent Quisling can't trust. He was introduced by Gordon Barclay along with his companion Frank Moberg and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Bruce Lattimer.

Each prosective member for the club was introduced by a member and in the group were two, who previously had been members. The entire group were Grant Ashley, Purrier, Aubrey Coe, Manager Coca Cola Company, Russell Smith, City Battery, Mark Vanner, Belleville Sargent, Alfred Roper, Imperial Oil, I. L. Moore, O.B.C., Harry Walker, Art Wesley, J. & J. Cash Co., J. A. Lazote Reliance Tool and Aircraft, Charles Bishop, Seeds, and Dorland Houston of Houston Lumber Company.

LAC. Wanberg told the members that the occupation of Norway came very suddenly and as Norway had had no experience with war since 1814, the Nazis soon were in complete occupation of the country. The speaker claimed that Norway was not pleased when the British laid mines in Norwegian waters but little did we know what was coming. "Bergen" he said "was taken at once by the Germans and in the harbor were six merchantmen flying the insignia of different nations but owned and operated by Germans and when the occupation began the boats showed their true colors. The boats had anchored in the harbor for four weeks. It was impossible for the Norwegian officials to search the ships because of international law. Their papers were in order." The speaker stated that fifth columnists were busy in Norway from 1934 and they fooled us for a time but they don't fool us now. It would have been possible to recapture Norway but the British needed the boats and troops in other places at the time and Norway was ready to wait for deliverance from the Nazi yoke. Mr. Wanberg explained how the King and his government after a time escaped from Norway and stated they were bombed in every place that they stopped in their escape because the Germans were very anxious to do away with the King and his government.

Seek Fortune at Sea

The speaker showed that Norwegians could not secure a living from the country and therefore went to sea to seek their fortune and this caused the formation of the Norwegian merchant marine, the fourth largest in the world and per capita the largest in the world. He stated that Norway had a very large tanker fleet and nearly 50 per cent of the oil taken to Britain was drawn by Norwegian tankers. 35,000 Norwegian sailors were out of Norway when the occupation came and practically all of the merchant fleet and all are now doing yeoman service for the Allies. Those ships which were in Norway, sneaked away and on them many young men, who have been incorporated into the fighting services of the Allies. Mr. Wanberg stated that conditions were very bad in Norway but in spite of it all there was considerable action on the home front and that much help was being given. In conclusion he stated that it isn't the strength outside that is coming that will help the invasion but it will be the strength organized in the homeland.

Corvette Commanders are Proud Of Stokers Who Have Iron Nerve

Cliff Wanamaker of Stirling, Member of Stokehold of Corvette

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A British Port, Nov. 25. (CP)—A trip into the stokehold of a modern warship would be a revelation to the people who picture stokers as black and grimy coal-shovellers, men of bulging muscles, trudging from coalpiles to gaping furnace doors in an endless race to keep up steam.

A stoker on a modern ship may be large or small and he may never have to wield a coal-shovel. A twist of the wrist sends fuel oil coursing in to fire the boilers. But he must be mechanically inclined, able to stand terrific heat and brave—possibly braver than any other navy rank.

Pride in Conduct of Stokers

A good stoker on a modern warship must never leave the stokehold until ordered to do so, and that takes iron nerve, particularly on Corvettes. Because a depth charge exploding near a corvette sounds exactly like a torpedo striking and has many of a torpedo's effects. In the hot little quarters in a corvette's bowels after a near-by depth charge men are thrown against blister-hot pipes, tossed to the steel plates of the floor, sometimes stunned by a crashing fall.

A Canadian Corvette Commander telling of an action always mentions the stokehold early. His pride in the conduct of his stokers in action can be more intense than anything else in his account.

Sub-Lt. Bill Scully of Montreal told me all this about stokers before we crawled down a hot steel ladder over the curved sides of live boilers into the stokehold of a Canadian corvette tied up here for minor refitting after 18 months on Atlantic convoy duty.

It was 105 above in the stokehold and Stoker Bill Walmsley of Port McNicoll, Ont., told me that the temperature sometimes goes up to 150.

In Time of Action

This clear-complexioned, stocky young fellow showed me what his work is, but parried any questions about how stokers feel during an action when they know by the noise of battle that their ship is being engaged but don't know whether it is fighting a submarine or a battleship.

"When the action isn't too tough, we know from time to time what is going on," he said. "We have a guy on deck who shouts down to us every once in a while when he isn't busy. The only trouble is that he can't do this when things are so close that he's busy himself and sometimes we're so busy down here we don't even hear him."

He explained that stokers work hardest when the corvette is at top speed, because all the gauges and meters must be held at their extremities.

"This is really the best time in an action," he said. "We are going so hard we can't think of anything else."

Other members of the stokehold crew on this covette are Leading Stoker Ernie Moon of Schreiber, Ont. and Stoker Cliff Wanamaker, Stirling, Ont.

AFRICAN BATTLE

"The 1st British Army, strongly supported by United States forces, is making its way eastward over enormous distances with the utmost possible speed, and they are greatly helped in the advance by the favorable attitude of the population and also by the vigorous resistance which the French troops of Tunisia already are offering to the German and Italian invaders."

"The government entered into engagements with De Gaulle and those engagements stand", Eden said.

"I hope the House will agree with the government that the greatest discretion should be observed in the utterances which may be made while the battle and general operation are in their present extremely-critical phase".

All Internees Freed

Earlier Eden told the House that all Britons interned in North Africa and almost all the fighting French internees now have been released.

Demurring to questions about the position of members of the International Brigade and others, who were imprisoned in North Africa because of opposition to the Axis, Eden said the area was a military one and added "you have seen the statement recently made by President Roosevelt, upon which I can not comment at this juncture".

The Foreign Office, he said, nothing about the attitude of authorities at Jibuti, French Somaliland, toward the occupation of French North Africa.

(The Roosevelt statement to which Eden referred was issued Nov. 17. In it the President said: "The future French government will be established. . . .By the French people themselves after they have been set free. . . I have requested the liberation of all persons in North Africa who had been imprisoned because they opposed the efforts of the Nazis to dominate the world and I have asked the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by Nazi governments or Nazi ideologists.")

Toronto Youth Held by Police

City police today were endeavoring to discover how a 14-year-old Toronto lad came into possession of $49.57. The boy was apprehended at the Belleville C.N.R. station early Wednesday morning when railway officials became suspicious as the youth purchased a ticket from here to Montreal.

Detained at the police station the teen-aged lad first told police he had earned the money setting up pins in a Toronto bowling alley. Chief Probert then checked the boy's story with his parents at 47 Beverly Street in Toronto by long distance telephone and was informed when the boy left home on Monday he had no such sum of money. The parents refused to come to Belleville and escort the lad home. Later when confronted with this information the boy changed his story and said he got the money gambling.

"You will have to think up a better one than that, my boy," suggested Chief Probert, as police held the lad for further investigations.

Otherwise activities were quiet and serene in and around police circles.

A promising asbestos deposit has been discovered in Venezuela and a mill capable of handling 6000 tons of fibre annually will be in operation by the end of this year.

C. Copeland Given 10-Year Term For Criminal Assault

Trenton, (Special) — Charles Copeland, 23, was sentenced in Trenton police court on Tuesday afternoon by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd to ten years in the Kingston penitentiary for criminal assault against a five-year-old boy.

On Saturday last, while playing in front of his home between 5 and 5.30 p.m., the child was seized by Copeland and taken to a box car about five blocks away on the Canadian National Railways tracks. There he was brutally assaulted. Gordon Thompson, returning from his work to his home on Quinte St. found the little lad shortly afterward and immediately called the police.

The child was rushed by police to the office of Dr. F. J. Farley where he was given immediate medical attention and from the lad they obtained a meagre description of the assailant. While they were searching for him just about twenty minutes later another call came that a girl about sixteen years of age had been attacked in another part of the town. Due to her physical and athletic ability, however, she was able to free herself but not before she had been bruised and scratched. Her screams alarmed neighbors who called the police. Copeland was apprehended shortly afterward by Constable Morgan of the local police force in a local cafe where he had run for cover.

Statement Read

B. C. Donnan, K.C., Crown Attorney prosecuted and called the child, the girl, Dr. Farley and Chief Bain, who obtained a statement from Copeland and which was read to the court. A lengthy report was also presented from Dr. J. B. McKay, pathologist, medio-legal branch of the Attorney General's Department, which was positive proof that the heinous crime had been committed. A report was also read from K. M. McGregor, M.D., psychiatrist from the Medical Health Clinic, Kingston.

The accused was defended by Allan McNab, barrister of Trenton, who pointed out to the Magistrate that Copeland had never been given a chance like other boys of his age, having had to leave his home at an early age and make his own living. Copeland's mother also gave evidence in his behalf.

Magistrate Lloyd in addressing Copeland before passing sentence said he felt sorry for the young man but he felt that he was a potential murderer. Col. Donnan, in prosecuting, drew the court's attention to the O'Donnell case and said though he did not like to make comparisons yet here was another just such case.

Menace to Society

The Magistrate continued: "I am surprised that the little boy is alive and am afraid to think what have happened to the girl had she not been of strong physique. You are a menace to society, and considering your record in England, it is not a matter of punishing you so that you won't do it again, it is a matter of protecting our families and the children walking the streets. This man should not have his liberty. I have nothing against him, but it is for the safety of the public and the public cannot tolerate such a man." Continuing the Magistrate said: "I might say that if I were doing my duty, as I really think it should be done, I would say this man should never have his liberty, but should go away and be out of circulation and away from society entirely. What is his life compared to the life of this little boy, and who knows, what others? Now if he spends a few years in the penitentiary and comes out, I know these things will happen again—they are so serious that we cannot permit them to happen again and the only way to prevent them from happening is to keep him off the road."

Must Protect Public

In addressing the prisoner the Magistrate said: "You know there is no ill-will against you, it is just a common duty I am performing. We have to protect the public and for the safety of the general public you will have to go to the penitentiary for a period of ten years. It will not happen again for that time. I am very sorry but I have to do this, I am not going to have the lives of little children endangered."

Other cases before police court on Tuesday included: Viola Garrison, charged with corrupting children, case enlarged for one week.

Eric K. Nullmeyer, found guilty on a charge of vagrancy, conviction discharged on account of his war record.

Paul Carter, trespassing, seven days in jail.

M. Ross and Hugh Masters, $10 and costs, each, for being drunk.

Kenneth Moore, having liquor, $10 and costs.

Promoted to Major

A cable has been received from the Middle East by Mrs. Charles Kidd of Trenton, telling of the promotion of her husband to the rank of major.

Major Kidd is 27, and was born in Ireland, the son of Mr. Harold Kidd "Maidenhead", County Carlow. He lived there until 1933, attending Wesley College, Dublin and then Trinity College, taking radio-electrical engineering. This was followed up in this country by graduation from Marconi College in Vancouver. He spent three years in the R.C.A.F. wireless department and one year in the purchasing department of the Bata Shoe Company, Frankford.

At the outbreak of war, Major Kidd enlisted and received his commission in the Royal Canadian Corps Signals and went overseas in July, 1941, a lieutenant. Soon after he was promoted to captain and loaned to the Royal Signals for special duty in the Middle East, where he has been serving since early Spring.

Major Kidd's wife, formerly Miriam C. Sutcliffe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sutcliffe, Firhurst Manor, is living in Trenton with their three small children.

At a meeting of the Red Cross on Tuesday afternoon Mrs. J. H. Redick, 1st Vice-President and Work Convener read to the ladies a letter which she had recently received from England:

Canadian Red Cross Society, Overseas Office, 20 Berkeley Square, London W. I. England, 22nd Oct. 1942.

Dear Mrs. Redick:

I just want to let you know that the garments knitted by your ladies for this society have been included in one of the parcels despatched by us this week to Canadians captured at Dieppe.

I know how much it will be appreciated by the Canadians who receive it and I wish to thank you on their behalf.

(Signed) Mrs. Ralph Thomas

Mammoth German Transport Plane Shot Down by RAF

London, Nov. 25 (CP).—A Reuters dispatch said today that a mammoth German transport seaplane, capable of carrying up to 80 fully-equipped soldiers, was shot into the sea yesterday off the eastern coast of Tunisia by R.A.F. long-range fighters from Malta.

The dispatch called the craft a Blohm and Voss 222—apparently a huge new type by the makers of flying boats which the Nazis used experimentally for flights across the Atlantic before the war.

Three R.A.F. fighters sighted it north of Linosa island, midway between Tunisia and Sicily, flying northward and unescorted, presumably returning to Sicily after having landed enemy reinforcements in Tunisia.

No one was seen to escape as the plane crashed into the water.

Later, when fighter planes from Malta shot down a JU-52 German transport plane in the same area, troops were seen struggling in the water. The JU-52 also was unescorted.

A Dornier 24, escorted by three ME-109's was intercepted between Tunisia and Sicily and damaged.

CORRIDOR

Soviet communiques reported both rail supply lines to the siege forces cut early in the offensive which started 60 days ago and today's dispatches indicated that only a narrow gap remained between the Don river elbow north of Kalach and south of Stalingrad. This gap was down to an estimated 200,000 German and their Axiliary troops, the communiques said.

The fall of Kalach, on the Stalingrad railway, followed by an announced Sunday and Trekhostrovskaya fell, forming a pincer-like jaw closing down on the southwest.

Falls Followed Nov. 19

The communiques have not made clear gains being followed by the several Russian offensive columns but location of the Germans escape avenue north of Kalach would indicate the same Red army which cut the Stalingrad-Novorossisk railroad south of Stalingrad swung part of its forces north-westward to protect Kalach, which is about 80 miles due west of Stalingrad, and Trekhostrovskaya, about 35-40 miles west.

The Germans, in their communiques reported penetration to Chernyshevskaya, about 75 miles south of Stalingrad, and this gives the picture of a Germanshelf certain-ly stretching some 120 miles west from Stalingrad within narrow confines before it would reach into the realities of room for the invaders.)

Adding to the troubles being built up behind the Axis siege armies, the Russians reported yesterday they had started a column down the Volga from the north to effect a junction with Stalingrad's forces in the north-east part of the city and clear out a wedge the Red forces have driven between this sector and the main part of the town.

Gales of 55 miles

Battlefront dispatches reporting gales of 55 miles an hour yesterday in the Chernyshevskaya area with rain in the Don bend sector, indicated a slowing up in this sector was retarding supply operations of the Germans besieged in the south of the main Moscow-to-Rostov rail line.

The drive southwest of Stalingrad also continued to gain, the Russians announcing Germans were "giving up" into striking distance of Kotelnikovo, a railway junction 100 miles southwest of Stalingrad from which the German armies in the southern area of their pincers attack on the Volga gained last month.

South of the railway which runs from Stalingrad to Rostov, Germans dispatched into the northern Caucasus, according to Russian dispatches, another 30,000 men, while fighter planes with machine guns and bombs were reported in action against Russian troops and tanks and even airplanes were left behind.

Nazi Divisions Surrounded

Russian dispatches acclaimed the surrender of another division of three Nazi divisions in the Don bend sector, which would indicate the elimination of a narrow wedge the Germans had driven to the outskirts of Stalingrad as the greatest of the new victories.

Kotelnikovo, on the Don 120 miles northwest of Stalingrad, was apparently pocketed.

The destruction of the German wedge to the Volga banks put a Nazi-held airfield back in Russian hands and opened a new route for supply and reinforcement to the garrison of Stalingrad.

German forces arrayed before Stalingrad still were described as strong, and Russian dispatches said the Nazis showed no signs of falling back from their positions although their case is more desperate hourly as the corridor behind them narrowed.

Cheered by this direct and indirect relief, defenders of the war-torn city pushed ahead slowly in their own offensive, the regular midnight communique reporting the enemy cleared out of several dozen blockhouses and blindages in the factory district with 900 invaders killed. A slight advance also was announced in the Red square in the southern outskirts of the city.

Today's mid-day communique reported continued advances overnight within Stalingrad as well as to the northwest and south of the city "in the same directions as yesterday."

Red army soldiers were said to have advanced further in the factory district, although no details were given, and in the southern outskirts 420 Germans were reported killed when Soviet troops occupied a number of fortified positions.

Regiment Wiped Out

One German regiment was declared wiped out in fulle scouring attacks northwest of the city and the Russians announced just how details were given on this advance.

To the south, 3,000 Germans were reported killed when the Russians occupied several towns, the names of which were not given.

Local German attacks were said to have been repulsed in the Gulf of Finland sector near Tuapse and in the Caucasus area in which while small scale thrusts gained some ground for the Russians in the Leningrad sector.

It was Aug. 25 that the Axis armies, string and confusion after sweeping more than 350 miles eastward in their summer offensive, arrived before the hard rock of the Volga and tried to crack it in direct assault.

Turn to Straits

They have only to shrivel with shell and bomb and they've bought strips of its ruins by paying a price in dead tens of thousands of lives —the Russians estimated 100,000 Germans killed in their drive 60 days—but today Hitler apparently is faced with a choice of withdrawing the estimated 200,000 men still in the Don bend or running the risk of having them encircled and annihilated.

The communique last night and the regular midnight report today did not make clear the exact strategy followed by the Russians but Stalingrad still was impressive story of mounting Axis losses and blunted significantly of determining factor.

In Tuesday's fierce fighting 15,000 more Germans were reported killed and 12,000 captured, bringing the total since Nov. 19 to 250,000 and the prisoners to 36,000 in the offensive which the special communique indicated was launched November 19.

10,000 Reported Wounded

(The Soviet communiques gave no figures on the Germans wounded but on the Factory district with 900 invaders killed. A slight advance also was announced in the Red square in the southern outskirts of the city.)

Today's mid-day communique reported continued advances overnight within Stalingrad as well as to the northwest and south of the city "in the same directions as yesterday."

ALLIES

Long-range fighters ranged the skies above Rome yesterday seeking out German and Italian concentrations, docks, railroad yards and trains and occasionally engaging Axis fighters, Allied headquarters announced. Five were shot down and a troop train was riddled by three fighters in a daylight attack.

Observers said that both the British 8th Army in Libya and the Allied army in Tunisia have billions upon billions of dollars worth of the finest weapons ever turned out by any nation at their disposal.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel plans to make a stand in the narrow neck between Gulfs of Agheila or Sirte, time his flight toward Tripoli.

French Patrols Active

French patrols in southern Tunisia under Lieut.-General Louis Henri Giraud yesterday reported continued aggressive activity against an apparently-increased infiltration of Germans there, but a communique from Algiers said there was no change in the situation.

Broadcast by radio Morocco said: "Everything is quiet on the front today. Nothing of importance to report."

American parachute troops guarding an airfield in the south ranged with Axis column of mechanized troops and took a number of prisoners, a spokesman for Allied headquarters in Africa said. The Germans have been unsuccessful in their efforts to retreat," an official spokesman said.

The Vichy radio asserted that the Germans had landed reinforcements at Gabes and Sfax and it is expected the Axis will fight bitterly to hold the coast line and withdraw their forces in the Bizerte-Tunis area with Sfax about 200 and 350 miles south of Gabes on the coastal road.

Radio Morocco reported that the Allied-occupied port of Bone on the Algerian coast was bombed last night by air raiders despite a heavy barrage of anti-aircraft fire. Bone is a few miles from the Tunisian border.

Artificial Rubber Plant

Canada, facing a rubber shortage, had already spent $40,000,000 for an artificial rubber plant, Mr. Howe announced, and $40,000,000 for an artificial rubber plant, which would manufacture synthetic rubber.

Advices from authorized spokesmen, however, have indicated a larger period of preparation for the admittedly-tough assignment.

Three Years Ahead

Reports of engagements between patrols of the opposing armies in Southern Tunisia and the aerial attack on an Axis troop train near Gabes, Tunisia, and on 100 miles from the Libyan border, suggested that the Germans are throwing fresh reinforcements into Southern Tunisia, and probably the key port of Tripoli too.

If true, it may be difficult to separate the Axis-minded Africa Corps withdrawing eastward in Libya and the anti-Axis armies in Southern Tunisia.

The 8th Army approaching El Agheila from Agedabia in Libya should keep the Axis forces under Field Marshal Erwin Rommel plans to make a stand in the narrow neck between Gulfs of Agheila or Sirte, time his flight toward Tripoli.

DESCRIBES BATTLE ACTIONS OF NAVY

Allan Mills, Nov. 25—The guest of honor at a pot luck supper served by the members of Zion W. A. was Patty Officer Stocker Frank Hutchinson, R.C.N., who recently returned from overseas. Mrs. Hutchinson and sons has been in the city for the past few months. In addition to the action he has witnessed in the present conflict he has been a good deal of the world.

Native of Southern England, he left there for Canada as a lad and helper in 1927. Although he grew up like Topsy, managed to get by long enough to win his wife, Miss Petherick, a fine Canadian girl of grammar grit, he had long held the desire to join the Navy, so he returned to his native England in 1932 and on enlisting was assigned to the duty of gun layer and later in the Mediterranean. His experiences during the early war he describes was when the navy was forced to evacuate the army of the Italian base at Taranto in 1940. "This was really quite a blow. We had been rather plainly by surprise and our aircraft must have done a tremendous amount of damage, judging by the explosions we could hear and see from the ships," he said by carrier-based planes.

When the Italians were down several months ago he said it was the first time the navy encountered the Italian fleet at least four torpedoes found their mark, doing most of the damage to the ship with total boiler and engine rooms. Like many other members of the crew, he went over-board when the order came, was picked up by a destroyer.

The W. A. was attended by more than a hundred including members, ex-members and friends from the community was designed for the dual purpose of entertaining the guest of honor and of getting some work done for the organization. Rev. J. R. Bliss, rector of the Seymour charge of the United Church, joined with the president, Mrs. Albert Petherick, in welcoming the visitors, who numbered more than forty. Following dinner, four quilts were pieced, while others busied themselves in packing nine boxes which will be sent to Christmas parcels to boys from the district who are serving with the armed forces.

PRESENTATION

In the mess room of the local C.N.R. Roundhouse on Monday, Nov. 23, 1942, a very pleasing event took place when a presentation of a Victory Loan Bond to Mr. C. A. Galloway, was made by the shopmen and staff, on his promotion to Assistant Master Mechanic. Mr. Adams, head clerk, in a few well chosen words, spoke of the good will and esteem in which Mr. Galloway was held by his fellow workmen. Mr. W. Reeves made the presentation.

In the evening, a further presentation was made at the regular meeting of the Engineeer's Educational Club, when a Gladstone bag was presented by Mr. Frank Parsons, a brother from the Educational Club.

Mr. Galloway came from Windsor fifteen months ago and during that time, his associates with the most very of be lost, Mr. Gordon Vince, from Sarnia, succeeds Mr. Galloway as assistant foreman.

Russian Drive

A great movement of the war is now proceeding in the Stalingrad area with the Russian offensive gaining momentum as the arms of the giant Russian pincers move forward at a rate to threaten the entire Russian siege force and also the Germans in the Caucasus with possibilities of undoing the German advance of the past summer which was made at such heavy cost in men and materials.

The pincer movement by Russia is again showing Russian strategy and tactics as of the highest order. It is less than a year ago that Joseph Stalin swung forward and relieved Moscow from the pressure of the Huns who had determined to take the city. They were not only driven back from Moscow last December and later, but they did not hold a spring offensive. In fact the Germans have limited the front on which they tried to advance. Sebastopol held them back for a long time and took hecatombs of German soldiery as the price for acquiring that seaport. Then the Germans started up determined to get Stalingrad, the great industrial city of the Volga, but again Russia frustrated them. Then in the year of 1942 last winter, come Russian forces to drive back the enemy. That is the process which is now at work.

Late yesterday it was reported that the German commander in the siege area of Stalingrad was beginning to pull out.

Russia is hurling great strength of fresh forces against the enemy with marked success and a steady rate of progress numbered by six to ten and nine to twelve miles daily with the two prongs of the pincer.

Russia has again shown her resourcefulness. Her command works in unison with time and season. There is the spirit of modern Russia, a spirit so loyal and so ready to sacrifice for the good of the Russian people and their country that Hitler's methodical war methods cannot rival them.

Premier Stalin by the success of his arms is adding to the confusion and anxiety of the enemy, which is so apparent in every part of Europe where frenzied preparations to add to the strength of fortifications and the many forces which are now presented to Hitler from which invasion may come, are under way.

Strangely enough the other day the Germans told of Russian progress. That was misleading as showing how this had affected the Germans and also as indicating that Germany was of necessity forced to make this disclosure. It might be taken as an assurance that the Germans expect to be driven farther and farther back.

Today the world is witnessing something Hitler must dread, the fluidity of the Allied strength. The entire phase of the war has changed, the geography shows this. Suddenly the fronts opposed to German armies have become fluid and the nations are not allowing to pass the opportunity which has opened up.

Moving and Looking Forward

Mr. Churchill declared a few days ago that when the war is won it will be the first duty of the United Nations to watch over the victory so that no new tyranny may be allowed to loose tragedy on the world and that "it is not too soon to prepare the vigilance which will defend the rights and liberties which our arms will have rescued and restored." Mr. Roosevelt has said that the problems of victory and peace are immediate and pressing, that "they are on our doorstep."

As the United Nations are moving forward with their campaign and their steady growth of power, they are not going to arrive at peace and victory all unprepared to maintain the peace which will be won.

That the winning of the war has first call on the attention is shown by the intense activity of the situation which has been developed by Britain and the United States. Much hard work of course remains to be done and there should be no letting-up and there will be no let-up of energy to bring this war to the desired conclusion that will guarantee the hopes of mankind for security.

The intensification of the war effort is a natural corollary of the success in North Africa and of the Russian success.

INSIDE STUFF

That masculine bellow, "For he's a good fellow"
Has seldom been sounded for him.
He's not very able at making a table
Of roisterers gay with his vim.
He makes a bad showing at snappy bonmoting,
He hasn't a joke in his dome;
He's dull in these small ways, but somehow he's always
"A jolly good fellow" at home.

He lacks in that gallant gregarious talent
Which keeps a whole club in a roar,
But home hearts grow lighter and home faces brighter
The moment he opens the door.
A lift in the rhythm of life comes in with him,
A spirit that's blithsome and hearty;
For though he's no star in a group at the bar,
At home he's the life of the party.

A gentle and mellow and humorous fellow
Whose home-nurtured zest never flops,
Whose wife and kids love him and proudly say of him:
"He's well, he's the berries, he's tops!"
He may seem a dub and a dud at the club
Where wise-crackers merrily roam,
That isn't his forte—but you'll find he's a sport,
A jolly good fellow—at home!

—Berton Braley, in The Rotarian.

TEN TRICKY QUESTIONS

So you think you're smart, eh? H. V. O'Brien of the Chicago Daily News dug up the following ten tricky questions, and then found the score was zero when he attempted to answer them. Give them a whirl on your mental machinery and see how YOU fare. The answers will be published in this column tomorrow. Here they are:

1. If three cats can kill three rats in three minutes, how long will it take 100 cats to kill 100 rats?

2. I have two current U.S. coins in my hand. Together they total 55 cents. One is not a nickel. What are the coins?

3. A rope ladder 10 feet long is hanging over the side of a ship. The rungs are a foot apart, the bottom rung is resting on the surface of the ocean. The tide rises at the rate of six inches an hour. When will the first three rungs be covered with water?

4. Which is correct: 8 and 8 are 15, or 8 and 8 is 15?

5. Is it legal for a man to marry his widow's sister?

6. There are 10 black stockings and 10 white stockings in a drawer. If you reach into the drawer in the dark, what is the minimum number of stockings you must take out before you are sure of having a pair of stockings that match?

7. Take two apples from three apples and what have you got?

8. A blind beggar had a young sister who died. On her deathbed this sister said she never had a brother. If she was truthful, who was the blind beggar?

9. A customer hands a cigar clerk a $5 bill for $2 worth of cigars. The latter has no change, but he gets some from a drug clerk next door, who gives him five $1 bills for the $5 bill. The customer leaves with the $3 in change. An hour later the drug clerk rushes in, saying the $5 bill was counterfeit. The cigar clerk gives him a good $5 bill. How much did the cigar clerk lose in money and cigars?

10. An archaeologist has reported finding a Babylonian coin marked 649 B.C. Is he telling the truth?

THANKSGIVING PRAYER

How shall we keep Thanksgiving Day tomorrow
What prayer shall we say
In a world that's so strewn with disaster and sorrow
And dread and dismay?

Our young and our brave will not come to the table,
They are far from their own;
But we can be grateful, and glad we are able
To share in the true

Be grateful for all who God's love are fighting;
For orchards and vines,
For courage, for strength and our treasures uniting
In holding the lines.

The dangers are great, but give thanks and be grateful
For all who now brave them;
For men of strength and for all that is fateful:
"God bless them, and save them!"

The Urgent Necessity of a Second Front in 1942

New York, Nov. 25.—There is no more urgent task ahead of the United Nations" than the establishment of a second front in Europe, and for the first time, Hitler is the master of United Allied initiative. It is a two-front strategy taking up a decisive position for the moves in other areas — for instance, from the British Isles—unpredictable.

What Can Hitler Do?

What, under all these circumstances, can Hitler do?

Hypothetically, he might try to take back the initiative and reestablish the communication lines with his almost encircled armies before Stalingrad. But that is hardly possible because the surprise was too great and the losses too high. More probable it is that he will follow a second strategy, withdrawing and improvising a new line of defence.

But then, the question is: What about the German armies in the Caucasus who will be bagged and enormously endangered? If he withdraws the Caucasian army before Stalingrad, he admits the loss of the Caucasian campaign. If he maintains the front, he risks the whole armies—with the Anglo-American might rising in the west.

The greatest German strength is lined up between the upper Don and the Caucasus. We trust the Italians are not counting that it will move away to fight for them.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES

Hardly a week passes that the newspapers in some part of the country do not report clashes between the authorities and members of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Most of these incidents involve refusal by members of the sect to register under the selective service act, refusal to obtain permits, without permits, selling or distributing hand-bills, magazines and other literature without licenses, and other activities in violation of the Bill of Rights.

The Jehovah's Witnesses appear to be willing to submit to any kind of penalties, punishment and inconvenience in the exercise of their faith.

They have aroused the ire of more than one community, and have been attacked, insulted, egged out of town and otherwise roughly treated.

Courts, from the lowest police and justice-of-the-peace court to the United States Supreme court, have been called upon to pass judgment upon cases involving Jehovah's Witnesses.

The Jehovah's Witnesses are members of the International Bible Students' Association, and are followers of the "religious sect."

This movement was started by Charles Taze Russell (1852-1916), who was known as "Pastor Russell" and "Millennial Dawn."

Russell, who was a lay preacher, founded the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, which is the legal name of the International Bible Students' Association, and began publication of the magazine, "Zion's Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence."

Russell was a student of the Bible and a writer on religious subjects. He published a series of books, which he called "Millennial Dawn," and which were later published under the general title of "Studies in the Scriptures."

Russell's followers, who were known as "Russellites" or "Millennial Dawnists," were organized into congregations, which were called "ecclesias."

Pastor Russell died in 1916, leadership of the Russellites was assumed by Joseph Franklin Rutherford, generally known as "Judge" Rutherford, before Judge Rutherford died in San Diego last January, he claimed to have followers in 36 countries. About 13,000,000 copies of his books and pamphlets were distributed, and at one time his syndicated sermons appeared in some 2,000 newspapers.

In 1917 Judge Rutherford was sentenced to serve 20 years in the Atlanta federal penitentiary on charges of violating the espionage act by urging Americans to refuse to take an oath to fight in the World War, but the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decision and released him after he had served nine months of the sentence.

Members of the International Bible Students' Association adopted the name Jehovah's Witnesses in 1935.

Judge Rutherford himself, it is said, was author of the watchword, "Millions Now Living Will Never Die," which Jehovah's Witnesses have placed on buildings, fences and other conspicuous places throughout the country.

W. C. T. U.

The November meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held on Friday in Bridge Street Church parlor with the President, Mrs. Hall, presiding. The opening hymn was the prayer "Lead Lord and Faithful Shepherd" and the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Prayer groups were suggested. Dr. John R. Mott, the noted world traveller in the cause of missions attributed his success among the nations to prayer. The President led in prayer. Mrs. Houston rendered a very suitable solo.

Mrs. O'Flynn read the Scripture and enlarged on the comforting words of the Saviour as well as the inspiring prayer for the great cause of temperance and for those who labor for the overthrow of the terrible traffic in liquor.

Miss Duff was then again welcomed on her annual visit. In her address she presents strong facts with authority. She reported that her reception at the schools was pleasant and encouraging, the teachers and pupils showing much interest. Miss Duff encourages the reading of the leaflet "We do not need to smoke". Marriage Middle Professional Weapon of Victory—Modern Miss

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Odors Can Cause Symptoms of Allergy

We are all familiar with allergy to pollen, furs, feathers and foods. In some individuals the symptoms of asthma, hayfever, eczema, or hives are produced by inhaling and in other hives of urticaria.

A most unpleasant odors can cause stomach and even nervous upsets in some persons, that odors can cause allergic symptoms such as to pollen, furs, feathers and foods is not known to most of us. It is interesting, therefore, to read that experimental and clinical evidence is now available showing that odors can cause allergic symptoms.

In the Journal of Allergy, St. Louis, Dr. Philadelphia, Jones states that pleasant or unpleasant odors of plants, fruits, meats, animals, plants and animals foods can be causes of allergy.

Besides the list of allergens responsible for most cases of hay fever, asthma patients, the symptoms of asthma appear in the presence of certain trees, the garden trees, mock orange, carnations, lilacs, honeysuckle, lilacs, lilies of the valley, and violets.

If the blossoms have no stamens or pistils, as in the case of the violet, the odors and not the pollens cause the symptoms.

"In some instances the allergic symptoms developed from the mere odor of certain animals without the animals coming in contact with them; the mere fact of being close to the owner is often being sufficient to cause the symptoms. Also, even the smell of animal foods may cause allergic meat same symptoms in certain individuals as the allergy can those foods".

Allergic symptoms caused by odors other than those from plants and animals are also mentioned by Dr. Urbach: synthetic perfumes employed in cosmetics and soaps, odors from the sulphur in spas, and the smell of burning wood, charcoal, kerosene and tobacco.

How can one become "desensitized" and not be affected by these odors causing allergic symptoms? Extracts prepared from the substances and taken by mouth have proven successful in curing these scent allergies.

When Children's Eyes Are Bigger Than Their Stomachs...

Unusual is the child who does not get his or her quota of these from time to time. Children are normally active and energetic, and their digestive systems are subject to sudden dietary and digestive upsets which may disrupt a child's entire day. Mothers, be prepared and forewarned. Try the new modern way of relieving these distressing upsets. Keep Dr. Hamilton's Pills handy. From age to 12 years they go to work at once to help promote the flow of digestive juices. ## Hoarders Warned

The fact that consumers in many instances do not appear to be aware of the fact that anti-hoarding regulations apply as much to articles which are mentioned as to those which are now distributed in limited manner. It continued upon by the regional office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Under the Maximum Prices Regulations, it is pointed out, it is an offence to "acquire or accumulate for the purpose of selling in such amount which is reasonably required for the use or consumption of a household and his household or for a period such amount, it any, as the Board may prescribe.

This means that, especially in the case of articles which are in short supply, the Board takes a serious view of any person accumulating household stocks of goods which are beyond those reasonably needed by himself.

The fact that it may have been household practice to buy in large quantities has no bearing upon the situation. It is asserted, and already there have been successful prosecutions in different parts of the Dominion, that individuals who charged as "hoarders", laid in stocks of goods which exceeded all reasonable quantities specified in the regulations, have been required to and to or accentuated shortages.

DRILLON STARS

Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks moved into a pace above Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League standings last night as both teams battled to deadlocked scores. Red Wings tied Canadiens in Montreal 4-4, while Black Hawks drew with Bruins 5-5 in Boston. Bruins and Canadiens positions remained unchanged.

Boston's millions of Rookies and veterans turned in a great showing against the high-powered Hawks and at one time during the second period were within the game 4-3. The Bruins took the lead after hammering in three goals in a little more than two minutes.

Chicago led the way during the first period with Mush McDonald, Thoms and Doug Bentley handling the scoring. Thoms the assisted in the Bentley goal that had Black Hawks leading 2-1. Hamilton Jackson and Murph Chamberlain joined in giving the Rubbown packsters their initial tally.

The Bruins scoring spree came after seven minutes in the second frame with Armand Guidolin getting his initial tally. It was the first appearance on home ice for the 17-year-old rookie. Sonny Gallagher, another Rookie, rode in with the next Boston goal and Bill Cowley completed the third.

The Bruins lead was short-lived as Mush Marsh with his second goal, set the Hawks abreast of Boston and in the third period Red Hamill had Chicago again in the lead. Jack Chamberlain notched the final counter for Bruins.

In Montreal, Canadiens staged a third period rally to over take a 4-0 lead by the Red Wings. After a scoreless first period, Sid Abel, Syd Howe, and Eddie Wares gave Detroit a 3-0 lead which carried into the third frame. Carl Liscombe and Ken Smith before the Canucks could break away.

The Habitants first score came 24 seconds after Liscombe had batted in the final Detroit tally. Toe Blake set the trick that broke the duck-egg and a minute later Joe Benoit came to add another. Ray Getliffe provided the Canucks third counter with nine minutes to a half minutes to play Gordie Drillon flipped the puck past a bewildered Johnny Mowers.

London, Nov. 25. (CP)—Most of Britain's sporting heroes are now in the armed forces but Gunner John Henry Arthur who announces he has no intention of relinquishing his bantam-weight title—is the only "Britain" fond. This time the Merchant Navy—and what better beneficiary could be found—figures to benefit by more because the Navy League executive has already raised $1,200 in contributions to be deducted from proceeds of the show. Last, returned from Montreal where he lost to LAC. Dave Castillou in a Canadian Middle final, is taking special courses at Currie Barracks, Calgary, but training for the Marcus fight won't interfere with his army duties.

The Expert Says:

Fred (Pearsbrough Examiner) Craig: "The manner in which young hockey players, some of them not out of their teens, have been stealing the show in N.H.L. games should be giving professional managers something to think about. . . In recent years the newspaper and radio press agents of pro hockey have plastered the N.H.L. brand as something miles better than the ordinary senior and junior "A" variety. It will be difficult to keep selling the professional game on that basis if kids continue to step out of junior "B" teams and make good at the drop of a hat."

CARTHY TO WEAR SPECIAL HELMET

Suffered Jaw Injury Two Weeks Ago but Ready for Tilt

Montreal, Nov. 25—(CP)—Jack Carthy is expected to be back patrolling the left boards when Canadiens meet Cornwall in the opener of a Quebec Senior Hockey League game here tonight, and Coach Paul Haynes is thanking Boston Bruins for the favor.

Carthy suffered a jaw injury two weeks ago. Doctors said he could resume play tonight if his jaw had ample protection. Haynes recalled a specially-constructed helmet that Bill Cowley wore last winter following an injury, and asked Boston for the loan of it.

The helmet arrived yesterday and is expected to supply the necessary protection for Carthy's injury jaw.

Frank Dotten, out of weekend games with a touch of flu, will also be back in the Canadiens lineup.

Meanwhile, Canadiens are still waiting to hear if the C. A. H. A. will approve the transfer of Eddie Slowiak, former Winnipeg Monarch star. The word from Q. A. H. A. officials last night was indefinite. If the C. A. H. A. for a definite ruling by today.

Frontenacs Notch Three Goals a Period to Win Easily

CANADIENS WIN

Cleveland Ready To Stop Playing Ball for Duration

Cleveland, Nov. 25 —(AP)— President Alva Bradley of the Cleveland Indians expressed doubt today that fans want wartime baseball and declared that he "would rather not open" the ball park next spring if he thought the players would ride high wages for not being in the military service.

"I would not open the ball park next spring than go out there and hear the cry 'Why aren't you in the army, you big bum?'" Bradley said.

"The members of the Indians will have a very good reason for not being in the army," he added. "They'll have wives and children to support."

"But I want to know whether the public will want that as a valid reason."

Bradley said he had talked to a number of people with varied baseball but he explained that these people did not represent a "cross-section of opinion" since most of the letters were of Bradley's baseball connections.

He said he wanted "an expression from the fans" to take along to the baseball major league meeting in Chicago next week.

Ottawa Technical Beats Regiopolis By 9 to 1 Count

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—Ottawa Technical High School won the Eastern Ontario Secondary Schools Association junior football championship here yesterday by defeating Regiopolis College of Kingston 9-1, with Craig Kelly starting for the winners.

Kelly contributed seven points to the locals' victory, smashing his way through for a touchdown in the first quarter, which he also converted, and booting a single in the third frame. Ronnie Bannister added the last two points on a pair of last quarter singles.

Except in the game's early stages both teams forgot all about the forward pass. Technical scored early in a first down in the opening minutes on a completed pass from Kelly to Graeme Chambers on the centre stripe. They moved the sticks again on Kelly's plunge to the Regiopolis 35-yard line, and Kelly completed his second pass of the day on a toss to Herb Reynetti.

Moving into scoring position, the Ottawa team gambled on the forward pass once more and lost. Newton, Regiopolis snap, coming up from the secondary position to gather in the ball.

A kick by Warren Thompson, Regiopolis leader, was taken by Kubusutsky, Technical School's quarterback, on the Kingston 20-yard stripe, and Kelly reeled off a first down on three successive line smashes, carrying the ball to the eight-yard line.

From there Kelly took the ball over on the third play, cutting through the left side of the line and scoring standing up. His convert from placement went right between the uprights, making the score 6-0.

Score a Single

Kingston scored a single before the end of the half, with Thompson booting to Kelly, who was rougbed for the point. The Regiopolis team paved the way for their only point of the game with their initial first down, which was quickly followed by another which carried the ball through for an eight-yard gain. Thompson booted the point from the Ottawa 34-yard line.

Kelly got his second single of the day—and his seventh point—early in the third period, kicking a high one to McMartin, Kingston halfback, who was downed behind the line. The ball landed at about the 10-yard line, took a bad bounce and rolled behind the line, when McMartin went down beneath a deluge of tacklers.

In the fourth quarter, Defalco of Ottawa scored the second gain of the day, hitting the line for 35 yards and bringing the ball to the Kingston 22-yard stripe. Bannister, his opposite number yesterday by defeating Regiopolis College of Kingston 9-1, with Craig Kelly starting for the winners.

They moved the sticks again on Kelly's plunge to the Regiopolis 35-yard line, and Kelly completed his second pass of the day on a toss to Herb Reynetti.

Moving into scoring position, the Ottawa team gambled on the forward pass once more and lost. Newton, Regiopolis snap, coming up from the secondary position to gather in the ball.

A kick by Warren Thompson, Regiopolis leader, was taken by Kubusutsky, Technical School's quarterback, on the Kingston 20-yard stripe, and Kelly reeled off a first down on three successive line smashes, carrying the ball to the eight-yard line.

From there Kelly took the ball over on the third play, cutting through the left side of the line and scoring standing up. His convert from placement went right between the uprights, making the score 6-0.

Score a Single

Kingston scored a single before the end of the half, with Thompson booting to Kelly, who was roughed for the point. The Regiopolis team paved the way for their only point of the game with their initial first down, which was quickly followed by another which carried the ball through for an eight-yard gain. Thompson booted the point from the Ottawa 34-yard line.

Kelly got his second single of the

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

DID YOU KNOW—ACCORDING to a sports story in a Scottish newspaper Leon Goyer, former Belleville puckster, turned the "hat trick" for the 4th Bty. team in a hockey game . . . Leo got three goals and a brace of assists the same night Walt Gerow Jr. bagged a brace of counters. . . . Incidentally Coach Don Thomas is using Goyer at centre flanked by Gerow and Freeman, a Cobourg lad. The writer of the game gives himself the by line of "blueline", but space being limited in newspapers overseas only a short report was published. . . However, the good Scots were "favourably impressed with the speed and ability of the Canadian Artillery team", reports Blueline. . . We understand F.O. Stan Jackson, former professional hockey player, is now stationed at the Trenton Air Station, having been transferred from Mountain View. . . The "Bombers" had counted on F.O. Jackson to coach their hockey team in the district R. C. A. F. hockey league. . . Well, it makes him that much closer to Belleville, in case Stanley is still interested in puck-chasing . . . According to the grapevine out of Kingston, the good people of the Limestone City are after Coach Wally Elmer's scalp simply because the Frontenacs have dropped their initial two home games . . . Scribe Walshe says the experienced players on the Frontenacs were guilty of mistakes that shouldn't happen to juniors. . . If the players are kicking the gong around, why blame the coach? . . . It was ever thus. . . Indications point to the largest wrestling crowd in history to pack the Hume Arena for the Swedish Angel-John Katan feature muscle-bending show tonight. . . This throwback from the Neanderthal age, who resembles something of a monstrosity, is wrestling's No. 1 box office attraction, which is proven by the advance sale for tonight's all-star show. . . The district girls' basketball league will open unofficially with an exhibition game at Mountain View tonight.

WING COMMANDER A. J. Snetsinger's No. 5 I. T. S. hoopsters are not only well out in front of the Bay of Quinte R. C. A. F. basketball loop, but undefeated. Seeking other cage fields to conquer the local airmen hoopsters are seeking exhibition games at Western University and with the Peterborough "Marines". "We hope to get in games with the "Mustangs" and at Peteboro' before Christmas," stated F.O. Alex Munroe, district basketball convener today.

The standing of the Bay of Quinte R. C. A. F. cage loop today reads:—

With the initial half of the first round of the schedule completed the scoring indicates a strong league has been organized by President F.O. Ray Barrett.

THROUGHOUT ONTARIO curling clubs are organizing for their winter's activities, but alas the ancient and honored game of "swoop'er down" has fallen on evil days in Belleville. Curling has been as dead as last year's Christmas turkey for past decade or so. However, efforts to interest those still desirous on curling has been made of a recent date and all that's needed is a few interested citizens to swing the deal. We understand the Belleville Parks commission is ready and willing to co-operate with any recognized organization in the provision of a suitable site for the revival of the game in Belleville. There are several suitable buildings at the Exhibition Park and no doubt if a move is made in the right direction curling could rise to its previous lofty standing in the city's recreational picture. Other communities much smaller than Belleville finance a curling club and with the annual meeting of the Belleville Bowling Club scheduled for Monday next, the question of curling would not be amiss to be discussed by that efficient and energetic body.

REMEMBER WHEN THE University of British Columbia "Thunderbirds" ended their football season undefeated after beating the Victoria "Revellers" 17 to 6 three years ago today? The Collegians were unbeaten and untied in a ten-game schedule, capturing the Western Intercollegiate and Big Four (British Columbia) championships.

MORTON COOPER, ST. LOUIS Cardinal pitcher, appearing at Topeka, Kan., Armistice Day to help the American Legion sell War Bonds, modestly denied his right to the "Most Valuable Player" award of the National League.

"They got me mixed up with my brother, Walker", said Mort. "I had a pretty good year, but that brother of mine caught 125 games, called for the right pitches and batted .280 in the important fifth-place slot".

Morton went to work last week in the Lake City ammunition plant near Kansas City—his first off-season job since winning a place on the Cardinal staff.

"ON THE SALARIES THE Phils pay, even one buck counts," Sam Nahem, pitcher of the Philadelphia Nationals, is reported to have remarked when he paid a $1 fine for riding a bicycle on the sidewalks in Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

Sam didn't reveal what his salary was with the Phils, but his pay check in December will be no secret. He is joining the Army, November 25, and the base pay for privates is $50 per month.

EAGLES SCORE SECOND VICTORY

(By The Canadian Press)

New Haven Eagles, cellar occupants in the eastern division of the American Hockey League, scored their second victory in 11 starts this season as they defeated Indianapolis Capitals 3-2 last night in the Indiana City.

By losing, the Caps missed an opportunity to reduce the four-point gap between them and Buffalo Bisons, western division leaders, who were idle along with the rest of the circuit.

Mack Labavitch scored the first New Haven goal late in the first period and Gordon Reid made it 2-0 midway in the second. In the same period the Caps came to life and tied the score at 2-2 on goals by Adam Brown and Joe Fisher.

New Haven won out at 16:16 of the final stanza when Orville Waldriff scored.

No games are to be played tonight, but there will be three Thursday when Pittsburgh will play host to Washington Lions, Cleveland Barons will meet the Bears in Hershey and Buffalo will cross sticks with Providence Reds in Rhode Island.

Rickey Drawing $80,000 a Year From Dodgers

Washington, D.C.—How much actually is $80,000 in salary — the amount Branch Rickey is reputed to be getting from the Brooklyn Dodgers each year under his new contract, running for five years and calling for $40,000 or $50,000 in straight pay and the balance in bonuses? And would Rickey have been better off had he accepted, say $25,000 or $30,000 from the St. Louis Browns, a stipend, which it is said he discussed with Donald L. Barnes, president of the club?

Government officials here are unable to answer the questions, because other factors enter into the situation. Though federal regulations now provide no individual may draw a net salary of more than $25,000 a year, such things as federal taxes, life insurance premiums, fixed obligations, charitable contributions and the like enter into the picture.

In the case of an $80,000 income, federal and state taxes would amount to $44,448 on an average calculation for a married man with no dependents, leaving a net income of $35,452, from which the Dodgers would be required to determine whether Rickey had more than $25,000 left, after legal deductions.

However, it is believed Rickey had all of that figured out and that the sum he expects to draw from the Brooklyn club keeps him within the $25,000 limit.

AT THE BELLE

"Ten Gentlemen from West Point"

"Ten Gentlemen from West Point," 20th Century-Fox's thrilling story of the United States Military Academy, was tailor-made for George Montgomery and experts predict it will put him on the Hollywood map as one of the biggest male stars in the picture business.

Foremost among these experts is William Perlberg, producer of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" now at the Belle Theatre, whose long years of experience in the motion picture industry should qualify him as a judge in matters thespian.

Montgomery has played the lead roles in more than a dozen films, but "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" in which he is co-starred with Maureen O'Hara and John Sutton, is the most important part he has had thus far. Moreover, Perlberg and Director Henry Hathaway planned the film to give full scope to Montgomery's varied talents.

The handsome ex-Montana cowboy was given his first starring role opposite Ginger Rogers in "Roxie Hart."

He gave such a grand performance in that film that Perlberg immediately signed him for "Ten Gentlemen from West Point."

"The Magnificent Dope," Funny

Henry Fonda can tell you that a dope, if you please, is one thing in your corner drug store and another as a character on the screen. Indeed, the difference is so marked that the more discerning Hollywood males today are passing up sophisticated parts for the chance to play a good substantial dope role.

There is ample justification for the trend. Although matinee idols, to be sure, still cause the female heart to palpitate, it appears that the country lad whose provincialism makes him easy prey for the screen's meanest heavies, garners all the sympathy. Moreover, when the cluck happens to be handsome as well as helpless, mere commiseration ripens into the warmest affection for him. And not only from the audience but from the girl in the film—which in itself is pretty important.

Henry Fonda was convinced of this after he appeared in "The Lady Eve" as a backward botanist who is taken for a sleigh ride by Barbara Stanwyck, (which isn't half bad) and practically everybody else in the picture. His fan mail doubled. Hence, the zeal with which he took the role in "The Magnificent Dope," 20th Century-Fox's clever comedy, the added feature attraction . . . Fonda is co-starred with Don Ameche and Lynn Bari.

Of course, there were other precedents, too. George Montgomery, for instance, won the male lead opposite Ginger Rogers in "Roxie Hart" on the strength of his portrayal of an uninitiated cowhand in the "Cowboy and the Blonde." Gary Cooper, already among the mighty, solidified and even broadened his vast following as the diffident "Mr. Deeds." Then there was James Stewart in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and so on. But to Fonda goes the credit for originating the roles.

At any rate, it's a pip of a part Henry Fonda has as "The Magnificent Dope" and he utilises every last laugh in it.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Moon and Sixpence"

Everybody's talking about what Charles Strickland thinks about women. If you're a man, you'll admire Strickland for speaking his mind—even if you don't agree with him! If you're a woman you'll want to find out how Strickland ever got such ideas. (He thinks he's right!)

Here's what Charles Strickland says in "The Moon and Sixpence" which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre: 'Women can do nothing except love—so they've given it a ridiculous importance. Women will do everything in the world for the man they love—except leave him alone. A woman will forgive a man for the harm he does her but never for the sacrifices he makes for her. When a woman loves you, she's not satisfied until she possesses your soul. Women try to imprison a man in the circle of the household budget. Women are strange little beasts—you can treat them like dogs, beat them till your arms ache and still they'll love you."

"The Moon and Sixpence" is the most talked-about picture ever made in Hollywood. Truly a picture every adult must see. During its showing at the McCarthy parents are advised that it is a non-suitable attraction for children and therefore will not be presented at the Saturday matinee. Instead for the children, Joe E. Brown in "Beware Spooks" will be the feature Saturday matinee only.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Lady Has Plans"

Loosen your stays and let out your seams, because the funniest spy-hunt thriller ever unreeled—Paramount's "The Lady Has Plans" —is coming next at the Capitol Theatre.

Co-starred in this mile-a-minute merry chase are Ray Milland and Paulette Goddard, assisted by Roland Young, Albert Dekker, Margaret Hayes and Cecil Kellaway.

The story is spiced with hilarious situations stemming from the fact that foreign agents in Lisbon mistake reporter Paulette Goddard for a spy who has drawn upon her back in invisible ink, plans stolen from the U. S. Navy. Everyone, including newscaster Ray Milland, finds Paulette's back irresistible.

Advance reports have it that "The Lady Has Plans" is film fun designed for every movie-goer's enjoyment.

"Hands Across the Rockies"

"Hands Across the Rockies," starring Bill Elliott, Columbia's popular outdoor action ace, opens next at the Capitol Theatre as the second hit with Mary Daily as the feminine lead and Dub "Cannonball" Taylor again supplying the comedy. Another in the spectacular series of Wild Bill Hickok adventures.

A funny cartoon and the third chapter of the serial "Perils of Nyoka" complete the bill.

Jimmy Orlando Awarded Trophy

Montreal, Nov. 25 —(CP)— Jimmy Orlando, Detroit Red Wing defenceman, was asked to fill out a National War Services questionnaire in a Montreal hotel Tuesday, a short time before Red Wings met Montreal Canadiens in a National Hockey League game.

The questionnaire contained questions concerning Orlando's age, the electoral division and district in which he registered his marital status and other details.

Such documents are filled out by those whose registration master cards have been mislaid, or whose status is otherwise in doubt.

Orlando was presented with the sport fan trophy last night after being voted the most popular player during the last N.H.L. season.

FOOTBALL FINAL HAS EARMARKS OF REAL GAME

Sward and Stukus Will Carry on Personal Duel on Playing Field

BEACHES HOPEFUL

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)—The Toronto Balmy Beach-R.C.A.F. Hurricanes sudden - death Ontario Rugby Football Union playoff at Varsity Stadium today shapes up not only as a personal duel between Sammy Sward of Beaches and AC2 Bill Stukus of Hurricanes but promises to be a contest between Alex Ponton, coach of Beaches and FO. Lew Hayman, mastermind of the Airmen.

Once the teams take the field, the respective performances of Sward and Stukus may decide whether Flyers or Beaches will advance into Saturday's Eastern Canada final here against the Ottawa City League Champions, R.C.A.F.

Meanwhile yesterday the two veteran coaches had their players out for signal practice in preparation for today's game.

Ponton, handicapped by late-season injuries that deprived Beaches of linemen Jack Young and Dave Ferris and fleet halfback Ed Jacubowski, is counting on Sward's kicking to counteract runbacks of the Flyer's speedy rearguard.

Bill Zock, burly plunging back, will be in action for the Beach team and Billy Bell, Malvern College half, is expected to see some action.

"We'll go along with what we have," Ponton said last night. "They'll know they've been in a ball game."

Hurricanes have lost WO. Mike Ozarko at middle wing, but FO. Hayman expects LAC. Bob Sarvis or AC2 Don Durno to fill the gap. Ozarko is the only regular the Airmen will be without.

But the Air Force team aren't suffering from over confidence. "We never take anything for granted," FO. Hayman said at signal practice last night. "We look for Beaches to be full of fire and we'll just have to play the best we know how."

CHAPTER 25

"Mrs. Wiley, can I find Wiley's pal, Ben Monk?" Cobb said. "And tell me what you know about the Mrs. Terrill and I'll prove my gratitude in the way you want it proved."

"Will you promise never to tell that I helped you in these things?"

"I'll promise to keep your help out of it, if they permit it, I can't help that."

"Well, Mrs. Terrill, at that time, lived on Barker street near Courtney Avenue, but I don't know as she's still there. And Ben Monk, you can find somewhere in Coulter's Alley, in a small place."

"All right, and if these matters as put out, you'll hear from me again."

Police Cobb found Coulter's Alley a more decent locality than he had expected. But Ben Monk was out of town, a neighbor told him, and wouldn't be back until the next day. As this was only the second day of Cobb's Chicago search, he was not discouraged, but went wilfully to corrall Mrs. Terrill.

He found her in her Baker st. home, she was still taking boarders, although, as she told him, it was many years since she had had Jenny Wiley among her guests. She denounced John Wiley. She had never known the first Mrs. Wiley, but the second was one — oh Lawks!

"As how?" Cobb asked.

"Oh, stuck-up, spiteful, snippy and disagreable generally."

"She came to see the little girl?"

"Only a few times. Jenny ran away to hide when she knew her stepmother was coming."

"What kind of Jenny?"

"It was like a fairy-tale. You see, John Wiley paid the child's board all right at first; then he was always behind with his payments and then he didn't pay at all. But by that time, Jenny was going to art school and she was making good. A lovely lady took a shine to her and helped her a lot. Then the lady, Mrs. Stanton her name was, died, and she left Jenny some money, not a fortune, but enough so Jenny could go to New York to study art. She thought it would be better than Chicago. She told me she was going to change her name because she wanted nothing of her father. I told her that was wrong, but she wouldn't listen to my broadcloths at all. Said she wouldn't tell me what name she meant to take. I've never heard a word from her. Sort of mean, I think, after all I did for her."

"What did you do for her?"

"I kept her living after her father didn't pay her board. I guess that's something!"

"Yes, it is. If you could help me find her in New York, it would be worth your while."

"Really? Well, it mightn't help much, but I could give you one steer."

"Better give it and if it amounts to anything, I'll see you get some reward for it."

"Well, it's the names of the art schools she went to here. Three of 'em she attended and I'll bet the teachers in some of 'em could tell you where Jenny decked up in New York."

"Good for you, Mrs. Terrill; let me have the addresses."

Cobb spent that afternoon, visiting schools, but as the after events he was interested in took place seven or eight years ago, it was difficult to trace them. Art students rarely fond of changing their teachers and few remembered the young art student who was a protege of Mr. Stanton. But it was a starter for the discovery of Jenny Wiley or at any rate, the potentials. Cobb thought so, and banked happily on his belief.

Next morning, he started again for Coulter's Alley and the redoubtable Ben Monk. Somehow the name was intimidating. But young Cobb was valiant, and he had a cheering notion that he was on the right track. But Ben Monk didn't think that at all.

"What are you up to, young feller?" he growled out of one corner of his nose-hung mouth. "You getthall outa here!"

"Ben," Cobb said, confidentially, "you tell me something I want to know and I'll make it worth your while."

But it seemed that no outside matters were worth the very while while while of Ben Monk.

"Whaaat!" he said, belligerently, "you a tryin' to compound a felleriny! You better stop it!"

"Not at all," Cobb almost laughed. "It's all in the interests of justice. I want to know a little something about John Wiley."

"Yer do, hey! And what's John Wiley ever done to you that you've got it in fer him?"

"I haven't got it in for him! Mr. Monk, I don't mean any harm to you or anybody."

Monk roared with laughter. "Yer don't mean any harm to me, eh, snippet! Well you're lucky that you don't. Now, what are you after? Oh, with it!"

"I want to know what name Wiley is in jail under, that's all."

Ben Monkey jaw dropped.

"Flat, Cully," he said, with a bit more courtesy to his tones, "now that little bird flew down out of the blue and told you that John Wiley was in jail by any name!"

"That's a secret between me and the little bird. Why are you so worked up over Wiley's being in jail? His's frequently there you know."

"Aw, take it friendly like young feller; I didn't mean no harm. Who are you, anyway?"

"Just a guardian of the peace. But I think you won't make me any more trouble. I must go now, but I'll be back with Wiley."

Monk stood and stared after this strange young man.

Back in his hotel room, Cobb called Stone and told him the whole story.

"All right, Cobb," the detective said, "You've done fine work. Now you go to headquarters, find the Chief and tell him the story. Ask him if he can't find Wiley. Then ask him not to do or say anything to Wiley after he discovers him, but to keep him in jail, until I can get there. If he seems doubtful or anything ask him to call me tonight at seven o'clock sharp. Keep an eye on your savage Monk. There are developments here and maybe I can't get away for a few days. So you see to it that Wiley is identified and held. On no account let him get loose."

V V V V V

Having found out who bought the diamond pin, Stone wanted to interview Van Dyke Haynes on the subject. Also, Jenny Wiley and Cleod had asked him to come to see her on a matter she wished to consult him about. Though pressed for time, Stone thought it might be worth his while to have a confab with the sharp-sighted Scotch woman and her friend, Jenny.

Foo Chow admitted him and when he asked for Miss Haynes the butler said: "Mr. McAllowed she'd call you here as you first."

"Very well," Stone answered, "and I am hurried. Bring him quick."

Hugh soon appeared, and was courteous though evidently perturbed.

"How d'do, Stone? Sit down, sit down. Give me a few minutes before you see Haynes. You'll find he'll be brief. You know what Emmy wants of you?"

Stone noticed that Hugh was in a nervous state.

"I am not sure I know what Miss McCleod wants," Stone said, "but I think it has to do with her financial affairs."

"Yes," Hugh looked annoyed, "yes, that is it. A fine thing, to be asking a great detective to look after a chicken-hearted penny bit of business. But you'll have to see her, Stone, since you've once agreed to do so. Now, please do this: tell her that I am not at home and you can't take up matters outside your own line of work."

"But I may be able to give her some good advice."

"You can say lawyer, so can any bank clerk. Why ask for your valuable time? But never mind, that; since you are going to see her, just step into her—let them go to you—not to have any dealings with Cyphon Haynes."

"I scarcely know Mr. Murray," Stone said, "but I will my wife has some worthless stocks or shares in a fake oil well. Now, he is trying to dispose of those same shares to my sister. I am asking you to discourage her from buying them, that's all."

"Why don't you want her to buy them?"

Mordred looked at him, almost resentfully. "Because it is simply throwing money away. I am a rich man, but that is no reason why any amount of my money should be thrown away. Mr. Murray, for no value received."

"That is true, Mr. McCleod. If your sister asks my advice, I shall certainly tell her not to conduct such business. She must consult you or her lawyer."

"That's all I ask of you, Mr. Stone. I will send Emmy to you here."

Emmy is your father, sir? Improving, I trust."

"Not in any sense; he is no better. Nor ever will be. My life is now a mess."

"I fear it is. Can you go away for a short trip, and regain your good health and mental serenity?"

"I wish I might, but I am tied here by my father and sister. Oh, that's another thing. My sister, now, thank Heaven, wants to give up their apartment and live here with me. I, my word against my sister, but to live with her would drive me distracted in no time at all! And my father's illness and necessary attendants and doctors and sick room atmosphere would be more than I could stand. My sister is tyrannical and dictatorial and I love her. But I cannot live with her. Won't you say something to her to make her see that the arrangement of our living in our separate flats can be brought about at present. I know I am asking a great deal of you, but it is a crisis, and my sister has much respect for your opinions and advice."

"I understand, Mr. McCleod. May I suggest also that you want and need a little diversion from your sad thoughts. A little change of scene, association with your men friends and a relief now and then, from the atmosphere of your saddened home?"

"Yes, that is right, but Emmy won't see it that way. Please give her a hint."

"I will, I assure you."

Sergeant Pilot Gordon Farquharson Arrives in Britain

Sergeant Pilot Gordon Farquharson, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Farquharson, Cordyville, is now in Britain recuperating from wounds received when shot down in the Mediterranean area on May 9th. Mails several weeks ago, it had been reported, were lost in Belleville instead of by his parents. It will be remembered that Farquharson was forced to bail out over the Mediterranean when his fighter plane was put out of action. He received a wound in the hand during the fight.

According to the message received at Cordyville, the local fighter pilot was transferred to Britain in the plane in which Pilot Officer Beurling was a passenger, and escaped further injury when the plane crashed at Gibraltar.

Prospects for Lively Civic Election Appear in Making

While to all outward appearances the city is maintaining its traditional calm preceding civic elections, there is a current of interest starting to move beneath the surface.

The man on the street knows, apparently only what he has seen in the newspaper, and on the street corners, but these sources of information have not been too prolific of what is actually happening, thus far.

With the exception of a few items of interest nothing appears to be very definite and Old Dame Rumor is having a busy day in places where men gather to discuss current events, their neighbors and the municipality.

The only definite ingredients for the civic election pudding that have come out of the mixing bowl are the announcements of Mayor Wilfrid Jackson, and Alderman Harry Hollins that they will be candidates in the forthcoming Stakes. The entry list however, will not close until 9 p.m. on Nomination Day, and one of the dark horses may face the starting barrier on the day of the race. This absence for the past few years.

THE WAR TODAY

By OSCAR LEIDING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Today is the sixth anniversary of the anti-comintern pact but the Russian armies of the Red Army in its winter offensive east a pall over any celebrating which the axis partners may have had in mind.

Two years ago today as the membership was broadened to 13 in a festive ceremony in Berlin, Japan, Italy, Communism without doubt had reached its high tide from which it never would recover.

Among the "gigantic events" was the fact the German army was literally hamstring at the gates of Moscow. Other "great" developments were reporting that their forces stood within 30 miles of the Caucasus oil fast. Winter and the Red arms turned the tide. Hitler thrust and the peril to Moscow was relieved, never again to assert itself in the year which has passed.

But a year ago this German press spoke gaily of "a determined continuance of the campaign in the east for the annihilation destruction of Bolshevism" and a real occasion was made of the anti-comintern pact anniversary.

Germany and Japan were the chief partners getting together Nov. 25, 1936, to bind themselves against the spread of Communism. Italy joined in Nov. 6, 1937, and Hungary in March, 1939. Then, in one fell swoop, as the success of German arms in the East stood at high tide, the membership was more than doubled on the fifth anniversary and the pact was renewed by Germany, Japan, Italy, Hungary, Bulgaria, Denmark, Finland, Rumania, Russian Slovakia and Japanese - dominated Nanking-China.

Numbers, however, have not lent strength to the partnership. The original signatories insisted the pact was not a military instrument and was not pointed at Britain, France, or distinguished from the Third International; it was "directed against Communism in the world at war."

Foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, for instance, said at last year's anniversary that Italy is only Bolshevism that must be fought but also its allies and sympathizers. Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, proclaimed that following the destruction of Russia, the Communism without doubt had received a blow from which it never would recover.

Selection of Toys This Season A Bigger Problem Than Before

Christmas will still be Christmas as far as a lot of people are concerned, but several will be in for a surprise when it comes to buying the Yuletide toys for the family circle this year.

To sum up the entire situation, according to a survey of local shops today, it will be a case, especially for the inevitable last minute shopper, of taking what is available, with little or no choice in the matter.

The little fellows will suffer the first brunt, rather than will their sisters. For instance, dolls are being planned for the future as soldiers and mechanical toys, dear to the hearts of the budding men of the country, will be conspicuous by their scarcity.

True, the little chaps will have to

Airplanes Used To Search For Wanted Man

A four-day search for 60-year-old John Semple, Brighton fisherman wanted for the murder of his 10-year-old granddaughter and the shooting with intent of his wife last Saturday night continued in the waters of Brighton Bay and on Presqu'Ile today without results. Little hope of finding the hunted man alive is being held out by investigating provincial police, however.

At the request of Inspector Frank Carpenter, of the O.P.P., Air Commodore Leonard Stevens, of the R.C.A.F. Air Station, dispatched planes over the waters of Brighton Bay this afternoon in hopes of locating the body of the fisherman from their aloft. In other similar cases where drownings were suspected the use of aeroplanes has proven successful in the locating of bodies. The search for Semple was reported as unchanged by hospital authorities at noon.

Further Slaughter Of Poland Jews Ordered by Nazis

London, Nov. 25—(CP)—The Polish government said today that Heinrich Himmler, Nazi Gestapo Chief, has ordered the extermination of one-half of the Jewish population of Poland by the end of this year and that 250,000 had been killed through September under that program.

"According to information leaking from the German Labor Office, only 40,000 Jews are to remain in the Warsaw Ghetto—only those roughly skilled workers to be employed in the German war industry," a government statement said.

"The most convincing proof of the dwindling numbers in the Ghetto lies in the fact that for September, 1942, 130,000 ration cards were printed; for October, the number issued was only 40,000.

The statement said that those marked for extermination at any time are "driven to a square where old people and cripples are segregated, taken to a cemetery and shot."

"The remainder," it said, "are loaded into freight cars, 120 to a car intended for 40. The floor of the car is sprinkled with a thick layer of lime-chloride-sprinkled water. The doors of the cars are sealed, and the train starts immediately. Other times it waits on a siding days.

"The people are packed so tightly those who die of suffocation remain in the crowd and lie side with those still living. Half of the people arrive dead at the destination. Those surviving are sent to special camps at Treblinka, Belzec and Bolchov. Once there they are mass-murdered."

Sales Limited to 75% Canned Fruits, Vegetables

Ottawa, Nov. 24. (CP)—Sales of canned fruits and vegetables by canners and distributors in Canada will be limited to 75 per cent of stocks in hand at Nov. 21, the Prices Board's Food Administration Order, 1942, ordered on Monday.

The remaining 25 per cent must be held to the order of the Food Administrator.

The new restriction of sales applies to any fruit or vegetable product or fruit or vegetable juice packed and preserved in containers of 16 ounces or more; to jam, jelly or marmalade in containers or two pounds of more, and to fruits for reconstitution, in quantities of 30 pounds or more. This year's pack subsequent to Nov. 1, also is covered by the restriction.

No Idle Men in the Navy, Captain to Cook Fights Guns

An East Coast Canadian Port—When a ship goes into action, every man in it, from captain to cook, has a fighting post.

The men on deck know the best of action, the thrill of serving their guns or depth charges. Below deck, though, there are fighting men who never see the enemy but whose part in the action is equally as important as that of their shipmates above.

R.M.C.S. Oakville's successful action with a German submarine, as experienced by the men of the engine room and boiler room, is described here by Leading Stoker Ernest Gosling, R.N.R., of Toronto.

"It started," Wilson said, "when the bridge rang through to the engine room for more speed. A few seconds later, Leading Stoker Weseur in the engine room passed the word to us that the bridge had rung for full speed.

"I increased the oil pressure and while I was doing it, I got another message to stand by for depth charges.'

Knowing then that Oakville must be attacked by submarine, Wilson went back to the pressure pump to nurse more heat out of the fire. Stokers felt the first of depth charges as they went off astern.

"Lead Gosling."

"Then," said Wilson, "a few minutes later, I was going back to the feed pump and I felt her list to port. She bumped and there was a good grating noise and a shiver. I heard the boys on the gun giving a hell of a demonstration and soon we could hear the others, the point eight and the other light stuff rattling off. We knew we'd brought something up.

"We felt a hit and another bump. Then we hit her a third time. We could feel the ship list and there was a ripping noise along the bottom. Everybody on their feet, but the next thing we knew, water was coming over the plates in Number 2 Boiler room.

"I yelled, 'shut off the steam!'"

Stoker White jumped to it. He shut off the fires, the fuel pump and the feed pump. By the time he was through, he was wading around with his hips in water and oil and it was coming through the door into the stoker's mess deck, as well, and we slammed the water-tight door shut. We were in the forward boiler room but we had lost communication with the engine room." Wilson shut off the steam supply from the forward boiler in the flooded compartment. The wild steam in the boiler that should have exploded from its sudden immersion was tamed. The stokers breathed easier.

Grade Finish

Wilson went to the upper deck. He saw the submarine alongside just after the boarding party had jumped aboard. His recollection of it is brief. "I saw the flash of a revolver on the U-boat's deck, but I had no part of that. I had been sent back to the engine room.

"After we got the water stopped and things were shored up," Wilson concluded, "we made steam again in the dry boiler and stood by for a signal from the bridge to get started."

Leading Stoker Wilson was commended for his work by his officers. His looks back on a long career at sea. He joined the Royal Navy in 1917 and has stayed with it until 1941. He settled in Toronto and for a brief spell in 1939 he was a member of the Royal Regiment of Canada. Then the Navy beguiled him return to the sea. He has been with H.M.C.S. Oakville since her commissioning.

British House In Secret Session

London, Nov. 26 (CP) — The House of Commons went into secret session Tues., presumably to debate Army training, after Brigadier E. Stokes, Labor, charged that Prime Minister Churchill suppressed a BBC broadcast. Gen. Charles De Gaulle was scheduled to make last Sunday.

Although Stokes asserted that Anthony Eden, Dominions Secretary and government leader in the House of Commons, had approved the broadcast, Churchill acted in advance. Eden replied that "there is no difference between the Prime Minister and myself, none at all."

Eden, pressed by a full reply to the allegation by Stokes who said "we are sincerely disturbed on this side of the House at the sudden appearance of the forces of reaction everywhere."

Observing that the alleged suppression looked "pretty squalid," Stokes declared that people everywhere were asking why Admiral Darlan had been accepted as high commissioner for North Africa.

The English Tribune, Vichy press newspaper "Marseillaise," printed a cartoon depicting Stokes as "traitor, traitor and spy," have been particularly disturbed over the understanding between him and the United States, Stokes said.

Vichy Says British Convoy Passes Gibraltar Westward

London, Nov. 24 (CPP)—Reuters News agency said the Vichy News Agency reported from La Linae, Salin that a big British convoy, including 36 merchant ships heavily escorted by war vessels had passed through the Strait of Gibraltar toward the west.

Many R.A.F. bomber and fighter planes were said to have protected the convoy.

Reuters said two United States destroyers also were reported to have reached the Gibraltar roadstead today, followed by battleships, two aircraft carriers and several other destroyers already lying there.

Tubeless Tires Put To Test in Montreal

Montreal, Nov. 24 (CP)—Alexis Nihon of suburban St. Laurent has been riding around on tubeless tires for two days on tubeless tires, and he says they are doing mighty well. What's more, he claims that the business of putting them on can be done even by any motorist, using ordinary equipment in 25 minutes.

Nihon is a rubber research chemist.

The tire is taken from the rim, and the inner liner removed. Both rim and tire must be free from cuts or abrasions, which can be mended with ordinary puncture patches.

A truck valve replaces the standard car valve, and the tubeless tire is inflated, and puncture patches are placed above and below the valve core to make it completely air-tight. The tire must be deflated in an ungodly condition—with the valve directly downward, and the whole tire and rim immersed in water to make sure that no leak is undetected and then the tire is pumped back on the wheel. A sealing fluid, liquid cement or rubber, is forced into the tire under air pressure through the valve, while the wheel is slowly revolving so that it covers the inside of the casing and finishes off the sealing job. This last step is the only one that might have to be done by a garage, says Mr. Nihon.

Axis Salient At Stalingrad Is Tottering

By KIRK L. SIMPSON

With the Axis salient of Stalingrad tottering because of Red Army "penetrations" from the north, Hitler's boasted intuitive generalship seems to be its most crucial test of the war.

Counter measures are in progress, the Command bulletin said in acknowledging the penetrations. They certainly block the evacuation of the German public for wide and deep retreat in Russia. It remains to be seen however, whether Hitler's headlong order may already have been delayed too long again this year.

Not one time last winter was Nazi peril in Russia as great as is now indicated in Moscow even by the further pressure from both jaws of the pincers that are closing in on the Stalingrad sallient. Estimates of Axis forces within the pincers pocket on the Don and the Lower Volga corridor range from 250,000 to 500,000 men.

Dangerous Bottleneck

Russian occupation of towns reclaim picture both the north and south prongs widening as they move toward Kalach. There remains an escape corridor westward, but ammunition, fuel and supplies not more than thirty miles wide.

Assuming that Hitler has ordered evacuation to establish a winter front on the Don, fighting may be raging at Stalingrad, that would be a dangerously narrow bottleneck for withdrawal of an army. Another step forward by the Russians could fully command the retreat route.

Another bear that only a massing of Nazi air power and the reversal of the westward march of Russian troops by the Anglo-American coup in Africa could insure against an Axis disaster in Russia.

And with every sign pointing to the air crisis in the Central Mediterranean, Hitler hardly dare bring back to Russia air forces he has been marshalling in the Sicily and Sardinia, even in Southern France.

Winter caught him napping in Russia last year. He has boasted that it would not happen again. Yet it is happening, and the full scope of the possible Nazi disaster in Russia, in North Africa, and perhaps in Italy, cannot be even guessed.

Highest British authority has repeatedly proclaimed that U-boats, not the Luftwaffe or Red armies, are the most dangerous weapons in Hitler's arsenal.

Even a transfer of enlistment of Admiral Darlan in the Allied cause, however, the war picture in the Atlantic is potentially changed strongly in favor of the Allies.

Dakar, the great French naval base in West Africa, has ceased to be a threat as an attack bridge-head. Darlan has aligned it and all French Africa with the Allied cause. What that can mean is shortened communications across the West Atlantic. Even Hemisphere is yet to be disclosed. What effect the submarine menace also is not wholly clear yet.

That Dakar is closed to the Axis for any purpose and opened to Allied use for the anti-submarine campaign goes without saying.

ANOTHER JOB FOR CRIPPS

London, Nov. 24 (CP)—Sir Stafford Cripps, who left the War Cabinet to become Minister of Aircraft Production, has still another new job yesterday, that of second in command of the anti-submarine strategy board which is undertaking "special new measures" to protect shipping.

Along with his new ministerial post Sir Stafford became Vice Chairman of the committee on Anti-Submarine Warfare, which with Prime Minister Churchill is chairman. He also is head of a new committee which is exploring use of radio in the anti-U-boat war.

Coal is Precious, Do Not Waste It

Passing on to the public a request received from the Coal Administrator, Mrs. Ferguson, Chief of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board asks householders this winter to use every pound of coal with care and to stretch each ton to the limit. "Coal is precious," it says, "and we must not waste it. Efficient and thoughtful operation of domestic heating apparatus is the essential thing to do during the winter season if sufficient coal is to be available for consumption and if transportation facilities are to be kept free for the movement of vital goods and supplies.

"Make Your Furnace Fight," is the timely title of a booklet which has been prepared by the Coal Administrator for distribution. Available at offices of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, it furnishes much information concerning furnaces and gives many hints regarding their efficient and economical operation.

Liberal Members Gather in Toronto

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)—Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature are getting together on the eve of the caucus today at Queen's Park to discuss the recent resignation of Mitchell Hepburn as Premier and his succession by Gordon Conant. Reports are that the agreements have been delayed and will not be ready for consideration until January.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for the health of it, there's not much to look at your clothes, there's not much to look at nothing. I got you that nice desk last Christmas because pop told me to keep a eye on the odds and ends in the draws instead of carting everything around and moving van. I've got a reputation for mislaying. I don't mind people pointing me out as she man with the bulging son, he said.

Well good pop, I mean G wiseacre, it's never been my fault that my pockets that I dont need, I said, and pop said, If it's really a necessity I'm willing I'll come to say, but in these streamline days utility goes hand in hand with beauty and I'm there's anything beautiful about bulging pockets, I'm afraid I'm not poet enough to appriciate it.

Well just a same, pop, I bet you got a bottle of beer in my pockets that I dont need, I said, and pop said, I'll accept your challenge. How do you need the picture of the president of Liberia? he said.

Aw G, pop, I haven't got that, I said, and he said, That's strange, I could have sworn, so as though they contained practically everything. I said, and I said, because I thought of the only thing that's not in them, that's beer. Why do you want bottle of eye lotion? he said.

Aw pop, I said, I haven't got that either, I said, and pop said, I cant believe it, this is becoming a mystery, I'll have to have a bottle of eye lotion. Have you looked to see? he said.

I know without looking, but I've got a little fancy bottle that used to have perfume in it, I said, and pop said, Then why the blazes do you need that, I said I said, because G, how do I know when it'll find a little fancy cork that might just fit it?

The result being pop resigned from the debate.

NAZIS TRY DESPERATELY TO HALT RED ADVANCE

Use All Available Air Force; Tanks Buried for Forts

German Casualties Mount Toward 250,000-Mark With 48,000 Dead

BATTLE OF MANOEUVRE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The German high command said today the Russian offensive had spread on a broad front west and northwest of Moscow, as well as on two sides of Stalingrad in the south, and admitted for the first time that the Russians were fighting less than 135 miles from the Latvian border.

Its broadcast communique said the Red Army had driven pockets in the line at places northwest of Moscow and was attacking at one place "west of Toropets," which is 135 miles from Latvia. The gains were wiped out by counter-attack, it was claimed.

"In the region south of Kalinin and in the sector southeast and west of Stalingrad, we continued on an expected attack November 22 on a broad front," the communique said.

"In fighting which was severe at some places all attacks were repulsed yesterday with serious and bloody losses to the enemy. Local pockets which the enemy was able to penetrate were immediately wiped out by counter-attacks and 18 soviet tanks were destroyed."

Stalingrad Reported

The wording of the communique suggested that it was in the sector northwest of Moscow, not at Stalingrad, that the German high command had expected the Russian winter offensive.

The fighting, as described by the Germans, could add up to a total of 300-mile front.

South of Kalinin the Russians evidently were attacking the salient about Vyazma and Rzhev, 130 and 135 miles west-northwest of Moscow, respectively.

There the Russian salient curves to the north around Rzhev and westward and southward to 135 miles west of Moscow. Toropets, a few miles northeast of Velikie Luki, apparently is being attacked from more than one side.

TWO TROOP-LADEN JAP DESTROYERS SUNK NEAR BUNA

Allies Wreck Third Attempt to Reinforce Battered Buna-Gona Lines

DESTROYER DAMAGED

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Nov. 26—(AP)— Allied bombers sank two troop-laden Japanese destroyers and damaged a third probably today in last attempt to wreck the third convoy attempt within a week to reinforce the battered Buna-Gona beachhead against Australian and American attacks, it was announced today.

The official list of Japanese warcraft sacrificed since last Thursday night in efforts to relieve Japanese forces on their narrowing coastal strip totalled 11.

One cruiser, four destroyers and two landing boats sunk.

One destroyer blasted heavily and probably sunk.

One destroyer damaged.

Beaten back mile by mile, Japanese ground forces put up a bitter fight from a jungle front approximately 30 miles long and "from one half to three miles deep.

"Heavy fighting continues in low, tropical jungle, interspersed with swamp and tidal creek, rendering movement and manoeuvre slow and difficult," the communique said. "We are now encountering carefully prepared positions, strongly fortified with bamboo pill-boxes and all the defensive attributes of jungle warfare."

Zero fighters appeared again to aid the Japanese troops and serial support after an absence of several days. Some fifteen Zeroes were in constant action.

Immediate Formulation Of Peace Aims After War Urged by Willkie

Toronto, Nov. 26. (CP)—Wendell L. Willkie calls upon the United peoples of the United Nations to formulate their war and peace aims now.

"The people must define their purposes during the war," Willkie told a cheering crowd of 11,000 at a Canadian-Aid-to-Russia-Fund meeting at Maple Leaf Gardens last night, adding that he lives in "constant dread" that they may end before "the peoples of the world have come to a common understanding of what they think they are fighting for and what they hope for after the war is over."

The 1940 Republican Presidential nominee recalled that as a soldier in the First Great War he saw "our bright dreams disappear" after the war, as the stirring slogans become the jests of the cynical, and all unity was lost. "Unless peoples did not arrive at any common post-war purpose while they fought"... Unless the United Nations find the basis of co-operative effort after the war, he declared, "we, the people, have failed our generation."

Willkie was introduced by Finance Minister Ilsley, who was presided tribute to Canadians for their response to the Third Victory Loan Campaign. Other speakers included C. F. Wilgress, Deputy Trade Minister to Russia; Feodor Gusev, Russian Minister to Canada, and J. S. McLean, President of Canada Packers, Ltd.

Briefly Cheered

Willkie, who returned five weeks ago from a visit to world battle-fronts as President Roosevelt's unofficial emissary, was briefly greeted as the Chairman of the Speakers' platform with Royal Canadian Mounted Police escort, at times during his address and when, after his speech, he leaped atop a small table on the platform and waved to the crowd.

He coupled his appeal for post-war thinking now with a plea for unity at home. "Let us avoid a winter in which food "will be scarce, clothes worse than scarce and fuel "will be little known . . . in Russian homes."

"We can help by sending food this winter to fill shrinking stomachs," he said. "We can help by sending medical supplies to ease pain and suffering. We can help by sending clothes to cover shivering bodies."

Quotes Messages

After quoting messages on the post-war world from Premier Kal-Shek and Premier Stalin, Willkie warned against "a recurrence of "dollar and pragmatic diplomacy", and against the use of "the greatmoral force of our country not for the liberation of mankind but for the re-establishment of the old international order —the spawning ground of wars. We must be important, it remains for us to convince those people to whom we are sending munitions and equipment that we really believe what we have said, that we are developing truth in our own declaration of independence: that all men are created equal".

LITTLE OUTLINES DIFFERENCES WITH LABOR MINISTER

Tells of Proposals He Made to Offset Inaction in Selective Service

SUPPORT LACKING

Montreal, Nov. 26 (CP)—Elliott M. Little, who recently resigned as Director of National Selective Service, issued a seven-page statement here today in which he outlined his differences with Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell and told of steps he had made aimed at offsetting "the paralysis which has gripped Selective Service."

His statement, he said, was being issued in order "that any misunderstanding and misinterpretation" of the events leading to his resignation.

"It will thus be seen that a continuous effort was made in drafting those regulations to conform to the traditional pattern of responsible government; that the structure proposed for National Selective Service was that of a department of government under the Minister of Labor; and that all the powers proposed to be given to the director were to be exercised under the Minister of Labor."

On accepting Mr. Little's resignation Nov. 18, Mr. Mitchell said that Mr. Little's proposals had formed a step in Britain Mr. Little had presented him with a 70-page memorandum of Selective Service. He said at a press conference that one of Mr. Little's proposals was to give Mr. Little a "blank cheque" and "to hell with Parliament and take the powers of a czar to me."

Progressive Development

In the statement today Mr. Little said the paralysis which has overtaken Selective Service is, of course, a progressive development over which neither he nor the Minister was aware or outstanding difficulties before he left for England. During his absence, I prepared proposals which I had hoped would serve as a basis for consultation and solution on his return.

"It is unfortunate that when I pressed for serious consideration of these proposals, on my return that I obviously could not expect that support from him which is necessary if this or any other plan of National Selective service is to function properly. I am, therefore, unable to submit my immediate resignation."

Mr. Little said he did not want to enter into a prolonged controversy but believed it was in the public interest to make it in some detail an account of some of the circumstances leading to my prospect, made my resignation inevitable."

SWISS ATTACKES RENEWED

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 26—(AP)—The Nazi press renewed its attacks on Switzerland today as the Voelkischer Beobachter, Hitler's official newspaper, called the Swiss a springboard of Jewish agitation."

At the same time, Nazi occupation authorities in France prohibited public places to tune in on Swiss broadcasts. For the first time being at least, the broadcasts are permitted in private homes.

Axis-Held French Base at Bizerte Heavily Pounded

Fourteen German And Italian Planes Shot Down and Four Damaged

MANY FIRES STARTED

London, Nov. 26—(CP) — Allied aerial assaults of mounting violence attended a Morocco report that the grand offensive against Tunisian strongholds of the Axis was imminent today.

Allied fighter planes were officially credited with destruction of 14 German and Italian planes and a tank in forays Tuesday, four were damaged by enemy guns and one tank was wounded, but all returned safely.

Royal Air Force bombers concentrated their attacks on the second day night against Bizerte, starting conflagrations and flames visible in all directions, docks and shipping of that Axis-held French naval base, an Allied communique announced.

The Allied report declared that for the first time British reinforcements had been brought up to the Tunisian front by air.

It said they were technical troops flown from Algiers to a height which was considered a key position.

Nazis File Up Reinforcements

Amid these preliminaries of the battle for control of Tunisia and the Mediterranean narrows, a Moscow broadcast heard in London said Nazi staff the Germans are "piling up fighters and bombers in great numbers" in the Bizerte-Tunis area. Tanks and motorized units also are being poured in, the Vichy radio reported.

Vichy radio asserted Axis reinforcements included armored divisions which are being used to link up the various strongholds established all over Tunisia.

Admiral Jean Darlan, civil administrator in French North Africa under an arrangement with Lt.-Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower which President Roosevelt termed a temporary expedient, was reported to have had a meeting in addition to London and Washington.

A Madrid dispatch to the Daily Mail said he wished to assign high-ranking staff officers to confer with the British government on the situation in North Africa, give full information on the French attitude, explain his plans and seek assurance that they would be acceptable for the French army and civilians there and secure advantage for French colonial products.

Greatest Air Defeat Of All Time Given Nazis in Libya

Cairo, Nov. 26 (AP) — Air Vice Marshal Arthur Coningham, R.A.F. commander in the western desert, said today that the rout of the German air force in the Allied victory in Libya is "the most complete defeat of an air force in the field that there has been."

Gains of airfields in Libya, he said, have given the British command full control of the sea route from eastern Mediterranean ports to Malta.

Italy's desert air force is almost wiped out, he said, and Germany's is badly crushed but still has reserve strength enough to form a threat, which he said he doesn't, though to do so would require diversion of planes from other fronts.

Five-bombing in the desert virtually has disappeared, he said, because Stukas are no vulnerable fighters.

Discussing the reasons for the German air debacle, Coningham told correspondents, "if they have overwhelming force, little opposition, and can go ahead like a steamroller, they are efficient. Under any other conditions they aren't."

He related that the R.A.F. is using a captured German tracking station in order to give Allied and other dalicates to the forces in the desert.

It is called "the Heinkel beerbus."

FRANCO CALLS UP 1938-41 CLASSES

Order Will Give Spain Active Army of 750,000 Men

Madrid, Nov. 26 — (AP) — All members of the 1938, 1939, 1940 and 1941 classes in all military districts were called to the colors today by Generalissimo Francisco Franco's recently-ordered partial mobilization.

The order, issued by the Spanish National Radio, will give Spain an active army of about 750,000 men, according to informed estimates.

Conscripts of these four classes from what was the republican zone during the civil War have been in service ever since the war ended in 1939, so the order affects only members of the Nationalist zone.

The order made no mention of the two civil war zones. This was the first time since the civil war that such mention had been omitted from a military order, indicating that Franco has welded the two into a union of all Spaniards in the effort to keep the country out of war.

Franco declared last summer that he would increase his army to crease her army to 3,000,000.)

Nazi Leaders Are Worried Over German Morale

New York, Nov. 26 (AP) — A revealing article by German Propaganda Minister Dr. Josef Goebbels broadcast by the Berlin radio last night indicates that the German people are being swayed by Allied propaganda and are concerned over Russia's reverses.

Furthermore, throughout the article is the strong suggestion that the Nazi leaders are gravely worried about German morale.

In one of the frankest articles Goebbels has yet written in the weekly publication Das Reich, the propaganda minister told the Germans that they must try to surpass the enemy not only in gaining victories "but also in the art of mastering reverses".

"Obstacles are only road to victory" only heighten our spirit of attack and accelerate reverses and courage us to fresh achievements," he said.

U.S. Soldiers Fill Westminster Abbey For Solemn Thanksgiving Service

London, Nov. 26—(CP)—United States soldiers, sailors and airmen filled ancient Westminster Abbey to overflowing today for a Solemn Thanksgiving service.

The grey old walls looked down on a congregation of the most unfamiliar history, for it was the first time in 900 years that the Abbey had been filled with non-islanders.

Within those battered walls was a blend of mellow antiquity and the grimness of modern war, for the pews were filled with gas masks and sandbags protecting the aisles.

Outside, traffic was blocked before and after the service as the crowds gathered in order to watch the unprecedented event and see the uniformed congregation, one of the largest in the abbey in 20 years.

The organist and the choristers were soldiers.

Seated in the one section were soldiers representing all 48 states and the territories, and the Red Cross and Cross workers and army workers.

United States Ambassador John G. Winant, U.S. Minister to the Netherlands, Alexander Loudon Speaste, Air Commander of the U. S. Eighth Bomber Command, Major-Gen. Russell P. Hartle, Field Commander of the A. E. F. in Britain, were in the congregation along with a sprinkling of British home guard army officers and other members of the Women's Auxiliary Service.

The stars and stripes were borne through the church and placed before the altar as the service began.

Vibrant read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation. He expressed gratitude for the Allies' recent victories in North Africa and the Pacific and said that Americans are sorry for needs and our Allies is the spirit of victory because we count ourselves among those who know the mercy and justice and believe that one day these things shall prevail."

Tension Mounts In Windsor Strike

Union Asking Enforcement of Principle of Equal Pay for Equal Work

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 26.—(CP)—Tension mounted in the strike at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant here today as no reply was received from Premier Mitchell Hepburn to the request of War Labor Board proposals for settlement of the dispute involving 12,000 men and has tied up production since Tuesday.

Picketing was strengthened by members of the Union—United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.)—and office workers were special arrangements made to allow those badges before passing through the picket lines. Business in the company's main office were also being challenged.

A newspaper (Windsor Star) photographer said he was ordered off the property of the plant under the threat of having his car overturned and his camera smashed.

The decision awaited from the company is whether it will agree to the demands of 750 girl women in the plant on the same seniority basis as male production workers and to adopt the principle of equal pay for equal work, under which women workers would receive a basic starting wage of 75 cents an hour.

Will Enforce Principle

J. C. Watchorn, regional officer of the Ontario Regional War Labor Board, said today the War Labor Board would enforce the principle of equal pay for equal work.

Leonard Roy England of the Ford local last night announced the Ford Motor Company of Canada Regional War Labor Board will enforce the principle of equal work.

The strike started at eight o'clock Tuesday morning when 1,000 workers left their jobs. The union demanded that said 97 women were doing work there at wages rates just as high as men doing the similar work.

Wallace R. Campbell, president of the company, yesterday said in a statement that a request of the company had been hired for junior clerical work and ... are paid ... rates approved by the Ontario Regional War Labor Board which are equal to salaries paid for this type of work elsewhere in the company's office."

12 Municipalities In County to Hold Nominations Friday

Approximately twelve Hastings County municipalities will hold nominations tomorrow (Friday) night, with acclamations predicted in the majority, but contests appeared assured in the municipalities during the first week of December. Where no nomination receives here today, some municipalities will hold nominations on Monday and will see some spirited action at the official nominations.

Among the municipalities which will nominate their governing bodies tomorrow night are Thurlow Township, Sherin, Tweed Village, Madoc Village, Madoc Township, Marmora Village, Marmora Township, Deseronto, Tyendinaga Township, Tweed Township, Bancroft Village and the town of Trenton.

Unless we are forced to conclude we can only put our people to work when they are killed or wounded or when they are killed off in the battle fields?" asked Mr. Nosewortb. This alone would be the result of the stark realities of the war. In the future there can be a larger proportion of public works, both municipal and national, to provide for full-time employment to the masses at wages equivalent to the present scale.

Briefly he would place upon maintaining the purchasing power of the community. It would be claimed. Reduction of wages would be the first step in the downgrade route into another depression.

Urges Co-operative Planning

In speaking of parity prices for agriculture, Mr. Nosewortb stated there had been no attempt by governmental attempt to establish a definite relation between the cost of production of agricultural products and the prices selling price. One possible solution in obtaining parity prices for agricultural products was through the adoption of co-operative principles by farmers "in the community." He paralleled the co-operative principle with the "group" system. The social security problem "he speaker stated, it is now time that the people as a whole, which controls and directs the lives of young people during their school days, should establish a program for their security thereafter.

He claimed, there should be immediately put into effect a system of financial aid for the unemployed, adequate pensions and adequate pension program to give security to old age.

Cites N.Z. as Example

"Friendly aid was paid in the program of social security adopted in New Zealand, which was claimed to be "the best in the world". Socialized medicine had made great strides in that country, and New Zealand in raising health standards of the people.

"Doctors in New Zealand are paid on the basis of the number of people in Canada their livelihood depends upon the number of patients they look after," stated the speaker. He drew a ripple of laughter from the audience when he stated doctors in New Zealand are not paid by the number of "sick" visits. "But," he said, "I would like to see the day when doctors in Canada are paid by the number of school teachers are in Canada."

Speaking of post-war educational opportunities for all children, which he claimed to be the fourth essential of a full employment policy, Mr. Nosewortb claimed the new order, Mr. Nosewortb claimed the right to a university and other seats of higher education were open to all high school graduates who were financially able to keep their children there the required length of time.

A fair different picture would be presented, he claimed, if controlled by those students whose intelligence entitled them to a university or higher education. Although education is supposed to be free, he claimed, in high school many students are forced by circumstances to drop out before graduation and accept jobs, it was claimed.

Economic welfare and human needs must be the first essential of the post-war world, Mr. Nosewortb declared.

Speaks on Growth of Co-operation

Mr. Lyle Wilson, provincial secretary of the C.C.F. Party, Toronto, was the last speaker of the evening. He spoke on the growth of co-operative movements. Reference was made to the late Rochdale pioneers, founder of the co-operative movement. He claimed C.C.F. Party, who has made co-operation the basis of its platform, is the greatest statesman Canada ... ever produced.

Principles of the C.C.F. Party were outlined by Mr. Wilson as being purely democratic, and wide and generous in scope. The principles of co-operation were entirely from its members and were not supplied by any outsiders.

Guest speaker of the evening, Mr. Nosewortb was introduced by Mrs. Douglas Bews, while Mr. Reeves was introduced by Mr. George Elliott of the Local Carpenters' Union No. 572. Mr. C. A. Bews acted as chairman for the evening.

Municipal Nominations To Be Held on Friday

Potential city fathers for the coming year will be nominated at the official nominations to be held in the City Hall, Friday, November 27, between the hours of 10 noon and 11 a.m. and school trustees and Public Utilities commissioners between 12 noon and 1 p.m.

The short interval in which nominations will be devoted to the mayoralty candidates will be given the opportunity to air their views and present their platforms. All must be sworn in at the office in the City Council Chamber.

As far as is known, candidates for the mayoralty include Mayor Glenn E. Thompson and Alderman Norman Rollins, while Mr. G. M. James will contest the office unsuccessfully for the Public Utilities with Commissioner Morley Duff.

Those who received approximately 19 candidates for the aldermanic jobs but the figure may be reduced or increased by the time nominations close.

According to the stagger system in vogue at the Board of Education elections, five trustees will be elected at the forthcoming election. The remaining four will remain in office for another year. The five elected this year will remain in office for a two-year term.

The "Grapevine" has been exceptionally quiet regarding the Board of Education elections and nothing definite has been announced as to new candidates for office as yet. Friday will tell the tale.

Noseworthy Outlines Requirements For C. C. F. Post-War Program

Full-time employment for the people, with reasonable wages for the necessities of life, a national co-operative program guaranteeing the welfare of the common people, and equal educational opportunities for all children regardless of parents' financial status, were the objects towards the establishment of true democracy following the war.

So stated J. W. Noseworthy, Ontario C.C.F. Party co-ordinator, and federal member for South York in the House of Commons, speaking at a meeting of his party held in the Belleville Collegiate auditorium on Wednesday evening.

Canada's first C.C.F. member to be elected to the House of Commons declared that he did not entirely agree with the views of people who think Canada's first consideration should be toward settling the war debt and then after the establishment of a new order.

Canada is primarily interested in two phases of the war," he stated, "the first is the actual business of winning the war, and second, they are concerned with post war problems."

Peace-time Employment

"It is not the common sense to consider the peace-time employment of 750,000 men and women in the armed forces, and the transition of 1,000,000 war workers into peace-time occupations."

Mr. Noseworthy claimed that the employment of thousands members of the armed forces to civilian occupations after the war would lead to depression. The C.C.F. leader claimed Canada can give. He paid tribute to the Co-operative commonwealth Federation and its co-operative enterprises in pre-war Denmark which had resulted in complete freedom from unemployment and seasonal unemployment.

He paid tribute to the Co-operative commonwealth Federation and its co-operative enterprises in pre-war Denmark which had resulted in complete freedom from unemployment and seasonal unemployment.

Mr. Noseworthy claimed that the industrial production based on profits was screwed to the highest pitch possible, the primary purpose of industry had been lost. "Production on the basis of human needs rather than profits is essential," he stated.

Unemployment Bad for Morale

One of the worst features in the present unemployment crisis, Mr. Noseworthy claimed, was the blasted hopes and the feeling of "frustration" which was created" suffered by thousands of young men and young women who were unable to find jobs.

Briefly he outlined the C.C.F. party platform of parity prices for agriculture, Mr. Noseworthy stated that there had been no attempt by governmental attempt to establish a definite relation between the cost of production of agricultural products and the prices selling price. Hospital Auxiliary Decides To Purchase Laundry Press

Mrs. H. Wray Gives Report of Recent Toronto Meeting

An interesting meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary was held at the home of the President, Mrs. G. H. Stobie, on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 24th, when Mrs. H. Wray, the delegate to the recent Provincial Conference in Toronto of Hospital Aids, gave her report of the conference.

At this conference Mrs. Wray stated that the Hospital Auxiliary of the Belleville Auxiliary, which had raised the sum of $1,600.00 had been through five money making projects, a chain tea, a rummage sale, a garden bridge, fashion show and tag day. Of this sum five hundred dollars was paid for re-decorating rooms in the east wing and for other recreation rooms.

A Varnite finishing press was purchased for the laundry and a sum of one hundred dollars was spent on social welfare providing such small comforts as needy patients as fruit, cigarettes, slippers. This service is highly appreciated by the patients also includes a Christmas gift to each patient. A small gift is also given the graduating class. Ten dollars was donated to the Cigarette Fund for Belleville boys overseas.

Aids Must Not be Curtailed

Mrs. Wray in reporting the sessions of the conference said that the delegates were impressed in the minds of each speaker, who addressed the gathering. She was that the Hospital Aids must not be curtailed by wartime demands. The service of each organization is needed more than ever and opportunities for service are increasing. Because of increased hospitalization, shortage of help and the need for the voluntary assistance for the care of civilian sick must not be neglected.

During the business of the meeting yesterday it was decided to buy a steam laundry press for the hospital. Plans were made for the annual Christmas dance, which will be held in the early December 30th.

Miss Thompson, convener of the welfare committee, gave her report of the past month. Warm clothing was purchased for one youngster in the hospital so that it could get discharged in the fresh air. Needy days; slippers were bought for a boy, cigarettes, candy materials, tooth powder, tooth brush and paste were given some of the items needed by patients on Monday by the welfare service. Transportation was also arranged for one patient who was staying longer in the hospital because she had no means of getting home.

SEA SURVIVORS REACH SEAPORT

More Than 100 Men Snatched From Atlantic After Ships Smashed

An East Coast Canadian Port, Nov. 26 (CP)—Snatched from the Atlantic after their ships had been smashed by Axis torpedoes, more than 100 survivors of vessels representing four United Nations are now safe in this port, ready to put to sea again, more than one time.

Included in the group were veterans of the running of the U-boat gauntlet, as well as many learning for the first time the perils of underseas war. Also included a number of phlegmatic Chinese.

Fifteen of the survivors said they had tried Lady Luck's good nature when they packed into a single Atlantic crossing.

They would tell little of what they had gone through, but did say they had "luckily" come out with "15—the first time they were torpedoed and taken to an Atlantic port.

They said there only a few hours before going aboard another ship, only to have that vessel broken up by a torpedo as well.

But the 15 that survived the first sinking came through the second one too, and, one of the group said, "We're coming through more before this is over."

War Between U. S. And Japan "Inevitable"

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Saburo Kurusu, former peace envoy to Washington, said in a Tokyo speech today that war between the United States and Japan was "an historical inevitability."

For support of this thesis, Kurusu cited arguments of the type that State Secretary Cordell Hull called, on the day of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, the damndest bunch of lies he'd ever heard.

The broadcast was recorded by Federal Communications Commission monitors.

Widely publicized in advance by Tokyo propagandists, Kurusu's address was on "the circumstances concerning the (Washington) negotiations" with Japan.

Kurusu helped Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura in the parleys which gave Japan time to gird for all-out war in the Pacific; presently left him the final note that Sunday afternoon which declared—even in diplomatese—that the Japanese government "is unable to accept" the American proposals.

Kurusu asserted today that was inevitable because the United States said Britain refused to acknowledge the general trend of Japanese ambitions in East Asia, a trend which he called "the reaction of the East Asiatic people".

The United States came to support imperialistic designs with high sounding idealism," he said.

He protested enactment of the anti-Japanese land law by California and similar acts and movements which resulted in the adoption of the Japanese Exclusion Act.

Japan's faithful observance for a long period of the spirit of the Washington Conference was proof of Japanese weakness," he said.

WHERE RUSSIANS STRIKE BACK

As this Central Press Canadian map shows, the Russian counter-offensive at the mouth of Stalingrad has turned the German offensive (from ARROWS) from east to west — a welcome change to the Allies. The Red army has now forced breaches in the German lines above and west of Kletskaya, a village at Kalach, which they now occupy, and south of Stalingrad at Kazachenarskii.

Britain Needs More "Hankies" Experts Plead

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 26 (CP)—One of mankind's fundamental illnesses, the common cold—is one of the most important among a variety of pressing problems faced by the British Health Ministry.

The ministry also is worried about the increase in social diseases and shortages of nursing attendants for day nurseries, but because the vast of colds sweeping Britain has had an immediate reflection in increased absenteeism in war industries it is considered highly important at the moment.

A rough estimate of the number of colds in Britain says that nine people of every 10 have been affected during the last few weeks. The Ministry requested the Board of Trade to take handkerchiefs "off the ration," or supply special paper handkerchiefs, to help curb this by not the shortage of materials forced refusal of the request.

Sir Wilson James, the Ministry's chief medical officer, says the increase in colds is due to the lack of sunshine in most clothing during last summer, a wet weather spell at a time when central heating was banned because of the fuel shortage and, a natural health decline because of the strain of three war years.

Sir James called it a "curse" to "cough or sneeze in public without using a handkerchief," and said an anti-sneeze campaign will be launched soon to arouse that thoughtlessness in this regard. Measles, colds, influenza, whooping cough, bronchitis, tuberculosis and cerebro-spinal fever.

Nursery Needs

The shortage of nursery attendants was met partially with the training of 14 1-2 year old girls. Day nurseries, which are being established rapidly in Canada as more and more married women enter war industries, have been essential here for years because of the far higher ratio of women industrially employed.

The young girls receive 28 pounds ($332) annually for work in the more than 1,000 day nurseries throughout the country. Registered nurses and many more of these teen-aged girls will be required to staff the additional 500 nurseries which will be established during the next few months.

Health Ministry officials say the girls enjoy their work and have a child's outlook which makes them well qualified for most aspects of it. When they reach the age of 17 they will be able to qualify for nursing certificates which will raise their pay scale to a rate of about 160 pounds ($625) annually.

Will Replace Gasoline Burners At Army Camp

This may be a mechanized war but the fear of gas and tire shortages have decided army authorities to experiment with horse drawn vehicles for general duty around the camps. Here are pictures of the first horses purchased in this war by Munitions and Supply Department for the army. They are now in service at Petawawa Military Camp and were purchased from Gilbert E. Arnold, Grenville, Que., one of the largest dealers in horses in Canada. All are grade draft bred in Ontario and Quebec.

Top picture shows the first group of ten to go into service and three members of the purchasing board grade mare, and the former owner: left to right, Dr. A. C. Burt, Simcoe, Dominion Veterinary Inspector; Sgt.-Major T. Rodger, 4th P.L.D.G., a former cavalry unit; Gilbert Arnold, Arnoldwold Farms, Grenville, Que.; L. K. Crabb, who represented the Department of Munitions and Supply on the purchasing board; Capt. Graham Mayhury, 4th P.L.D.G., military representative on the purchasing board and well known Ottawa horseman.

Close Co-operation Between Corvette "Oakville" and U.S. Destroyer Featured Sea Duel

Ottawa.—Signals flashed between the United States destroyer in command of the escort and H. M. C. S. Oakville during and after the engagement in which Oakville destroyed a submarine, add to the drama of the action.

The destroyer had closed Oakville at full speed, her captain reporting as he neared, that a dark object could be seen in the water close to the Canadian ship, and that tracer bullets from the corvette's machine guns could be seen ricocheting from it.

"What is your target?" he signalled.

"Submarine, rammed twice" was the terse reply.

"Do you need assistance?" the destroyer asked, receiving a brief "no" in answer.

"Congratulations," the U. S. Captain replied and prepared to cover Oakville's position in the escort while the corvette continued her duel with the submarine. Before he could conclude his turn, however, Oakville called "close me" and the destroyer with a brief "aye, aye" came up to land a hand.

"Please close sub, our boarding party on board" from H. M. C. S. Oakville and closely followed by "Please close boat to pick up men. Sub is sunk. Some of my men were aboard."

Small boats from the destroyer and the corvette then co-operated in rescuing the men, Canadians and enemy, in the water.

Subsequent signals dealt with the damage caused to the submarine by her triple ramming and the offer of the destroyer of any assistance she could give. With gratitude, the corvette declined, reporting she could make port under her own steam and the destroyer signalled she would, accordingly, rejoin the convoy.

As the latter, badly hurt but victorious corvette headed for port, she sent one more signal to the U. S. destroyer.

"Good Hunting."

Tanker Helps Sink Jap Raider

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 25 (CP).—The Netherlands tanker Ondina which teamed with a little minesweeper, to sink a heavy Japanese commerce raider has reached Australia safely, Prime Minister John Curtin announced today.

The Admiralty announced yesterday in London that the Ondina and the Bengal, a minesweeper of the Royal Indian Navy, had pitted their two four-inch guns against two Japanese raiders and had sunk either the 6,863-ton Kunikawaw Maru or the 10,000-ton Kikoru Maru in an engagement about 1,000 miles southwest of Java.

Each raider was reported armed ith six 5.5-inch guns, torpedo tubes and catapult aircraft.

When the raiders approached the Bengal gave battle with her lone gun to allow the tanker time to escape, but the Ondinas master refused to flee and instead joined the unequal battle. One of the raiders soon was sunk. The other battered the tanker with repeated hits and after the crew abandoned ship drove two torpedoes into her.

She didn't sink after the raider left as part of her crew returned, got her engines running and she was brought on to port.

Jumped Aboard Deck Of U-Boat and Helped To Capture Nazi Crew

Brockville, Ont, Nov. 26—(CP)—Sub.-Lt. Harold Lawrence of Brockville, a hero in the destruction by the corvette Oakville of a U-boat in the Caribbean Sea, arrived here Wednesday from Toronto to visit his parents before returning to duty.

The young Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve officer jumped aboard the deck of a submarine with Petty Officer Arthur Powell of Timmins, Ont., after the Oakville had rammed and damaged the submersible.

The party herded the German crew on deck and captured them. The U-boat sank.

Possibility the school might have to close earlier was avoided when a temporary permit was made available by Oil Controller C. R. Cottrelle, allowing the school to obtain fuel oil until Dec. 1.

The board said the Department of Municipal Affairs has refused permission of an expenditure of $5,000 necessary to convert the school's equipment to coal heating.

SEE ACTION TO PREVENT CLOSING FOR LACK OF FUEL

Ottawa, Nov. 26—(CP)—Trustees of Ottawa separate school board decided last night to seek the aid of the Ontario Department of Education in an effort to avert closing of St. Dominic School, with an enrolment of 500 pupils, on Dec. 1 because of lack of fuel.

Economic Blow at Axis

Adolf Hitler who for years before the war was stocking up supplies in Germany from whatever source he could get them in food and war materials so that he might be ready with his blitzkrieg to pounce upon the world whenever he decided, so that he might conquer it, now finds himself cut off from a source of supplies in North Africa.

The two-pronged offensive by the Allies have closed the doors to him, cutting off iron ore and food and important materials as well as an annual 300,000 tons of grain, 400,000 tons of vegetables, 1,000,000 tons of phosphates and other minerals, olive oil, sheep wool and fruits.

The eyes of Hitler have for two years been glued upon Russia but twice she has thrown him back. She has kept from him the vast oil treasures of the Caucasus oil fields, given him parched earth and exacted heavy toll on his armies and is continuing to exact still more.

He has combed German-occupied Europe and robbed the peoples of food and metals. Crops and industry have fallen off under the blight of Nazism.

When this aggressor most needs everything, it is his fate to have a source that would satisfy his needs cut off.

Hitler will find his problems of materials growing more and more serious as the war proceeds.

As for food President Roosevelt has declared that where the American forces go, there will be no hungry populations for the United States will see to it that these peoples are fed. This fact will have a potent effect upon the spirit of the people of the occupied countries and add to the troubles of the Germans.

Two Great Men

Two great men have just celebrated their fifty-fifth birthday, General Bernard Law Montgomery, head of Britain's Eighth Army and Chiang Kai-shek, Generalissimo of China. It is not likely there were celebrations by either of the men for they have work to do. In respect to Kai-shek, the New York Herald-Tribune says Chinese do not pay attention to birthdays until the sixtieth year is reached when man is supposed to have reached the patriarchal estate.

General Montgomery, who has had the honor of smashing Nazi General Rommel, is said to be a lover of hard work and a stern and insistent soldier as he is described in the magazine section of the New York Times. "Neatness, orderliness in thinking and living and fighting are standard rules with him." He leads a busy and simple life.

Chiang Kai-Shek became head of countless millions of Chinese before he was fifty years of age. He has the respect of myriads of patriarchal clans. Today at fifty-five he possesses a strong, vigorous mind and good health in spite of the heavy burden of administration and of leadership of the Chinese defence against the Japanese aggressor. The world today owes to this Christian Chinese a great debt. He has welded China together as one of the great nations of the earth, the most numerous family of a people ever under control of one man. The Herald-Tribune says he has led China through a great spritual revolution as well as the tragic experience of war in which he has drained Japanese strength. He knows China and the power and will of the people of China and is the strong leader of a people that "wastes no spiritual energy whatever contemplating the possibility of defeat." That sustaining confidence of Chiang Kai-shek when many in other lands could not see so hopefully as he did has been supported by the course of events, because Chiang Kai-shek knows himself and his people. In this China is fortunate beyond many nations.

At the age of fifty-five these men are serving well. Age has not withered them, rather the passing years have ripened their experience and depth of character and ability to match and conquer the powers of circumstance.

A PRAYER

Just to fight on until at last is ended
The war with all its horrors and its pain—
To see triumphant that which I defended
And find in loss the truer, greater gain.
To know that men still count, that death is better
Than life, if lived on suppliant's bended knee,
And give their all to snap the bonds that fetter
Then smile at Death because their souls are free.

Oh, who would live if Liberty were ended
If Life were nothing but a listless thing—
No hopes! No dreams! No visions far extended
To where each day a better day should bring?
What soul would choose to wander on, a craven,
Or thrust aside a martyr's fiery crown
To gain, through shame, some fair enticing haven
By cringing as a coward for renown?

NO! Let me live on while Life has still a meaning—
Let me live on while still there is a goal—
Else let me die in triumph, gladly gleaning
That I, through death, at least have saved my soul.
Free from the shackles that would bind and shame me,
Were I to choose the more ignoble part,
I cast in scorn the trait'rous thought behind me
And press my unscathed manhood to my heart.

THAT LACKADAISICAL SPIRIT

"Dear Sirs:

Would you please ask the citizens of Belleville why they show such lack of interest in the route marches of the troops through the city—lovely boys—giving their all—with no cheers and no spectators to see them march.

Go to Toronto and see how how the people cheer there.

"A Newcomer to Belleville."

The above missive needs little comment. We presume the writer refers to the weekly route marches of airmen from No. 5 I.T.S. which, in fact, have excited little outward manifestation on the part of the populace here. In other cities the lads on parade get some vociferous appreciation of their fine appearance as they march through city streets behind the stirring strains of their bands. Here it seems they excite little but curiosity, and certainly no or little cheering.

Soldiers, airmen or soldiers in uniform are naturally proud of themselves and their units as they stride down the thoroughfare of any city, town or hamlet. And the population should be just as proud, for in these hectic days there is scarcely a family that hasn't a relative or friend in one or more of the Empire's armed services.

Canadian divisions landed in England to the cheers of a people renowned for their concealment of emotion. Here they march before a populace which goes wild during a tense moment at a hockey or a baseball game, to a sound of only their own marching feet or the tempos of the bands.

So why not forget the "tonsil paralysis" the next time the boys march by, and give them a cheer of appreciation at least.

Two Loiterers Held by Police

Police apprehended two men loitering at the rear of a gangway leading past Pauley's drug store late Wednesday night. The pair were escorted to the police station for questioning, where police connected them with a previous break-in at the Burrows and Frost insurance office on Front St. The names of the men were not announced by police as charges had not been preferred.

Earlier in the evening police answered a call to 249½ Front St., where it was reported burglars had entered the Burrows and Frost insurance offices. Investigations proved entrance had been effected by means of removing the screen from a rear window. Nothing of value was reported missing from the insurance offices however. A resident in the building provided police with a description of the men which closely resembled the pair apprehended behind Pauley's drug store, police revealed. The matter is still in the investigation stage.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK By R. J. SCOTT

Hitler Caught By Surprise Move of Reds

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON)

Evidence continues to accumulate that the twin-jawed Russian counter-offensive in the Don Bend caught Hitler as much by surprise in its scope, power and direction as the Anglo-American double-headed attack in Africa, although his failure to forsee it remains a mystery.

It speaks volumes for Red Army Staff skill, inasmuch as weeks of preparation under the eyes of Nazi air scouts must have been required to mount such powerful blows. There is little cover available on the barren, windy Russian steppes to conceal mass troop and supply movements from enemy observation.

It is possible that the Nazi High Command already had determined to lift the siege of Stalingrad and withdraw to winter lines before the Allied offensive in Africa or the Russian flanking squeeze play took shape. It would take time and meticulous management to affect a retirement from so deep a pocket as the Stalingrad salient. Not only men but all manner of heavy army impedimenta would have to be moved back, without prematurely revealing the strategy to the enemy.

Big Nazi Error

Engrossed by preparations for so dangerous an undertaking, the Nazi field command might have failed to give sufficient attention to reported Russian troop movements on the flanks of the great Volga triangle. From the hour of his order to attack Russia, Hitler and the general on whom he has most heavily relied have been guilty of a cardinal military crime. They have, by Hitler's admission, repeatedly underestimated the foe—his morale, military skill, and resources.

That they now have repeated that unforgivable blunder is obvious if Russian claims of continuing deep advances on both flanks of the dwindling Stalingrad salient have any basis in fact. That they have, Berlin has officially admitted.

While it is not definitely established that Hitler is on the retreat in Russia, it seems clear that Russian designers of the trap think he is. They are turning the double-play flanking squeeze into a triple-play affair. Inching attacks by the Stalingrad garrison itself at the apex of the salient have that look. They are primarily designed to hamper a Nazi getaway from the depths of the trap before its mouth snaps shut in the rear.

Enemy Lacks Aircraft

Another factor leading up to the Nazi predicament in the Stalingrad pocket must have been hasty withdrawal of aircraft to meet the peril of the Anglo-American drives in Africa. By every indication, that transfer of planes was compelled by initial British successes against Rommel in Egypt even before Eisenhowers' Anglo-American command put in its surprise appearance in French Africa. The very stress laid by Berlin on "waves" of planes now striking in Russia to halt the Red drives is suspicious. Russian accounts do not confirm it and it probably is largely a Nazi propaganda device to ease public tension in Germany.

For there can be no question that not only loss of all Africa but of any appreciable control over Mediterranean communication lines is threatening the Axis. What the result would be on already shaky Italian war morale can only be conjectured, but there is ample evidence that Berlin has no illusions on the point. It knows the danger of an Italian internal collapse, and is pouring agents into distressed Italy in an effort to avert it.

It requires no seventh son of a seventh son to foresee that if Hitler loses not only his grip on Stalingrad, but an army and its gear in that Russian trap, nothing he could say could keep such a major defeat from having its full psychological effect on a German populace that had been promised nothing but victory.

U.S. Soldiers in West Pacific Fare Well On Their Thanksgiving Day

Somewhere in Australia, Nov. 26—(AP) — Thanksgiving was observed throughout Australia today—not by the Australians, for whom it was just a hot summer's day, but by thousands of United States soldiers on the opposite side of the world from their homeland.

Only a few restaurants in the larger cities offered special Thanksgiving menus but in army camps from Melbourne to Cape York, and even beyond in New Guinea, American turkeys reigned supreme on well-loaded dinner tables.

Special religious services were held in the camps.

Cold-storage turkeys brought from the United States were provided for the main dinner course since Australia's crane-like turkey is a much different bird from the American fowl.

Due to tropical storage problems, front-line fighters in New Guinea missed out on turkey, but hospital menus in the Port Moresby area as well as throughout Australia featured the big bird.

Here is a typical menu:

Fruit cocktail; roast turkey and ham; sage dressing; cranberry sauce; broiled steak; candied yams; sweet corn; combination salad; celery; olives; nuts; pumpkin pie; apple pie; plum pudding; tea; coffee; milk; cigarets and cigars.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander-in-chief of Allied forces in the Southwest Pacific, spent the holiday in New Guinea, where he has been for some time directing the campaign to clear out the Japanese from Papua.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

When Field Marshal Smuts attended a secret miners' meeting with Prime Minister Churchill it was not the first time the South African Prime Minister helped surmount a British wartime coal crisis. When serious trouble developed in South Wales in 1917, Smuts scored a brilliant triumph as peacemaker.

Miners were angry about the comb-out, and anti-war elements fanned their resistance into widespread strikes. Smuts' route from Cardiff to the pits was lined with mobs of strikers, all anxious to see him.

"I really think they expect me to be a black man," he wrote later. "Finally I arrived at Tonypandy. In front of me was a vast crowd numbering thousands and thousands of angry miners. I started by saying, 'Gentlemen, I have come from far away as you know. But I have heard that the Welsh are the greatest singers in the world, and I want you first of all to sing to me some of the songs of your people.'

"Like a flash somebody in that huge mass struck up 'Land of My Fathers.' Every soul present sang in Welsh and with the deepest fervor. When they had finished they just stood, and I could see that the thing was over."

There was little need for Smuts to make a speech.

"The trenches are in Tonypandy," he told the miners. "And I am sure that you are going to defend the land of your fathers about which you have sung."

The performance was successfully repeated at each pithead and when Smuts reached London next afternoon the men were all back at work.

David Lloyd George, who tells this story in his memoirs, says that before Smuts went to Wales he asked him for advice. "Remember that my fellow countrymen are great singers," Lloyd George replied and, he adds in his memoirs, "the hint stuck."

When the question is asked who are the most travelled members of the government, the names of Prime Minister Churchill and Dominion Secretary Attlee suggest themselves at once, but two other ministers, Tom Johnston, Secretary of State for Scotland and Allan Chapman, Under-Secretary, are well up in the list.

These Scottish department officials do most of their travelling within the country, from London to Scotland. Johnston makes the trip once a week when parliament is sitting, giving him an average total railway mileage of 38,000 for the year.

Chapman limits his Scottish excursions to three a month, which brings his mileage to 22,000 a year, but in addition he occasionally makes extensive tours of Scotland, one of his most recent taking him more than 4,000 miles.

Early closing of stores is taken for granted these days and most of call the great struggle which led the present generation doesn't refer to the beneficial changes—a struggle in which the present prime minister played a leading part.

It was Mr. Churchill who sponsored the Shops Act of 1912 and persisted until it was passed. The act limited hours of work and shop assistants to 60 a week, excluding meal times and enlarged the voluntary closing provisions of an act of 1904.

Form of Partnership Seem as Essential In Post-War Era

London, Nov. 26—(CP Cable)—Sir George Schuster said in an address today it is essential the new, post-war Britain must include some form of partnership between the worker and industrial management, co-operation between industries and the preservation of the liberty of individual enterprise with a measure of government direction.

The prominent businessman told the Industrial Co-partnership Association that "a new appreciation of the human factor in industry" is a paramount necessity and another is that government in the public interest take a more direct part in the guiding and regulating the country's economic life.

The post-war demand for security of employment will be irresistible, he said.

THANKSGIVING

Almighty God, the wrongs are great,
Heavy the blows of brutal hate
For pagan hordes on land and sea
Wage warfare on belief in Thee.
Still all who serve Thy holy cause
Today for glad Thanksgiving pause.

Dear Lord, we come, as oft before,
This day with gratitude once more,
Grateful for all Thy care bestows
Which strengthens us to meet our foes;
For gifts, material and divine,
By which we hold the battle line.

Dear Lord, we thank Thee for our youth
Defending liberty and truth,
Kneeling to Thee each night in prayer
Asking for strength the blows to bear,
And wheresoe'er on guard they stay
Keeping this holy holiday.

With fear our anxious hearts are filled,
The laughter of the feast is stilled,
But faith is here! And grateful we
For all the means of victory;
For all Thy blessings manifold
By which our sons Thy ramparts hold.

WHO WAS MOTHER GOOSE?

Many people claim that Mother Goose was a real flesh-and-blood woman who lived in Boston.

The story is that Thomas Fleet, Boston publisher, in 1719 printed a book of nursery rhymes entitled "Songs for the Nursery, or Mother Goose's Melodies for Children," and that the name Mother Goose in the title referred to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Isaac Vergoose, who, it is said, was in the habit of singing the rhymes and jingles in the book to Fleet's wife when she was a little girl.

Nobody has ever been able to locate a copy of this alleged book, and there is no evidence that such a book was ever published.

Most of the so-called Mother Goose jingles have not been traced back further than about 1750.

The fact is that Mother Goose became associated with nursery rhymes and jingles in a roundabout way.

Andrew Lang declared that Mother Goose was employed in Lorret's "La Muse Historique" in 1650.

Be that as it may, in 1697 Charles Perrault, French author, published a book the frontispiece of which contained a picture of an old woman engaged in spinning and telling stories to a man, a girl, a boy and a cat and under which was the legend: "Tales of My Mother Goose."

This book did not contain nursery rhymes, but a collection of wonder and folk tales for children, including Little Red Riding Hood.

Perrault probably selected Mother Goose as the imaginary relater of the tales because she was already proverbial in French folklore for incredible tales.

His book was popular and an English translation appears to have been printed in London in 1729.

Mother Goose in connection with collections of English nursery rhymes was undoubtedly borrowed from Perrault's book.

In 1780, during the American Revolution, John Newberry of London published a little book entitled "Mother Goose's Melody, Solace for the Cradle, in Two Parts." Part One, declared the title, "contains the celebrated songs and lullabies of the good old nurses calculated to amuse children and to incite them to sleep."

"Mother" Goose is not native to English folklore, but most of the original Mother Goose rhymes were derived from that source. Like the fables ascribed to Aesop, the rhymes were gathered from widely scattered sources.

55,000 Miles On The Warpath

By DAVID WOODWARD
(Overseas Press Service)

I became a war correspondent at exactly 4 o'clock this morning, London time. Just two years ago I was walking down Fleet street, in the day's work fashion, I stopped at the office of the paper before going off duty. There I was told that Foreign Editor's room, he looked up and said:

"There's a train leaving for Scotland at eight this evening. Catch it. Get your packing tomorrow and go to Capetown. There you'll get a train to Durban and from Durban you will fly to Cairo, where you will be our war correspondent with the British forces in the Middle East."

He dropped a blank envelope and handed it to me, adding:

"Here's money, your tickets, your passport with visas and permits and your war correspondent's licence. Good-bye and good luck."

I dashed off to pack. My packing is a bit somewhat rushed at the best of times, so I, wasn't surprised, to find myself equipped for my traveler with one left boot and two right shoes, whilst I swirltered through the tropics in my London clothes.

I got as far as Bloemfontein in South Africa by dawn. I read in the paper, at breakfast, of the first big German raid on London. I knew then though I had been kicked in the stomach. It seemed awful to be travelling 10,000 miles to be a war correspondent when, back in London, many people were having more war and danger than I was ever likely to encounter.

Views the Front.

When I arrived in Cairo the first thing I did was to take a trip up to the front, bumping over the desert tracks in a glorified station wagon. All was quiet, following Graziani's advance to Sidi Barrani, except for tank skirmishes in the forty mile belt of no-mans-land which now separated the two armies.

Then I sailed aboard a destroyer which was taking a convoy to Malta, and although we met with some air and E-boat opposition, it was nothing compared with what the latest convoys to Malta have run into.

Not until the invasion of Greece by Italy did I really get to the war. Then I sailed to Piraeus—the port of Athens—in the first British ship to take aid to the Greeks. The people of the Piraeus lined their bomb damaged quays to cheer us as we steamed into the harbor; when we landed the stevedores on the docks refused to take any money for handling our baggage. That was the first indication we had of how the Greeks felt about things. That was typical of the way the Greeks behaved to the British troops from start to finish of the struggle.

In Athens we immediately began to clamour for permission to visit the front; before that permission arrived, however, I had the luck to be selected as the first war correspondent in the Middle East to go on a bombing raid with the R.A.F.

Our target was the oil refinery and oil storage tanks at Bari, on the heel of Italy. We flew off into the night, I thought of the last time I had been to Bari. It had been in April, 1939, when I had flown down to cover the sailing of the Italian armada to seize Albania. Sick at heart, I had watched the rape of yet another small nation. As I remembered this, I reflected that at least I was going to get a bit of my own back.

Bomb Door Jammed.

But it wasn't as easy as that. Then we got over the target our bomb doors jammed. We spent three quarters of an hour amidst the flak and searchlights .— flying up and down the target trying to get rid of our bombs. Finally as we shook from side to side in the blast of exploding shells, we succeeded. We saw half the sky turn a sicky greenish lemon color. We had hit the oil tanks.

Shortly afterwards, permission came through to visit the front, and off I started on a series of hops through the mountains of Northern Greece and Southern Albania. Amidst the adventures I had, just bits stick in my mind—the Mar Rica Inn, in a back trap; the bottom of which was sown with landmines; the hours and challenge to learn the Greek front line from the near-est road; riding in horse-car for the first time in my life—up a mountain path in front of the Greek front line quarters in a tiny hut, where I found the general and his staff having breakfast the next day; battle and then, riding out in the dawn next day to see the action; tata Albania, those are just episodes.

What was not an episode, but something which continued, and has continued down to this day, was the magnificent spirit of the Greeks. Carrying the selfsame rifles their grandfathers had carried against the Turks in 1897, and backed only by artillery obsolete at the end of the last war; they went to give battle in the inviolate, biting for miles a day the snow of the mountains without tents or covering and being lucky if every other day, they had each half a loaf of bread and a plate of beans or spaghetti.

The only immediate aid that it was possible to give the Greeks was in the air; a single British fighter squadron arrived—and its planes for three days ground to a halt—a single one of the four hundred planes which Mussolini had in Albania. Then the Italians got their second wind and used to send fighter sweeps of fifty or sixty planes over to engage the single British squadron—and each sweep was driven off with heavy losses, though the British were flying antique Gladiators and the Italians the newest Macchis and Bredas.

Bitter Retreat.

Afterwards came the United Kingdom, Australian and New Zealand forces and their heartbreaking fight that meant for us war correspondents a long tale of bombing, fighting and bitter retreating; but we saw Glory. We saw the rock calm Australians holding back the German mass as if they were on a field day; we saw the dark skinned Maoris preparing for their stand at Thermopylae, on George's Day, we left them.

The United Kingdom armored troops coming out of what—up to then—had been the biggest tank battle in the history of war. Finally we were away from Greece, I shall never forget our departure, as we left the silent city of Athens, without any reproaches—I shall never forget the old Greek woman who came up to me and said, "Good-bye—he know you will come back and come back properly next time."

In danger the Greeks had been great, in victory supreme, but in defeat they were and still are on a level of magnificence unequalled in their own history or in anybody else's.

Back from Greece I volunteered for Tobruk. I spent a fortnight there—bombed ten to twelve times a day—shelled every night and living on bully beef and ice made from chlorinated water. There were the conditions which first the Australians and then the British troops in the fortress endured for months on end.

After Tobruk came the invasion of Syria, and from the bridge of a British cruiser I watched a midnight battle between our ships and Vichy-French destroyers. Finally, after we had seen several dark red glows break from the enemy's side—sure signs of hits—the little silvery mosquito which were the enemy warships vanished into the darkness and were never heard of again east of Toulon.

During the summer and autumn of 1941 there was a lull in the Middle East following the failure of the German plans to drive through Syria, Egypt and Iraq into Persia and to the gates of India. Accordingly I was sent on a series of jobs outside the theatre of war. In Abyssinia I saw the Negus—the last time I had seen him was in Geneva when he appealed to the League of Nations for help. Seeing him again, driving in state through his capital, I knew that the mills of God had begun to grind.

On the northwest frontier of India I saw some of India's million acre under arms preparing to defend the Khyber Pass, and up the Burma Road I saw the Chinese coolies and American trucks and experts rushing up the supplies which will help China stand her present siege until engineers and armies can once again open up a road from the west. I interviewed General Chiang Kai Shek in his headquarters at Chungking and I saw something of China's great and great-hearted army.

Then I returned to the Middle East, and got the news that my young brother in the R.C.A.F. had been killed in action. Our parents were already dead. I was home by England, my brother in America, where he had lived and worked since leaving school. There was no compulsion for him to join the Canadian Air Force, but in September 1939 he decided that that was where he belonged and that was where he stayed until the end.

Goes To Malta.

I went to Malta, and had six weeks of bombing; you've heard a lot about that island. It will only tell two of things I saw there. First—one day walking down a street, I saw a house, both sides had been destroyed by bombs and the middle—about five feet wide—was left standing. They were painting mosaics on it. Second—I remember the Maltese friend I asked what this was about. He produced the explanation that Malta's people were illiterate, and although the boys had no money to spend on food, they had managed to get the painted whiskers would do instead.

The second incident—on an observation post high above the island, a British sailor was keeping tally of bombs with a friend nearby.

"Two hundred and fifty-two—6,000 feet. Bombs leaving the aircraft. Bombs exploded distance 30 yards bearing 310. What was that you were saying about a place where you could get two eggs and chips for breakfast?"

And the third story of Malta — a big bomb fell near a bomb dump on the aerodrome and failed to explode. A Maltese bomb disposal officer arrived, together with another German bomb on the aerodrome. The ground heaved and shook beneath the new arrival. The bomb disposal officer took the unexploded bomb in his arms and carried it down on to his body to lessen the shock of the explosion. He walked for about 200 yards away—nothing happened—and the Maltese, like his fellow islanders in that danger was over.

After Malta, I got permission to be the first war correspondent ever to go on patrol in a British submarine, and for days we hung about on Rommel's lines of communication. Then a transport escorted by a torpedo boat and a plane came in sight. We attacked and missed; we did the enemy, though not ours, his thirty two depth charges came close enough to bring the corking down from the inside of the hull and break glass on the indicators in the control room.

Then I got a whole series of tropical diseases and eventually sailed home in a slow convoy. Convalescent, I was sitting in the ward room of an escort vessel one day playing with an air gun, when I heard paper and bit of string. When I was finished, I found that I had covered nearly 35,000 miles of left hand.

I had had plenty of thrills during that trip but the two greatest still remained :the first was when we destroyed safely every single ship of our big convoy. The rusty sided vessels with their smoke grimed engines, steaming into port, were a more wonderful sight than a naval review.

The second thrill was securing, in the face of strong competition, a taxi and driving for the first time in two years through the streets of London.

Foxboro Charge Holds Annual Supper-Social With Fine Success

Foxboro — Foxboro Charge, comprising Holloway, Marsh Hill and Foxboro, held its Annual Pot Luck Supper and Get-Together in the Foxboro United Church school room on Friday evening, November 20th. From seventy to eighty persons were present. After supper a brief program was rendered under the chairmanship of the pastor, Rev. R. M. Cook. This included community singing led by Mr. S. Ostrom, and Mrs. R. M. Cook; piano duet by Misses Margaret and Ruth Vanderveer, a song by Billie Roland; guitar and ukulele organ music by Mrs. Coleman Townsend and Gordon Foster, and a reading by Mrs. Harry Coulter.

The speaker for the evening was Rev. Ralph Spencer of the Tabernacle Church, Belleville, who spoke most helpfully for the occasion and three times on the subject, "Four things I like." Mr. Spencer Van Dyke's three beginning "Four things a man must learn to do, if he would keep his record true." These four things are: clear thinking; sincere love for his fellowman; action based upon honest motives, and trust in God securely. The address was well reasoned and aptly illustrated and well received.

Messrs. Ben Bleecker and Murray Reynolds fittingly proposed the thanks of the committee in charge to the speaker and all others who had assisted. The National Anthem closed the program but it was by no means expression of sincere feeling and fervour.

Thanks were extended to Mrs. G. Simpson, who is ill at the home of her sister, Mrs. J. Shaw.

Miss Bernice Dalnard of Belleville, spent a couple of days with her sister, Mrs. E. Stewart.

Mrs. Fred Prindle of Plainfield, spent over Sunday at Mr. A. Ostrom's.

A number attended the S.S. convention at Consecon on Thursday and enjoyed the sessions.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rodgen and Betty were our honour guests on Sunday at Mr. E. P. Yorke's, of Cliff-ed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm writing for my sister who is married and has two children. She is 37 and her husband is 39. He doesn't care to work, but runs around with other women. My sister wouldn't leave on account of the children.

She recently opened up a store, and has been doing well. Her husband comes around and steals money from the cash drawer to give to his women. The last time he came home he beat her terribly. She summoned the police and he saw that she got back to her home again; I could print many more, but for the terrible things he does. She asked me to write and get your advice. Shall she leave him or take the beatings?

A Sister

When I read a letter like yours I wonder if the brutality treated woman imagines she's living under a Hitlerized form of government. We're still a Democracy and for any woman to put up with that's and brutality from such a man makes me wonder if she fully understands the advantages of living in a country like ours.

She is legally and have this excuse for a man bound over to keep the peace. Then if he doesn't, invoke legal agency immediately.

Beatrice Fairfax.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 36 years old and my girl is 30. We are very much in love and planned to get married soon. I'm sure we will be very happy together but we are first cousins. Should we marry? We know many cases where cousins married and they are happy and successful. Please tell us what to do.

A Soldier.

Cancer of Stomach May Cause Few Symptoms

A patient called on his physician with a pain in the hip which was found to be cancer. He complained of no other symptoms except a slight feeling in the stomach. There was no pain. The tight feeling was caused by the cancer; the feeling was due to the extension of the stomach cancer. The man was at the age when the danger of cancer occur, that is, between fifty and seventy. Men of course in young children do, however, occur.

I am mentioning this case again because this patient had only one slight symptom, tightness across the abdomen that showed any disturbance of the stomach. He admitted that his appetite was not so good as it had been but as he had gained five pounds the previous month he thought less food would do no harm.

Unfortunately, in cases of cancer of the stomach the symptoms are often so slight that the patient pays little or no attention to them and thinks the patient suffering with indigestion and gas pressure hurries to his physician to find out why the symptoms are due entirely to nervousness, emotional disturbances, or to allergy, all of which are harmless conditions.

What is the chief cancer of the stomach we may have in mind cases among which relatively small numbers of these cases where pain was severe, early operation gave relief and the patient lived for years afterwards.

How is the patient and also the physician to know when cancer is present and whether or not an operation would relieve even if it were performed at once?

The only sure way is for the middle-aged individual to keep in mind that cancer is a common condition but need not be feared if discovered early; that any unusual feeling in region of stomach could be due to cancer; and that some types of stomach cancer cause few symptoms and may be more rapid growing, more dangerous, than a type causing severe pain and distress. By consulting their physician and use of X-ray, gastroscope, chemical tests, they may save their lives if cancer should be present, and relieve their minds if it is not present.

Remember, early cancer is curable; advanced cancer is fatal.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS FREDERMAN

May a Wife, The Moment Husband's use the formal name, may use his Service Title on Their Christmas Cards?

Yesterday, in my column, I suggested various forms of Christmas cards and addresses for the war time and, naturally, wants to include her husband's name with hers on their Christmas cards, and who prefers to use the first name of her husband, the informal, personal cards she will send to her husband's relatives, her relatives, and their friends?

Today I would like to have a heart-to-heart chat with the war wives who want to send out cards in "classic" manner, but who prefer to use their formal names.

The first question is: Is it proper to send out cards carrying Phil's name when Phil is "away", either stationed in some distant place in this country, or in some "unnamed Somewhere"?

The answer is YES, emphatically YES. This will please everybody. Naturally you want to do this. We are proud to do it. And naturally so is Phil, whether he is serving in the Army or Navy designation before his name on your Christmas cards or would want you to do this, would be proud of it, knowing that his greetings are being sent with yours to his relatives and friends at Christmas-time.

And the other question is: If you have Phil's title, whether he is a Captain in the Army or a Private, a Lieutenant in the Navy or an Apprentice Seaman?

Let's take the 'higher brackets' of titles first, for the Customs of the Service are here most definite about the social formalities. And although there is no authority for the abbreviations of forms on Christmas cards, and who would logically be followed in using military and navy titles on these cards as are followed in the use of titles in visiting-cards or wedding invitations and announcements. That is, an Army officer with the rank of Captain or higher, may have his title engraved before his name. But for a junior officer (Lieutenants and second lieutenants in the Army, and Lieutenants, in the Navy), the military or naval title is omitted, and "Mr." is engraved before the name.

So this is the correct form, strictly speaking. And this is the form that would be added, by the Colonel and his wife and the Commander and his wife.

But if your husband is a non-com or enlisted soldier or sailor, it is correct for you to use the Army or Navy designation before his name on your Christmas cards.

Here there are no traditions, no Service "regulations", to point the definite way. However, today many things are being done that were not done in the past, and social usage is changing rapidly away from strict formalities. Take the case of the pattern of sensible usage and common sense. The "Ms." of yesterday is today's "Corporal" or "Private, First Class" or "Petty Officer", and these millions of changes in huge Democratic Army Forces point up a vast number of questions.

And the question of the moment is: May you, on your Christmas cards use "Sergeant and Mrs." "Private and Mrs." "Apprentice Seaman and Mrs."? "Private and Mrs."?

You want to use your husband's Army or Naval title, I'm sure. You'll be proud to use it and your husband—but you will be proud to have you use it. The majority of the cards of you war wives are to be sent to relatives and friends, perhaps to many people who don't know that your husband is in the Service, or don't know his rank and branch of the Service.

So using your husband's title before his name makes good sense.

Therefore, although it is optional whether or not you use "Mr.", certainly it is sensible and proper for you to use your husband's designation, and certainly this contributes prestige to his pride and yours, shared with friends.

But do remember, please, that if you do candid-camera cards form of name, you should not use it after an informal, personal message. This also makes sense, since a name added to a very intimate message is a signature just as the name at the end of a letter is a signature and the title should be added before a signature.

An example of this incorrect use is:

With all good wishes for Christmas and for the New Year

Sergeant and Mrs. Philip Strong How may you use this form correctly

1.—Before a third-person message:

Sergeant and Mrs. Philip Strong send you Christmas greetings and best wishes for the New Year or

Philip Lane Strong
Ensign United States Naval Reserve

and

Mrs. Strong

send you Christmas greetings

and best wishes for the New Year

2.—On a formal-appearing card, with no message on the inside pages. For example, the beautiful white cards with the insignia of either the Army or the Navy stamped in gilt on the cover, or cards with the word "Greetings" or "Christmas Greetings" on the cover. Then on the blank third page you may correctly have this form of name engraved or imprinted.

Since obviously this form of name automatically limits these cards into the formal class, you will probably want to send informal cards with notes written on them to relatives and intimate friends.

Fashion Flashes

THERE'S CHEER in color. A recent guy day was rendered cheery by the sight of a girl in a vivid scarlet red suit and a soft matching topcoat worn with red gloves and red-trimmed green hat.

DOWN TO EARTH come she heel heights for we're all walking, working and running around these days. A good shoe for general wear is a dark brown calf-skin oxford of suede, a five-eyelet model with a black ribbon tie.

THREE CHEERS for one of the smartest dinner suits of the year, a good model since jacket and skirt can be worn separately for other things. The top is a short double-breasted model with close-together horizontal bands of white crystal bugle beads, while the skirt is of black crepe with the same treatment in black bugle beads.

ALWAYS YOUNG and pretty is black with pink. A darling dress for afternoon is of black crepe, its bodice made beautiful with a deep band of pink satin ribbon drawn through and ending in front under a pin of cabbage rose that is placed at the base of the low collarless V neckline.

THE EXPERTS SAY

(By ISABEL ALLAN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 20 (CP) — Rich in vitamins and minerals are the home front.

Pins and needles are becoming scarce on store counters so hang on to the ones you have.

The commerce section of the Prices Board says: don't sweep them into the garbage pail, but enable their receptacles conveniently located.

Don't put pins and needles in clothes from the cleaners and buy new ones. They are needed again on hand for long periods rust. Don't throw away bent pins or tired, they may bend or break —wherever possible use a light magnet to handle the up more strategic metals.

RAYON — Rayon fabrics are the thinking about their yearly letters to old Saint Nick. The consumer section of the Prices Board asks you mothers to explain to your children that the war has hit Santa too and that he'll have to say he'll fill their stockings up the way he did in former years.

PORK—Canada's 1941-43 contract with Britain is complete but the bacon board asks you to remember that this year's contract is full, 78,000,000 pounds bigger than the 1942 one. Next year's contract is for 675,000,000 lbs. So it's up to you to keep up the good work and resist the thought of pork chops, roasts or bacon.

CHICKEN—Laura Pepper, chief of the consumer section, Department of Agriculture, has the following suggestions for using a boiling fowl . . Make it into chicken pot pie, delicious in the cold night, or billed chicken salads, just the dish for someone recovering from the flu, or turn it into savory chicken broth the next time you give a dinner.

FLOUR — Here is a new angle to the vitamin B complex from Marion Harlow, of Nutrition Services . . To ensure enrichment and see that the family gets plenty of vitamin B in their daily diet she recommends use of Canada-approved bread made from Canada approved vitamin B white flour.

CANCER OF BOWEL GIVES WARNING SIGNS

We hear a great deal about cancer of the bowel and much can be done for it if it is taken early and in time.

It is a dangerous disease, and very few persons recover if the disease is neglected and has progressed too far. Unfortunately, too, the disease can develop without giving much sign that it is present, although the average person who has the condition may be aware that something is wrong. But because the symptoms are so mild, the patient may delay for as long as from six months to two years before deciding to consult a doctor about it, and this is where the great danger comes in.

One of the important symptoms to be on the lookout for and one which is mild and often neglected is a change in bowel habits. For example, the patient may develop at this time an occasional loose bowel movement, or there may be a tendency to constipation, or perhaps the bowel movements may become irregular. A person affected in this way may think that something is not exactly right-but since he has no pain or bleeding or actual discomfort he does not become alarmed. However, sooner or later other symptoms will appear, such as mild pain, perhaps due to excessive gas in the bowel, dullness on the right or left side, cramping and in some instances there may be blood in the bowel movement. At first these symptoms may indicate that a cancer of the bowel has started. When there is a change in the normal bowel habits, mild cramps and perhaps excessive gas, there should be no delay in having an examination carried out and this must be a thorough one, including X-rays of the bowel and an examination through the rectum so that if a cancer is present it may be discovered early and operation performed.

During the first months of cancer there's no loss of weight. Loss of weight may only appear late in the disease, together with weakness, fatigue and loss of appetite. The location of the cancer will, of course, influence the kind of symptoms which are present. In some instances there may be severe anemia or beaming in the coloring of the blood. In others there may be a great deal of gas or indigestion. In some cases the tumor mass may be felt through the abdomen. If the tumor blocks the opening through the bowel, pain will be an early symptom.

Once a cancer of the bowel is suspected, there are four procedures which should be carried out, according to Dr. Irvin Abell, Jr., of Louisville. These include an examination through the rectum; the use of a fluoroscope, an instrument made of a tube with lights through which the bowel is filled and the bowel can be examined directly; X-ray studies and repeated examinations of the bowel movements. X-ray examination alone cannot be depended upon for a diagnosis of cancer of the bowel.

Early diagnosis means more probability of successful treatment. By any chance these past middle age, guard constantly be on guard. Any symptoms, no matter how mild they seem, should not be neglected.

One Inch is Whole City Block In Glossary Tool-makers

Prefer Minute Accuracy to Eating — Increase is Phenomenal in Canada in New Industry

Speak to a machine tool man of thousandths of an inch, and he thinks you're talking about city blocks. Speak to him of 10,000ths of an inch or less, and you're talking his language.

For it is to these diminutive measurements—tolerances, as they are known to the trade — that he works. But when you say 1/10,000th of an inch, do you understand how microscopic it is? Do you know that it is equivalent to one thirty-fifth the size of the human hair?

Such precision is the hallmark of the machine tool industry, an industry which in Canada has increased its output by 300 per cent since the war started, and is now exporting certain types of tools to Great Britain, the United States, Australia, India, and Russia.

As late as 1900, machinists were still working largely in terms of thousandths of an inch. Now they work in 10,000ths. Obviously, such a fine degree of precision is not achieved overnight. First, a five-year apprenticeship must be served. Then, as responsibilities are shouldered, each day brings new knowledge, for machine tool men never stop learning. New problems demand new tools; new tools mean new approaches.

This, too, is one industry where speed and accuracy do not mix. Hundreds of man-hours must be expended before a complicated machine tool, built perhaps to do many automatic operations at the same time, is ready to turn out, either on the production line or in the machine-shop, the work for which it was designed.

Here are some of the reasons why the machine tool industry must operate with such exactitude: A manufacturer calls for a gear-grinder to produce gears for aircraft engines. Both the manufacturer and the machine tool builder know that unless the gears are exact to withing 2/10,000ths of an inch, the engines may suffer in efficiency. And since the gears can be no more accurate than the machine which makes them, the gear-grinder must be built to produce work which is accurate to within 1/40,000ths of an inch.

The finished gear grinding machine will weigh several tons and will involve the assembly of hundreds of parts. Each part must be made from stress-relieved iron castings and steel bars and plates fabricated into slides, shafts, or bearings which must be polished, fitted, and scraped to a fine degree of accuracy and finish. Some of the work can be done by machine-shop tools, but much of it must be done by hand.

This hand-scraping is one of the finest of the machine tool arts. Although the rough work involved in the building of, say, the bed for a heavy cast iron lathe can be done by other machines, it must before completion be hand-scraped by an expert workman to assure smoothness and accuracy. This is an arduous process, for when the bed is finished it must be so flat that a straight-edge bar will wobble if a one-inch strip of the thinnest paper is placed beneath it.

Nor can this delicate work be undertaken by any but the most expert. A slip of the wrist at this critical point might easily ruin thousands of dollars worth of precious materials and waste hundreds of hours of work.

As the machine tool is the basis of mass production, so precision is the basis of machine tools. And Canada has proved conclusively that it not only has the engineering ability to design complex tools, but the men to build them — men who would rather be accurate than eat.

FINEST OF ARTS

Hand-scraping, one of the finest of all the machine tool arts. At this point in an operation, only the most skilled can be entrusted to do the job, for a slip of the wrist might easily ruin thousands of dollars worth of material and waste hundreds of hours of labor. Here, B. Whitehead, of Toronto, shows how this precision work is done.

W. H. Ireland Enters Mayoralty Contest

Trenton (Special) — Trenton is to have a real contest for municipal honors this year, this being the end of the two-year term inaugurated by the Hepburn government. W. H. Ireland, ex-M.P.P., has thrown his hat in the ring, along with H. R. Cory for the mayoralty. It is also rumored that ex-councillor George Sprentall and Mr. Jas. Holmes, local merchant, will seek municipal honors in the Council.

Mr. W. H. Ireland is well and favorably known in Trenton, having been in business here for a number of years, previous to representing Hastings County in the Provincial House. He was Conservative Whip from 1923 to 1934 while the Conservative Government was in power and was Deputy Whip for the four years previous to that while the opposition was in power. During his term of office in the Conservative government he presided over several conventions and annual meetings and was president of the Conservative Association of Ontario for eight years from 1930 to 1938.

For four years, from 1916 to 1919 inclusive, Mr. Ireland was mayor of Trenton, and two years previous to that was a town councillor, during which time he gave valuable service to the citizens of Trenton. He was president of the Trenton Rotary Club last year.

"Bill", as he is commonly known is one of the best known men in the County of Hastings. His congenial smile secured for him many votes which would otherwise have gone to the Opposition. His friends will be delighted to know that he is again going back into active public service.

It is understood that all the present council will seek re-election, and with new members in the field this should make for a lively election in Trenton.

Cory Eight Times Mayor

Mayor Cory, who is seeking re-election, has been Trenton's mayor for the past eight years, during which time he has given ample proof of his ability as an administrator of an ever-growing community. He has taken Trenton thru' many dark years of her depression and now he is leading her in her most prosperous times.

In taking over the reins of mayor in 1934, Mayor Cory found Trenton with a funded debt of $931,000.00; overdraft of $72,000, and debentures selling at 62c on the dollar.

Trenton's record at the end of October this year shows $31,000 cash in the bank, all debentures paid, and a funded debt of $495,729.37. At the present time reserves and surpluses have been set up for post-war period of $225,005.97. And the first ten months of 1942 to the end of October shows a surplus of $26,245.31.

If elected to the office of mayor for 1943, Mr. Cory states he will be in a position to reduce the tax rate by three mills.

Mr. Cory, who has lived in Trenton since 1914, is a former agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and is at present President of the Trent Mining Syndicate, which is mining flourspare four miles north of Madoc. This important metal is used in the manufacture of steel so important to our war effort.

Nomination day Friday, December 4th., will reveal the full list of candidates in the field for all municipal offices.

Navy League Canvass

With the observance of Navy Week throughout Canada, the Trenton Branch of the Navy League, under their President Mr. J. H. Matson is making an extensive canvas for funds for Christmas Cheer for all the brave lads who go down to the sea in ships, the Royal Canadian Navy, the Merchant Navy and the Navy League of Canada.

The Navy League of Canada during the past twenty-five years has provided facilities for the training of Sea Cadets, some 4,000 of whom have graduated to the Active Services. They have operated hostels at our sea ports and given many other great services to the gallant men of the sea.

During the past year several hundred ditty bags have been provided by local citizens and assembled and shipped through the Trenton High School, under the direct supervision of Miss Marjorie Gothard, who gives an enormous amount of time and much needed funds for this purpose. These bags are shipped to the Navy League at Toronto and from that point distributed to all the men of the navy and the merchantile marine.

Any citizen who has not already been canvassed for this most worthy cause may make their donation directly to the President, Mr. Matson, manager of the Bank of Montreal, Mrs. R. M. Heath, secretary-treasurer. Miss Gothard or any of the other members of the Navy League.

Capt. Hewitt, Guest of Honor

At the regular meeting of the Trenton Rotary Club on Monday evening in the Gilbert Hotel, Captain Fred Hewitt of the Salvation Army was guest of honor, previous to his departure from Trenton to Caron, Sask.

On behalf of the Club Captain Hewitt was presented with a beautifully fitted travelling bag, by Rotarian James Holmes, who spoke in glowing terms of the very fine service which Captain Hewitt had given to Rotary during his three years stay in Trenton. Mr. Holmes' remarks were also borne out by those of President Hutchinson who too spoke of the regret which Trenton Rotarians feel at Captain Hewitt's leaving.

Monday was "Soldier's Welfare" night under the chairmanship of Captain Hewitt.

N. Z. Airman's Bag Stolen

LAC. L. E. Hale, R. C. A. F., Trenton, and a native of New Zealand feels quite downhearted in the loss of a valuable gladstone bag which was stolen from him at the Trenton Air Station. The bag is described as dark brown leather, 18" size, with initials "L. E. H." in gold. This bag has a special steel plate across the top for a lock and is a New Zealand patent. It contained wearing apparel which is used by the airman, also a large blue leather wallet, an Argus camera with German made lens in a brown leather case, two rolls of 35 m.m. developed film, a Commando knife with a carved snake handle.

This is a decided loss to this lad who is far away from home and it is sincerely hoped the police will be able to recover it as it is worth in the neighborhood of $200.

Gives No Guarantee Time for Discusson

London, Nov. 26 (CP)—The government showed no inclination today to give dissident members a chance to debate in the House of Commons the North African agreement with Admiral Jean Darlan.

Following his endorsement yesterday of President Roosevelt's interpretation of the agreement as a temporary military expedient, Foreign Secretary Eden told the House today he could not guarantee the government would find time for discussion of a motion by 11 members expressing disapproval of the dealings with Darlan.

27 IN CANADIAN NAVY DECORATED FOR GALLANTRY

Men Honored Served on Four Different Ships, Two Losing Lives

5 D.F.C.'s GIVEN

Ottawa, Nov. 26 (CP).—Gallant and skilful work by Canadian Navy personnel in the sinking of two enemy submarines and an attempt to salvage a torpedoed merchant ship was recognized officially today through the award of 26 decorations.

The men who were honored served in four different ships and two of them lost their lives. In announcing the awards the navy minister, Hon. Angus Macdonald, gave no details of the actions and did not indicate whether the U-boat sinkings had been previously announced.

The destroyer Skeena and Corvette Wetaskiwin teamed up to put one submarine out of business after a four-hour hunt during which "many" depth charge patterns were dropped. The attack brought decorations to 11 of the Wetaskiwin's crew and ten of the Skeena's.

The other submarine was one of two sighted on the surface by the destroyer St. Croix. The St. Croix chased one for two hours before the kill—at least part of the time at maximum speed—and five of her officers and men were decorated.

(Last month Mr. Macdonald announced that Royal Canadian Navy ships had sunk four German U-boats during the summer, had probably sunk two more, and had carried out many promising attacks. It was not known whether the sinkings which brought decorations today were included in these figures.)

Two Posthumous Mentions.

Two posthumous mentions in dispatches went to Lieut. John M. Walkley of Montreal and Able Seaman Leslie Horne of Winnipeg who lost their lives in an attempt to salvage a torpedoed merchant ship and its cargo. They were serving aboard the corvette Nanaimo.

Today's awards brought to 155 the total number of decorations for Canadian Navy men since the war began. In all, five Distinguished Service Crosses, four Distinguished Service Medals, and seventeen mentions in dispatches were announced today.

Virtually identical citations covered award of the D.S.C. to Lt.-Cmdr. Guy Stanley Windeyer of Duncan, B.C., commander of the Wetaskiwin, and Acting Lt.-Cmdr. Kenneth Lloyd Dyer of Grand Pre, N.S., commander of the Skeena.

The two ships worked in harmony through the four-hour chase and the citations for each of these R.C.N. men said: "The skilful handling of his ship by this officer contributed to a large degree to the destruction of the enemy U-boat."

The D.S.C. also went to Acting Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew Hedley Dobson, Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, of Halifax, commander of the destroyer St. Croix, and the citation said the St. Croix's kill "was achieved by this officer's coolness and determination and through his skilful handling of the ship."

Substantial Factor.

The other D.S.C.'s went to Lieut. Lesley Nelson Earl, Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, of Toronto, who was in charge of the St. Croix' anti-submarine organization and whose "devotion to duty and quick thinking contributed in a large measure to the success of this action," and to Sub-Lt. Daniel Lionel Hanington of Saint John, N.B., for the "plot" which he maintained of the Wetaskiwin's submarine chase, described as a "substantial factor" in the ultimate sinking.

The citation for award of the D.S.M. to Engine Room Artificer (3rd class) Robert Renaud, R.C.N.R., of Victoria, revealed that at one stage of the four-hour hunt his ship was out of action. Explosion of depth charges dropped by the navy ships broke a pipe in the Wetaskiwin's engine room but he repaired it promptly, putting his ship back in the fight.

The Skeena engine room also was honored with a D.S.M., to Engine Room Artificer (4th class) Leslie Mills of Victoria, for the high degree of efficiency he maintained.

Petty Officers Honored.

The "higher submarine detectors" on the Skeena and St. Croix—Petty Officer Arthur Butchart of Vancouver and Petty Officer Maurice Biggs of Vancouver, respectively—won the D.S.M. for their skill and tenacity in keeping track of the fleeing submarines.

The fifteen mentioned in dispatches resulting from the destroyer sinkings were distributed among both deck and engine crews, including Ab. Jess Lloyd Cranney, R.C.N.V.R., of Owen Sound, Ont., bridge lookout on the Skeena who first sighted the submarine ultimately destroyed and who has "shown great zeal in performing his duties."

Depth charge crews aboard the Skeena, Wetaskiwin and St. Croix were honored with mentions, and the citations revealed that aboard the Skeena and St. Croix at least there were no misfires of depth charges in "many" patterns thrown out.

British Press Eulogizes U.S. for Part in War

London, Nov. 26 —(CP)— With interest stirred through the presence of thousands of American soldiers and with ancient Westminster Abbey being handed over to the Americans for the day, every London newspaper and many in the outlying communities today published long stories — despite the four-page limit on papers—about the origin of Thanksgiving and how it is celebrated.

Rev. W. H. Elliott, religious writer for the Daily Sketch, said it is time Britons had a Thanksgiving holiday and suggested "joining with our American cousins year by year in this great act of thanks and prayer."

The Daily Express used nearly a column for an editorial eulogizing the United States for its part in the war, saying that without American aid "the British Empire and Russia would not be fighting the offensive war of today and November, 1942, would not have been a month of amazing victories."

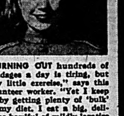
Is YOURS a "no exercise" job?



"BENDING OVER A drafting board all day isn't much exercise," says this expert draftsman. "But I keep fit. No harsh cathartics! This is my plan. I start every day in the year with a bowl of delicious Kellogg's Bran Flakes. They taste so good I'd eat them anyway!"

Here's a tip for indoor workers . . .

Your job may be tiring, yet give you little healthful exercise. So often the result is a logy, headachy feeling that keeps you "below par" most of the time. Such symptoms are frequently caused by incomplete elimination. But don't dose yourself with harsh cathartics. To get well, see your doctor. And to keep well, watch your habits. Make sure you keep food wastes moving promptly by getting plenty of "bulk" in your diet. Start every morning with a bowl of crisp, delicious Kellogg's Bran Flakes. You'll find they're just the thing for that early morning appetite. And gently laxative Kellogg's Bran Flakes With Other Parts of Wheat help supply valuable minerals and proteins, too.

Ask your grocer for the golden-yellow package of Kellogg's Bran Flakes. They're so good you'll want to eat them every day, so better start tomorrow. In restaurants, order the individual package with the inner, WAXTITE, sealed bag. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

"DIRECTING PEOPLE to the right aisle is not much exercise," says this smart usherette, "yet handling crowds with a smile takes lots of energy. I have to keep fit. Here's my way: No nasty doses. Instead I eat a bowl of crunchy, mildly laxative Kellogg's Bran Flakes every day."

"TURNING OUT hundreds of bandages a day is tiring, but very little exercise," says this volunteer worker. "Yet I keep fit by getting plenty of 'bulk' in my diet. I eat a big, delicious bowlful of mildly laxative Kellogg's Bran Flakes every day in the year."

A Dieppe Hero Finds A New Hospital Car Okay

An ideal test for a new model railway hospital car to be used by all three of Canada's armed services was provided when Brigadier Sherwood Lett of Vancouver who won the Distinguished Service Order at Dieppe where he was wounded, tried out one of the comfortable Pullman-type berths during a display at Ottawa, although he has long since passed his hospital convalescence. At the suggestion of Defence Minister Ralston during the inspection he consented to demonstrate the car's facilities and the photographs show, upper left, Brig. Lett's pulse being taken by Matron T. ## Visitors' Day Marked In Frankford Schools

Frankford—Visitors' Day was observed at the local schools on Tuesday, Nov. 24th and a large number of townspeople availed themselves of the privilege of seeing the students and teachers at work. As the visitors arrived they were greeted by two eighth grade students, Shirley King and Geraldine McGeachy and invited to sign the visitors' book.

It was of extreme interest to all to witness the primary classes at work, to hear the little ones read, recite, sing songs and draw pictures under the leadership of their teacher, Miss Hazel Mintz, who besides teaching primary work is the music teacher for the entire school.

The primary classes are having a War Savings bank where the children are encouraged to deposit their savings to help win the war. In the second room where Mrs. R. Twiddy is teacher of grades 3 and 4 we noticed the sand table arranged by the youngsters representing means of travel, both old and new. A nice host of the best of the children's work was also on display in this room. In Mrs. Grant's room we found many posters displayed on the subject of health, clay models made by the students and samples of "my best printing" by grades 3 and 4. Miss R. Allen, teacher of the grades 1 and 2 has an enrollment of 48 which is the largest of any of the five rooms. The total enrollment at this time being about 225. The principal of the school, Mr. A. Warren, teaches the 7th and 8th grades and was in the midst of an agriculture lesson on the cooling moth and railroad worm when we visited his domain. This being Navy Week, many pictures were in evidence showing all types of seagoing craft. The students had also collected pictures of a great many prominent men in the news today. One poster of especial interest was a picture of the flags of all the Allied nations.

Each room boasts an excellent library which provides supplementary reading suitable for the youngsters at any age.

On a tour of the Continuation School one found Mrs. Gabriel busy with Latin and French lessons. In the chemistry room the principal, Mr. G. A. Frost, was coaching his class through an experiment on sublimation.

Masonic members of Frankford Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 127 had the pleasure of entertaining visitors from Consecon, Stirling and Belleville on Monday evening, Nov. 23rd for the official visit of District Deputy Grand Master for Prince Edward district, Wor. Bro. Little of Brighton.

The second degree of lodge work was put on by the Belleville staff which Wor. Bro. Little gave an interesting address. A sumptuous supper was served in the lodge room and a program of toasts and informal speeches was very much enjoyed by everyone present.

On Wednesday evening Misses Edna Gilmour, Margaret Edge and Betty Leavitt entertained Miss Kletha Hadley to supper in Trenton also a show and the Masonic dance on the occasion of her leaving Frankford for a new home in Trenton. As a fitting climax for the evening the guest of honour was presented with a large bottle of Yardley Rubenstein perfume. Miss Hadley was taken completely by surprise and thanked her friends very much for the gift and the enjoyable evening she had spent.

Mr. J. M. Bell celebrated his 80th birthday on Sunday last. On Friday the members of his immediate family gathered at his home for a veniso dinner in his honour.

Mr. Geo. Ottenbright of London spent the weekend visiting friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bell of Campbellford spent Friday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Hamilton were recently into Mr. Geo. Sine's house on Mill St.

Mrs. S. Smith and Lois are visiting the former's daughter in Oshawa this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Benedict and family spent Sunday with Miss Flora Bell and Hilda Joyce remained for a short visit.

Mr. Harry Montgomery entertained the W. A. group on Tuesday evening. All hymns were sung and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. The program consisted of readings by Mrs. Madill and Mrs. J. Dafoe and games and contests. Mrs. G. A. Creal read the Scripture lesson from the 24th Psalm. A delicious lunch was served and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem. The last meeting for this year will be held next Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Harry Ellingsland.

LIBERAL MEMBERS VOTE TO SUPPORT PRESENT GOV'T

General Convention Will be Called at Close of Next Legislature

VOTE IS 47-8

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—By a 47-8 majority Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature in caucus yesterday voted to support the present provincial administration during the next legislature session—which will open around Jan. 15—and called for a general convention of provincial Liberal associations to be held two months after that session.

Reports prior to the caucus had it that a full-dress political row would be forthcoming with forces opposed to the five-years-old administration of Premier Gordon D. Conant the cause of the expected fireworks.

The caucus chairman, W. Lyon Miller, member for Algoma-Manitoulin, stressed after the meeting, however, that during discussion of various issues no personalities were entered into and that there was no acrimony and no vindictiveness.

Mr. Miller said the five main speakers at the caucus were Premier Conant, Treasurer Mitchell Hepburn, former premier, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, highways and works minister and president of the Ontario Liberal Association, Harry Nixon, member for Brant, and Farquhar Oliver, member for Grey South. Mr. Nixon and Mr. Oliver held portfolios in Mr. Hepburn's cabinet prior to Mr. Conant's accession to power but both resigned in protest of which they termed the manner in which Mr. Conant gained the premiership—without endorsation by a regular provincial Liberal convention.

Mr. Nixon held the provincial secretaryship and Mr. Oliver was minister of welfare and game.

Mr. Conant, Mr. Hepburn and Mr. McQuesten, Mr. Miller said, pleaded for support for the present administration and for unity within party ranks. Mr. Conant asked for cooperation and suggested that following the next session of the legislature a convention could endorse him or choose a new permanent leader.

Remarks Temperate

Mr. Nixon and Mrs. Oliver were expected to lead a strong revolt in the caucus but according to Mr. Miller their remarks were temperate and they merely said they resigned because they objected to the manner in which Mr. Conant succeeded Mr. Hepburn as Premier. Mr. Nixon also said his place in the cabinet had become uncomfortable because of Mr. Hepburn's attacks on the Federal government which, he thought, was doing a good job.

Mr. Miller declined to name the five who voted in opposition to the resolution supporting the government and calling for a convention but said he was aware that it was officially we learned later that two of them were Messrs. Nixon and Oliver. They were said to have been supported by Dr. Milton T. Armstrong, member for Parry Sound, Morgan Baker, York North, and Eric Cross, Middlesex North.

Session to Open Jan. 15

The session, it was said also to have been the only supporters of an amendment to the main resolution calling for a convention before the next session is held.

Mr. Conant made the announcement concerning the opening of the next session probably on Jan. 15. It was explained the session was being called earlier than usual because of forthcoming important power and labor legislation. The next session is the usual one for the events would open sometime in February.

Mr. Miller said further that it was the general opinion of the Liberal members that no election should be held in the coming year because there was no call for one and because the life of the legislature could be extended one year through action taken with the concurrence of the Conservative opposition at the last session.

The resolution was given an unanimous vote of thanks for his services and in the same resolution regret was expressed at his resignation.

Witness Says He Gave $40 After Discharge

Quebec, Nov. 26 (CP).—The trial of Pte. Louis Philippe Hamel of Quebec will be resumed today before a general court-martial set up to hear the cases of five medical officers and four privates on charges arising from certain irregularities in the medical examination of prospective army recruits.

Hamel, attached to No. 5 Company of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, faces charges of receiving sums of money from "divers parties in relation to their military medical examinations" and of distributing the money received "to other medical personnel".

He pleaded not guilty to the charges yesterday a few hours after Pte. Paul Henri Cloutier, 19, of Charlesbourg, Que., pleaded guilty to a bribery charge.

Three witnesses testified before the trial was adjourned that they gave money to Hamel after obtaining their discharges, but two of them said they had given it of their own free will.

Gives Testimony.

Rene Bourque, 22, of Quebec testified that he gave Hamel $40 after having been discharged from the army. He told the court that Hamel had explained to him the procedure men ordinarily followed to obtain their discharge.

"When I obtained my discharge papers, I visited Hamel at home. I took four $10 bills out of my pocket and laid them on a table and I told Hamel they were to reward him for his trouble. He told me I didn't owe him anything and that he would reward the doctors. When I left the bills were still lying on the table."

Roger Larose, 19, of St. Isidore, Que., testified that Hamel had asked him for $5.00 but that he had given him $3.00 after obtaining his discharge from the army. Larose said he was rejected by the R.C.A.F. first and then the army.

He said "Hamel told me that army doctors are not supposed to examine recruits who know that they are going to be rejected. Hamel said 'we usually charge $5.00'. I told him I could only pay $3.00 and I gave it to him. He said he wanted the money to reward the doctors."

Four Basic Principles

He said that at a July 30 conference with Prime Minister Mackenzie King an understanding had been reached on the four basic principles in the administration of Selective Service. These principles were:

1. That manpower policy must be decided by the cabinet through its manpower committee.

2. That administration of the manpower policy must rest with the Minister of Labo except in the case of appeals in respect of army draft calls which would remain within the jurisdiction of the Department of National War Services.

3. That soon as the administrative machinery of National Selective Service had been sufficiently extended and improved it should undertake the manpower functions then being performed by the Department of National War Services. The transfer was to be effected within a period of not more than three months. Meanwhile the utmost co-ordination between the departments affected should obtain the calling-up of men for military purposes be subject to the approval of National Selective Service.

4. That the employment offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission be placed under the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor.

He said that between the conference and the date of his resignation "exactly three and a half months transpired — months during which the country's manpower shortage was growing hourly more critical and unmanageable."

Gives His Version.

Then he gave an outline of his version of what happened in the intervening period.

"Despite the definite understanding in July that the draft machinery was to be transferred to the Department of Labor to be administered by the director of National Selective Service it was two months before an order-in-council was issued to that effect," he said. He added the order fixed Dec. 1, 1942, as the date of transfer.

"Two weeks after the order-in-council was issued," he declared, "and notwithstanding its terms an official intimation for which no reasons were given, was received by me from the Minister of Labor to the effect that the drafting of single men should continue to be the responsibility of the Department of National War Services and that only married men should be drafted by the National Selective Service." Mr. Little said this letter was dated Oct. 8 and added the matter was still "unresolved" when Mr. Mitchell left for England.

Order Passed Month Later.

He said that although the transfer of employment offices from the jurisdiction of the Unemployment Insurance Commission to the Department of Labor was agreed on in July, no formal order was passed until a month later. "But," he added, "this order failed to implement the agreed arrangement. Instead of giving administrative control of these offices to the National Selective Service under the Minister of Labor, as had been clearly understood between myself and the minister in July, it placed them under a new authority, namely one of the members of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. When officials of National Selective Service became aware of this fact a heated argument took place in the Minister of Labor's office."

He said that clarification was again obtained "that these offices were to be under the administrative responsibility of myself as director of National Selective Service. Despite all this, a directive was sent out from the offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission as late as Sept. 22 with an accompanying chart showing that the offices had no administrative tie-in with National Selective Service."

Over Three Months' Delay.

Mr. Little added: "It was not until three and a half months after the original understanding with the prime minister that the order which finally put the direction of employment service and unemployment insurance under the administration of National Selective Service was gazetted." He said it was gazetted Nov. 14, the week-end of his resignation.

He said it was this situation to which he referred when he stated in his letter of resignation that selective service was still "in the ridiculous position of lacking undisputed control over its only possible field machinery."

Speaking of his reference in his letter of resignation of the blocking of plans for labor-management committees, Mr. Little said that last August Chairman Mitchell and members of the Selective Service Advisory Board approved an official statement of policy "which was an attempt to show both labor and management exactly where the government stood" and "give official direction" to this program.

No Word On Statement.

"To this day," he added, "that statement of policy has bogged down somewhere in the minister's office. That press statement announcing government policy and which was to have been issued, has never been released. It was my view that such a statement as to the government's attitude in regard to these committees was essential and that both labor and management were within their rights in demanding a clear-cut statement of the government's policy."

Answering Mr. Mitchell's criticism that he had sought czarist powers in his memorandum to the minister, Mr. Little said "the powers sought were that 'the director shall, under the minister, have the exclusive management and direction of the National Selective Service Bureau, and shall for that purpose be the deputy of the minister.'"

Needed Sufficient Power.

"It is my belief," he said, "that if the government is serious about implementing its desire to tackle the manpower problem, the very minimum powers which are needed by anyone selected to carry out that responsibility are at least commensurate to those of a deputy.

He said he made this clear in his memorandum which he said also stated: "Rather than attempting to create a new office and define its powers and responsibilities, it was thought preferable to conform to the traditional pattern of responsible government as both the clearest way of defining the director's position, and providing the simplest and most efficient operating mechanism.

He said that without such powers it appeared to him he could not "acceptably discharge" his responsibility as he understood it and as the prime minister had enunciated it in a manpower broadcast in August, when Mr. King had said the main responsibility for selective service rested with Mr. Little.

Mr. Little commented on a reported statement by Mr. Mitchell at a recent Ottawa press conference at which the minister was quoted as having said that the compulsory transfer of manpower in industry could not safely be entrusted to any one man.

"The fact is," Mr. Little said, "that the principle of compulsory transfer of labor was approved by the manpower committee of the cabinet of which the minister is chairman, as far back as July, or early August." He said that the power he sought was "the power to carry this principle into effect under similar procedure to that obtaining in other departments of government."

More Balanced Effort

He referred again to the July conference with Mr. King at which he said it was recognized that what was needed was a more balanced effort, a clearer directive and centralized authority from the cabinet. He referred again to the understanding that was reached at the time of the conference. Then, he said, Mr. King had made his broadcast foreshadowing increased controls and other measures.

"Another full month passed before National Selective Service was officially advised of future and prospective manpower demands," Mr. Little stated. "Within a few days after receiving these demands Selective Service presented a blueprint of the step necessarily involved in meeting these requirements and an outline was given of the conditions which had to be faced and considered in so doing. No practical answer to these blueprints was received by Selective Service up to Nov. 18."

No Decision Reached

"In short," Mr. Little charged, "three months after the Prime Minister's nationwide manpower message of Aug. 19, apparently no decision has been reached—or at least if reached it had not yet been translated to National Selective Service—as to the objective and the overall requirement on which manpower policy is to be based.

"Despite this lack of directive and the general manpower uncertainty, the Minister of Labor saw fit to leave the country and the manpower problem and visit England for four weeks."

He said that during Mr. Mitchell's absence he and associates prepared another comprehensive memorandum containing a series of recommendations. He said the memorandum contained a five-page summary of the general manpower situation and a draft Order-in-Council establishing National Selective Service as a clear-cut branch within the Department of Labor, defining its powers and those of its director. The reason why an attempt was made to define these powers, he said, was the belief that earlier and very sweeping authority given to Selective Service was "too far-reaching" and "impracticable" in a democratic country. He said the new proposals aimed to limit this authority and to "give the residue adequate definite powers for enforcement."

Then he recited the events leading to his resignation. "I deemed these proposals so urgent that I sought a discussion with my Minister and the Prime Minister on the day the Minister returned from England." He found he would not be able to see Mr. King until Monday, Nov. 16, and he could get no response to telephone calls to Mr. Mitchell after his return from England.

Mitchell Annoyed.

When he could not get the minister on the telephone he called at his house, leaving a copy of his memorandum with an accompanying letter urging immediate support for the proposals.

"On Monday, the minister called me to his office. There was an exchange of views and a clear indication from the minister that he was annoyed by reports of friction within the department during his absence. The minister showed no interest in the memorandum.

"By Monday evening I decided that under the circumstances no other course remained for me but to resign in view of the relations between myself and the minister. I presented my resignation to the minister at the prime minister's house that evening along with an accompanying letter of explanation to the prime minister. The prime minister asked for time to consider both the resignation and the memorandum. He suggested the end of the week. I asked for an earlier decision if possible. On Wednesday I agreed that I would not press for a decision prior to the end of the week if the government was serious in giving consideration to the memorandum and in wanting to come to grips with the manpower situation.

"The cabinet decided, however, to accept my resignation on Wednesday afternoon."

Pound Bangkok On Thanksgiving Day

New Delhi, Nov. 26—(CP)—"The crews of nine American heavy bombers observed the advent of Thanksgiving Day by making a large-scale attack on Japanese-controlled oil refineries in Bangkok," an Allied air communique said today.

All planes and fliers were said to have returned uninjured from the long flight to the capital of Japanese-occupied Thailand.

GERMANS STATE

Violent Attacks

The Germans said that the Russians continued to attack violently with tanks and infantry between the Volga and Don at Stalingrad and westward inside the big Don bend, but that the attacks were repulsed.

Moscow dispatches said the Germans evidently had determined not to withdraw from Stalingrad and were fighting a wide open war of manoeuvre, even with their flanks exposed and their rear pressed in a corridor only 30 miles wide or less.

Russian communiques thus far had not mentioned offensive action northwest of Moscow. The Russian high command however, habitually waits for two or three days for an offensive to be well developed before making any announcement.

USE ALL AVAILABLE

(While the shadow of disaster lengthened across the estimated 300,000 Axis soldiers still at the three-months-old job of battering Stalingrad, the Berlin radio reported heavy Russian offensive action west of Moscow.

(The radio first broadcast yesterday that Russian troops had made "temporary penetrations" on the Rzhev front and several hours later another broadcast reported the Russians were fighting west of Toropets. Rzhev is a German strong point about 130 miles west of Moscow that held out against the Russian drive of last winter and Toropets is 125 miles farther west, at the base of a salient formed when the Russians drove their lines far past Rzhev on the north and south.

(Soviet communiques made no mention of the Rzhev sector but it is not unusual for the Russian command to withhold news on offensive actions until they are well developed.

Overnight, the Stalingrad garrison showed fresh strength by dislodging the Germans from an important height, killing 300 in the advance, the mid-day communique reported, and in another sector of the city several fortifications were captured.

In night fighting south of the city several more populated places were seized and about a regiment of infantry wiped out, the announcement said. Names of the towns were not given but heavy-scale fighting was indicated by the reported silencing of sixteen enemy batteries and destruction of 31 blockhouses.

Town Captured.

One unidentified town was reported captured overnight in sharp fighting northwest of Stalingrad where 600 of the enemy were said to have been killed and 157 disabled tanks captured after the Germans had dug them into the ground for use as fixed firing points.

Special and regular midnight communiques last night told of fresh Russian gains west and northwest of Stalingrad with 15,000 more Germans and their allies captured and 6,000 killed in Wednesday's fighting, making the offensive's prisoner list 51,000 and the dead count 47,000.

The communiques again omitted estimates on the wounded but on the usually-expected ratio of three-to-one in comparison with the dead, they would amount to 141,000 and make the Axis manpower losses 239,000 in seven days.

The Russians also reported capture of 1,300 guns, 5,518 motor vehicles, 62 ammunition dumps and much other equipment and food from the Axis forces apparently fleeing too fast at some points to remove or destroy material.

The midnight and special communiques gave a picture of Russian positions being consolidated south and north of the Axis supply lines squeezed into a strip some 30 miles wide and running roughly 100 miles to the west from Stalingrad across the Don River bend.

On the south, the towns of Rishkovskaya, Novomaximovsky and Staromaximovsky were reported occupied along the Stalingrad-Kamensk railroad, although no advance was reported westward from Surovikhino, some 85 miles west of Stalingrad, which was previously captured.

To the north, half a dozen or more small towns were taken as the Russians consolidated their hold on the Don bend area between that river and Chernyshevskaya, westernmost reach of their offensive, some 120 miles northwest of the beleagured Volga stronghold.

These included Malonabatovsky, Birichov, Rodionov and Bolshaya. It was assumed that inward pressure was being maintained on the enemy's avenue of supply and escape, although no specific advances into it were claimed.

Continuous Soviet Raids

The regular communique spoke of continuing Soviet aircraft raids against German tank formations. It said also that nine enemy planes, 15 big junkers and 52 transports were shot down, indicating that Germans might already be resorting to air transport for the hard-pressed Stalingrad assault forces.

Meanwhile the Stalingrad garrison, encouraged by the drive and reinforced by a column that fought its way into the city from the north yesterday, continued to shove the invaders back slowly in the factory district, clearing Germans from several gun emplacements and killing 300.

The fierceness of the fighting in the siege-ripped city did not indicate any immediate withdrawal by the Axis forces and the communiques on yesterday's fighting told of savage German counter-attacks to the northwest of the city, all of which were reported repulsed after which the Red army advance continued.

(A Reuters News Agency Correspondent reported to London from Moscow that roads from Stalingrad still held by the Germans were clogged with Germans fleeing in disorder to avoid entrapment but so far the tenor of the battle within the city has indicated no general withdrawal.)

TWO TROOP-LADEN

Only Small Flotilla

A light cruiser and four destroyers were reported to have made up the flotilla seeking to land reinforcements under cover of darkness. Allied airmen spotted them about 50 miles off Cape Cretin in Huon Gulf and immediately went into action with flares and 500-pound bombs.

Explosives loosed by a Fortress scored twice near the stern of one destroyer. Fires broke out almost immediately. The vessel sank within an hour and Japanese troops were seen swimming in the flare-lit sea.

The second destroyer was accounted for with direct hits while the third was severely damaged.

"This latter was dead in the water for 25 minutes and then was seen heading for land (the New Guinea coast) at a speed of six knots," the communique said. "It is probable she also sank as our rear air echelons searched her possible area of position without sighting her."

The cruiser and the remaining destroyer turned about and fled north in the darkness.

Port Moresby, the major Allied base in New Guinea, was reported raided twice in the night by a single enemy aircraft which dropped bombs "harmlessly in the brush."

SHOTGUN SLAYING

He, too, had been shot in the chest.

Man Being Questioned is Report

(At Toronto, Deputy-General Cecil Snyder said he "understood" police were questioning a man in connection with the case. Mr. Snyder also said Cunningham was a divorce investigator for the W. E. Telfer law firm of Toronto.)

Mrs. Fardella was a sister of W. E. Telfer, now an officer in the administrative branch of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Cunningham, unmarried, had worked as a soft drink salesman and divorce investigator. He lived in a bachelor apartment in downtown Toronto.

Her body was not identified until late yesterday by her husband, Anthony, who said she had attended a public weekly card party in Cobourg Tuesday night. Cunningham's body was identified earlier in the day by M. S. Thompson of Toronto, who said he had not seen him since they had been "out on a party" together Tuesday night.

Fardella, who left Cobourg at 5 a.m. Wednesday to drive a truck to Toronto in connection with a fruit business he and his family operate here, said "I didn't see anything" along the highway.

Mrs. Fardella was the daughter of the late W. Telfer, Cobourg hotel proprietor. She left Cobourg to train as a nurse at Toronto where she married.

R.C.A.F. Fighters Damage Trains In North France

London, Nov. 26—(CP Cable)—The R. C. A. F. announced today a Canadian fighter squadron damaged a number of freight trains in northern France Wednesday afternoon and while this was in progress R. A. F. Coastal Command Hudson Bombers, including a Canadian unit, attacked enemy shipping off the Netherlands.

One fighter is missing; all aircraft returned from the coastal command operation.

Under conditions of poor visibility ships were attacked north of Ijmuiden, the R. C. A. F. communique said, and a direct hit obtained on one.

Freight trains were attacked near Balbec.

It was a big day for PO. L. W. Powell of Edmonton, a member of the squadron led by Sqdn. Ldr. J. C. Fee, D. F. C., of Calgary. Powell shot up four locomotives to bring his total to 16 in a few weeks.

He spotted the first two in a marshalling yard and despite anti-aircraft fire dived to a low level and attacked with cannon and machine-guns. He attacked the other two en route home.

In addition to these operations the air ministry said R. A. F. aircraft torpedoed a supply vessel off the Norwegian coast.

Two bombers did not return from offensive reconnaissance over Germany yesterday.

PAPER USED FREELY

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—C. V. Hodder, Prices Board administrator of paper boxes, yesterday told the Ontario Bekeepers' Association in convention here that satisfactory honey containers can be made of paper. Tin containers are now on the priorities list.

Mr. Hodder added that paper is now being used to package everything from ink to munitions.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIE Y. HUTTNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. somewhere in England, Nov. 26 (CP)—Canadian airmen take to the pen with the same keenness and ability as they do to the trigger and bomb release. Their journalistic ambitions find expression in the columns of Wings Abroad and the following shatter the myth that the literary talent of the Air Force's weekly newspaper.

Flt. Sgt. Wilf Sesse of Montreal is one of three brothers, eight of whom are in the services. The ninth intends to join when he's old enough. "Some record," Wings Abroad commented.

An observer, Sesse has been on five operations, all over Germany. On his second trip, his Lancaster was coned by searchlights over Mannheim and pursued for a couple of hours by flak, though no one was hurt. "Funny thing 'was," W. A. noted, "they were all somewhere else. Someone should complain to the Minister Chamber of Commerce."

* * *

Wings Abroad reported the first public appearance in Britain of the R.C.A.F. overseas band under the direction of its conductor, P/O. Martin Boundy, L.R.S.M., of London, Ont., the musicians played in Trafalgar Square at the inauguration of a national salvage drive for non-ferrous metals, and their performance, rivalled that of famous British bands which have played in the renowned square.

There are 29 men in the band, headed by W/O. Mack Thompson of the groom Cpl. David Skinner of Hamilton, Ont. He used to be with the old 110th Army Co-operation Squadron.

* * *

Reporting a rumored "blitching" by aircraft-carrier who calls himself "Jerk, the Erk," named a companion in his raid "Joined the Navy to get rid of 'Come to Canada with Me' boys."

P/O. R. M. (Rusty) Bragg of Calgary, a squadron engineer officer, and Flt. Sgt. Lovejoy of Wings Abroad "just so he will buy as copy of this paper."

Also from the arrival of crates of "mamas" from the Canadian Red Cross, one squadron reporter said the invoice included a "mysterious item" of "100 Tuck-ins."

"Nobody knew what a 'Tuck-in' was and anyhow it didn't sound like anything a real He-Man in the Air Force would ever eat," he asserted. "However, it turned out to be a very handy roll-neck flea to wear over a V-neck sweater. Gosh, what won't they think of next!"

Little Benny's Note Book

I was home with my cold in the head, and the doorbell rang and it was Lucky Leroy Shoaler on the ice comes out, and I said, I cant, I got a fierce cold and it's suppose to get better quicker in the home. Good night I bet you're so lucky I guess you never get anything a matter with you, I said.

Sure I do, Mrs. Lucky Leroy said. Only the only things is, every time I get sick or anything it turns out darn lucky for me, he said, and I said, Well G, how can it? I bet if you had a cold like this one I got I bet you wouldn't think it was lucky, I said.

Sure, I had a fierce cold once, lucky said. It was so fierce the chills and fever came with it and I just shivered and shook all over for 2 days as I thought. I was out in the snow, and darn it those 2 days wasn't the hottest 2 days in the whole weather bewro with everybody complaining how hot they felt, and I escaped from all that heat, he said, and I said, Good night, the time I had a fever I wasn't allowed to even read in bed because they wanted me to have so much rest.

Even when I have to take medicine I always get a nickel for every spoonful it makes it taste better, and the last time I made a dollar and 20 cents before my mother tasted the medicine herself and found out it tasted better than a lot of candy, Lucky said. And talk about making money, how about the time I sprained my ankle and my father rented a pair of swell crutches for me, and besides having all sorts of fun with them I made pretty near 2 dollars renting them out to your others as a practice on before my father took them back to the crutch place, he said.

Heck, the only time I ever nearly got arrested, anything was my finger in a door and it just kept on hurting till it was over and everybody told me how glad I was I'm so careless, good night some people have all the luck, I said.

And I went back in the house feeling worse instead of better.

Jacques Doriot, French Nazi Leader in Paris, Is Reported Dead

London, Nov. 26 (CP)—The Admiralty disclosed today that a heavily armed Japanese raider was engaged and destroyed in the Indian Ocean Nov. 11, by a minesweeper of the Royal Indian navy and a Netherlands motor launch.

The minesweeper, H.M.S. Bengal, was escorting the 6,985-ton tanker Ondina about 1,000 miles southwest of Java when they encountered the 10,000-ton Kikuka Maru and the 6,963-ton Kunikawa Maru, both believed armed with six 5.5-inch guns and equipped with torpedo tubes and catapult aircraft.

The Bengal and the Ondina each had only a single four-inch gun.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Demorest Feted In Honor of Recent Marriage

Rawdon, Nov. 24.—On Tuesday evening the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hagerman, Seventh Concession, Rawdon, was filled to the doors when over two hundred friends gathered to honor Mr. and Mrs. Burnsen Demorest (nee Edith Hagerman) on the occasion of their recent marriage. Rev. Leslie Harding was master of ceremonies and also contributed a solo. Following a short program the bride and groom were given seats of honor and Mrs. Riram Sludgers read an address of appreciation to the bride and groom and they were presented with two lovely leather chairs.

Miss Helen Fitchett followed with an address to Edith and her husband and they were presented with a large array of miscellaneous gifts in silver, linen, china, etc. Both Edith and Burnsen thanked their friends for the lovely gifts and invited those in attendance to visit their home. A sumptuous supper of wedding cake was also on display.

An appetizing lunch was served at the close and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Pte. James McMullin is holidaying for a few weeks with her sisters in Belleville, Mrs. Hazelton Cahoon and Toronto.

Mrs. Donald Laycock is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Adams in Toronto.

Mrs. Fred Joblin is ill at his home at Scugog Island and last week he suffered a stroke. The pastor of Rawdon Circuit for twelve years and Rawdon folk regret his serious illness and hope he speedily recovers.

Rev. James Allin and Mrs. Allin, who left Carleton Circuit in July is also ill and will be confined to his bed for a few weeks. Friends hope for an early recovery.

Mrs. Frank Williams Honored,

On Tuesday afternoon thirty-five ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. Hiram Devlin and honored her mother Mrs. Frank Williams, Mount Pleasant who is eighty years of age. Mount Pleasant Rawdon Women's Missionary Society sponsored the party and invited the Adult Ladies' Bible Class of the Sunday school to join with them on this happy occasion.

Mrs. Williams was given a seat of honor and Mrs. Percy MacMillan presided over a byled program interspersed with verses of favorite hymns. The opening number was "Auld Lang Syne" and a parody written especially for Mrs. Williams. The program was both humorous and pathetic as life is made up of test pattern with both tears and smiles.

Mrs. Arthur Phillips read a sketch about "long ago" and what folks did in those days. Mrs. Hiram Devlin Known sang "Mother Machree". Mrs. Frank Jeffs read "Grandmama," and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver sang "The Old House At Home." Mrs. Percy Bond read a selection, "The days of the past" and Mrs. John Reid sang "The Family Gathered At Home."

Mrs. Roy Thrasher read an address of appreciation to Mrs. Williams expressing the privilege it had been to be associated with one who had travelled down the long vista of 80 years and still retained such a youthful and courageous outlook on life. This was signed by Mrs. Percy MacMullen, president of the W.M.S. and Mrs. John Reid, teacher of the Bible Class.

Mrs. Allan Bailey, a veteran W.M. S. worker and life member, presented the presentation of a lovely Elderdown dressing robe and slippers also a gift of money, all of the days when she and Mrs. Williams came as brides to the community.

Mrs. Williams graciously replied thanking the friends for the lovely gifts and also gave several reminiscences of past years as she came as a bride to Mount Pleasant in 1886.

Brief remarks were also given by Mrs. James Sharp, assistant teacher of the Bible Class, Rev. T. P. Townsend, pastor and Mrs. Hy. Bond, president of Stirling W.M.S., she being a special guest with Mrs. David Gray as Mrs. Herb David is a member of St. Paul's W.M.S.

Mrs. John Reid contributed an interesting contest, "Articles used in the olden days". The program closed with "God be with you till we meet again," the W.M.S. lading served light refreshments with Mrs. Edgar McKeown, community friendship secretary, pouring tea and later she tendered Mrs. David a vote of thanks for her home in this memorable occasion.

It was regretted that Miss Lenora Williams, Reg. N., Toronto, was unable to be present on the occasion of her mother's birthday party.

OFFICIAL MOTHER TO FIREWATCHERS

London (CP) — Sort of official "mother" to London's women firewatchers is Mrs. Marjorie Blanche Owen. Her official title is Assistant Fire Guard Staff Officer and her job is caring for women firewatchers. In her early 30's, Mrs. Owen has had experience of welfare work and during the heavy air raids she drove Mobilized Transport Corps stretcher-party cars in Southwark Borough of London.

STUNT STUMPS POSTMEN

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Nov. 26—(AP) — Postal authorities are stumped by this one: More than 100 unstamped, unaddressed envelopes containing coins have been deposited in a mailbox on Falls Street. Acting Postmaster Thomas Gray hazard k guess someone might be donating to some federal agency but "all we can do is hold the envelopes and consign them to the dead-letter office."

Calls Odlum's Remark 'Unprovoked Attack'

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Mai. Gen. Victor Odlum's reference to Toronto in a speech here Monday will be made the subject of a House of Commons debate, T. L. Church, Conservative M.P. for Toronto Broadview, said today.

Gen. Odlum in his Canadian Club speech said he felt a weakness in the United Nations was "the spirit of criticism and complaint" and added that in Canada "the bitterest things come from Toronto." He asked: "Can Toronto the cruel become Toronto the kind?"

Mr. Church today called his words "an unprovoked attack" and asserted his appointment as Minister to China "should be cancelled now."

USED CAR FOR TARGET

Topeka, Kas., Nov. 26 — (AP)— Someone called police about a parked car riddled with bullet holes. Officers found the youth who owned the car had taken it out and used it as a target for rifle practice. It didn't run quite as well after the shooting, he admitted, but he intended to sell it for junk anyway.

London, Nov. 26. (CP Cable) — The Evening Standard today said that according to reports reaching Britain, Jacques Doriot, French Nazi leader in Paris, is dead.

Doriot was taken to hospital last Saturday after being attacked while having a meeting of his French popular party, a collaborationist group.

The Standard said that Doriot's speech, broadcast yesterday, was probably a recording, adding that there is no official confirmation of the report of his death "but circumstantial evidence is regarded as very strong".

'Swedish Angel' Wins Bout After Katan Disqualified For Attack on Referee Phil Lawson

Former British Empire Champion Wins First Fall of Bout

MONNAHAN WINS

World renown wrestling celebrities were introduced to nearly 2,000 grappling fans at the Rome Arena last night when Promoter Monoli, outstanding American wrestling promoter, and the "Swedish Angel", the game's No. 1 box office attraction—and monstrosity deluxe, headed the performance.

Now Monoli is co-manager of Mister Ugly and spent many anxious moment when John Katan, a Canadian and former Empire champion, not only gained the initial fall over the "freak", but in his over-anxiousness to make it two won bout and the accomplishment no other wrestler ever attained.

Katan, whom the patrons look a very marked dislike flattened Mister Ugly for a first round fall, but fell victim to the equalizer to even matters in a best two-in-three falls in the main attraction. All even Katan proved the aggressor in the final round and as he headed well towards victory, when his pent-up emotions proved his downfall as he reverted to unorthodox efforts and after being warned by Referee Phil Lawson actually went berserk, committed practical mayhem and finally attacked the night's official with ferocious and pugnacious attacks, that rendered Referee Lawson hors de combat. Straying to his feet under the attack Lawson finally managed to punish Katan and disqualify him according to the "British Angel" the winner, but it was the closest Mister Ugly came to losing his first bout. Chagrinned Katan aroused the ire of the fans as he flung his opponent to the floor, but finally police and cooler heads restored order and Mister Ugly still remains undefeated, insofar as wrestling is concerned.

Tried to Match Strength

In the early stages Katan tried to match strength with the "Angel" and failing to cope with the power-house efforts of Mister Ugly the Palermo strongman went to the under-handed attack and won the initial fall with the famed "Swedish Angel" hold and Canadian (?) one in difficulty early in the middle session, but his comeback effort proved his downfall as the "Swedish Angel" displayed the performance of the night's official with a full spread eagle hold. All even Katan was once more the aggressor in the final round and as headed well towards victory, when his pent-up emotions proved his downfall as he reverted to unorthodox efforts and after being warned by Referee Phil Lawson actually went berserk, committed practical mayhem and finally attacked the night's official with ferocious and pugnacious attacks, his lofty perch and kept up the verbal blasts, much to the discomfort of Mister Monnahan. With the snow over it was announced that Queensbury A. C. will be back to the Rome Arena with another all-star bout next Wednesday night and more fun for all.

HURRICANES MEET OTTAWA FLIERS FOR EAST TITLE

Hayman's Squad Swamps Balmy Beach 24-0 in Wednesday's Game

TOO MUCH POWER

(By ALAN HARVEY)

(CanaCan Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 26. (CP) — Flying Officer Lew Hayman's Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes took every bit as good today as Lew Hayman's Toronto Argonauts ever looked—and that's enthusiastic praise for Coach Dave Sprague and his Uplands Fliers.

Hurricanes displayed the paralyzing ground power and all-round, razzle-dazzle energy of great Argo teams of the past as they brushed aside Toronto Balmy Beach 24-0 yesterday in a sudden-death Canadian Rugby football championship final. Even to the extent of stabbing fumbles and wild laterals with iridescent finger and one thumb on the so-called "Argo Regime" the Skyhawks contributed an estimated 7,500 fans in Varsity Stadium that championship tilt. The Hurricanes, champions from Uplands Airport will have a home-and-home total-point series against Ottawa Rough Riders, champions of the Eastern final here Saturday.

Must Have Scored Thrilled

Coach Roy Threlfall and his Whirlwinds, R. C. A. F.-Bombers, waiting in the wings for a shot at the Eastern Championship, the Grey Cup final here Dec. 5, must have looked askance at that 24-0 score after Hayman's Argos turned back other Grey Cup challengers from Winnipeg in 1937 and 1938.

Hurricanes looked like the O.R.F.U.'s top team all season and finished that way, rolling up eight victories in ten league starts which included 40-6 and 30-10 conquests over Beaches. They made it official yesterday, stalling every dangerous Beach thrust and striking on their own behalf for three converted touchdowns, a placement, a safety touch and a single.

Race 65 Yards For Touch

Two of the top scorers were Beach graduates—AC2 Don Crowe with two converted touchdowns and Pt. Lt. Eddie Thompson with a placement and a convert. AC2 Jack Gaudaur raced 65 yards for the third touchdown after interrupting a Beach forward, Cpl. Fred Kijek contributed the single and the safety touch was scored when a Beach snapout rolled to the deadline.

Bit the shining star was Crowe. The former Richmond Hill, Ont., half teamed with AC2, Bill Stukus for a net gain of 83 yards in two straight second-quarter pass plays, taking the second over his shoulder and behind the balmy gael-ites. He scored his second touchdown on a 20-yard toss from Cpl. Claude Prince in the south quarter, adding the extra 15 yards for.

AC2 Jack Parry, Windsor, Ont., split to the Air Force backfield to set up Thompson's placement in the first quarter—on the third play of the game. Parry took a wonderful lateral from Thompson and swirled through virtually the entire Beach team for a 75-yard gain. Thompson missed his first placement attempt but connected three plays later.

Beaches looked good on only one occasion—early in the first quarter when Bill Dunnett, Bill Cook and Porter helped them move the sticks twice in five straight line plays.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Maybe it's the weather, but if so it's coast-to-coast. When young Nat New York debut in a National Hockey League game with Rangers, he didn't know until the second period, sheepishly explaining that he had been sleeping in his hotel and had not noticed until nine p.m. Nor some years ago did Vancouver Sun's Jimmy Peacock that Nino Barichello almost missed his chance in the main event of the season's first amateur fight card at Vancouver; for the same reason, the semi-windup was in the ring when Nino's mother shook him out of a sound snooze to ask if it wasn't that night he was supposed to box Jack Ellis. Barichello left so fast he forgot his ring togs, hastily borrowed some at the gym and maintained his top speed long enough to outpoint Jimmy Pillopone in four rounds. The amateur scrapping at Vancouver is somewhat at Vancouver and 1,500 fans saw the first card.

The Expert Says:

Bea (Montreal Star) - O'Mears the basketball star was married to Jack O'Neil, Red Wings: "There are those who will tell you that Howe is the most valuable player to his team in hockey. That is the exact truth, too, yet he seldom gets very many votes for the Hart trophy. It's all probability if you checked back over the time he has been in the game he has been the most valuable player to his team. Howe is the most outstanding player in the league. Opposing defencemen will tell you that Howe is the most dangerous of all wing forwards."

Puck Chatter:

Sgt. Regina Army withdrew temporarily from the Saskatchewan Senior Hockey League, Regina Canada Amateur Association players and were they surprised! They were prepared to enter the league with Al Kelly, Port Arthur Bearcats right winger, Al Collings, former New York Rovers star, Archie Wilder, ex-Detroit Red Wing, and many lesser lights. Then Army re-entered the league and the Air Force had a team with Bucko Harris, ex-Bruin, Ares Palle Cataracts of the Ontario Hockey Association and other subsidized jerseys—these formerly used by Toronto clubs of the Ontario professional league..... Truro, N.S., sport suffered a loss when Ab Cousins, Truro Bulldog baseball star, was transferred by his railway employers to Moncton. Cousins was playing coach of Truro Bearcats last puck season.

"Y" Cagers

This week's Nurses' League games produced more speed on the floor and still is shooting than any games to-date. Team-work is essential in basketball and as the weeks go by the teams become more familiar with each other's style and the play improves. Both games finished with top sixth-place the Purples beating the Reds 11-3 in the first game and the Blues nabbing the Golds 17-4 in the second. In neither case does the score indicate the play which was up and down the floor, the ball being in play just under the complete their plays as well as the winners. The teams:

Purples—Fletcher, Bonnier, 4; Cameron; R. Anderson, 1; Forster, 6; Total 11.

Reds—Misses Sharland, Young, 2; Hutchinson, Hamilton, Smeltzer, Embury, 1; Total 3.

Blues—Misses Smith, 3; Hanna, 4; Kilpatrick; Reid; Hutchinson, 2; Dennett, 8; Total 17.

Golds — Misses Anderson; Brownbridge, 2; Henderson; Holden, 2; Jones, Total 4.

CORNWALL ARMY MOVES BACK INTO FIRST POSITION

Win Close 1-0 Decision Over Montreal Canadiens at Montreal

FLIERS BEAT ROYALS

Montreal, Nov. 26—(CP)—Cornwall Army moved back into top place in the Canadian Senior Hockey League last night, when they won a close 1-0 decision over Montreal Canadiens while Montreal R.C.A.F. trounced Montreal Royals 5-1 in the other fixture.

The win put Cornwall one point up on Trois Rivieres Commandos, Air Force moved up to fifth place, ahead of Royals and Canadiens, who dropped down to joint-occupancy of the cellar.

Pte. Larry Thibeault's goal in the first minute of play gave Cornwall victory in the closing moments of the contain-ruler. He took a pass from Lt. Cpl. Steve Lazaro in front of goal.

Canadiens fought back powerfully during the middle stanza but unable to overcome the one-goal lead. Goalie Pte. Paul Bibeau performing beautifully in the Corn-wall net to earn his shutout.

The second game looked as though it was going to be a repetition of the opening affair as the first when neither team could click for a scoring punch. Fraser, Air Force hit their stride in the second.

R.C.A.F. Forward Middle started things rolling just as the period opened, leaving Goalie Bibeau helpless as the puck through the Royals unassisted for a goal. He added another in the closing minutes, with AC2 Eddie Emberg sandwiching one between.

Air Force didn't slow down a bit in the third frame, and rattled in two more counters before Royals could make their lone scoring bid, which was spoiled by Johnny Mahaffy with 22 seconds of play remaining.

DRILLON STILL HEADS SCORERS

His 15 Points Puts Him One Up on Patrick of Rangers

Montreal, Nov. 26—(CP) — It's still Drillon, Patrick, Stanley and O'Connor as the men to beat for the National Hockey League scoring lead, statistics released showed today.

Canadiens' Gordie Drillon is still atop the standings, the position he has occupied almost since the season's opening whistle. His 15 points put him one up on Lynn Patrick of Rangers, Bobby Bauer of Chicago and Buddy O'Connor of Canadiens, the trio who have been giving him his sternest competition right along.

Toronto's Sweeney Schriner and Art Jones have moved up fast in the last few games to within shooting distance of the leaders. Their points put them in a tie with Mud Brunsteun of Detroit, Bill Cowley of Boston and Phil Watson of Rangers.

Red Hamill of Chicago leads in goals, with nine while Drillon is tied with Gaye Stewart of Toronto with eight.

Jimmy Orlando has a clear edge for lead goals, with 21 minutes in majors and minors, a 10-minute misconduct and a match misconduct. His closest competitor is his defensive teammate on Detroit Red Wings, Jack Stewart with 18 minutes.

LEAFS LEADING SCORING HEAP

Tally 43 Goals and Setting Faster Pace Than Last Year

(By The Canadian Press)

The National Hockey League forwards are setting a faster pace this year and have batted in 62 more goals than last season at the same time. Statistics indicate that the red lights are flashing 211 times behind the goals while last year, excluding the Montreal Americans, 149 goals were scored.

Toronto Maple Leafs are leading the scoring heap with 43 goals to their credit, while the Chicago Red Wings are rolling along behind with 38. At the bottom of the pile, Boston Bruins have only 29 goals.

New York Rangers have had most goals scored against them with statistics indicating 45 while Montreal Canadiens have had 39 goals registered by their opponents. Turk Broda of Leafs has the best shooting record and has scored only five times across the red-line.

A hot spot, Bruins were leading the circuit with 18 points along with Leafs, but today the Boston Chicago Black Hawks are setting the pace.

Tonight's contests see Leafs facing Wings at Detroit and Rangers starting against Hawks at Chicago. Results of these games can change the leadership completely, a win for Toronto and defeat of Chicago would drop Leafs to keep to the top of the league; while a win for either one of the deadlocked Wings or Hawks would give them undisputed control of the loop.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.)

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Philadelphia, Nov. 26, (AP) — Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf of the Georgia skyrockers for a lot of optimism, especially for the Big Ten College Football coaches at yesterday's business meeting. . . . Several of the unbeatens weren't too happy about the prospect of carrying on their season with "Navy-style and technical students", but the Big Ten Football Coaches broke down with his explanations of how the Navy-style football has done in the pre-flight cadets. . . . "The average weight of the entire squad is around 185 and about 156 pounds", he pointed out. . . . "And you'd get a big kick out of seeing the way they pound kid put on a suit and without a helmet, start to scrimmage with anybody. . . . I enjoy it more than I used to when I saw real good players."

Quote, Unquote

Further opinions gathered from coaches at the meetings:—

Lou Little, Columbia: "If we had only intra-rural football the boys here would get tired of it. But if Columbia had it and Manhattan had it, there would be some fun. . . . my best intramural team would want to play Herb's best. . . . That's how football started".

Mal Stevens, ex-N.Y.U. Coach (wiring his regrets): "Every effort should be made to continue football, if and only if conducive to furthering the war effort".

Math Shark

Earle Edwards, Penn State Line coach, can't see about the time Bob Higgins tried to get his formula for touchdowns patented. . . . He was interested in classwork. . . . "Trouble with you, Larry", said Higgins, "if you want to do at night is sit around like a girl and tell the boys about that 65-yard run you made against (Bob picked one at Random) Lafayette in 1931". . . . Edwards named Joe protested immediately: "It wasn't 65 yards, coach; it was 80 yards".

IN GREAT NEED

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)—L. Dans Wilgress, recently appointed Canada's minister to Russia, said last night that Russia is greatly in need of comforts both for civilians and fighting men.

Mr. Wilgress, here to attend an aid-to-Russia rally tonight at which Wendell Willkie will speak, said he approved the movement for the people of Canada to assist citizens of the Soviet through contributions articles the government could not handle.

CASUAL COMMENT
by R.J.C.L

Grads Kingston Beths Bill Wasley with 7 . . . Alanis scores four in nightly oaks and little school . . . Lineup develops nightly hockey star.

Yes, the Kingston scribe thinks there's plenty of light upon why sports fans are flocking to Kingston these days and the entire solution is the "mushrooming of minor league hockey".

This week a minor hockey league, for boys under sixteen years of age, opened at the Jock Harty Arena with designated hours being allotted the kids for organized play. The arena officials take an interest in the welfare of the kids while the players assist in the coaching.

Incidentally Scribe Wahbe points with pride, and rightly so, to several professional puckstars, all of whom got their start in the minor hockey leagues in Kingston.

Without making mention of the Cook brothers, Bill refers to such players to the moment trade as Hank Goldup, the Maple Leaf star; Nick Knezik, Port Colborne star; Blake and Pat Patterson, all of whom have since turned professional after early hockey training in Kingston.

What both Peterborough Scribe Fred Cook and this department would like to know is why minor league sports are neglected in Peterborough and Belleville when Kingston sports heads have proven the success of fostering teen aged sports.

Trite enough the K.I.-T. sports scribe avers, of a number in this respect, but here the juvenile groups are look provided with efficient hockey games throughout a single season and again the K.-C. haven't the time to coach the boys. If members of the local senior team or veteran hockey players would assist in the tutoring, then perhaps the program would be a success.

Any hopes of Queen's University or a Kingston hockey team entering the circuits next year by Toronto papers were dashed on the rocks, if despair yesterday in an astute perusal by Mr. Wasley of the Kingston Whig-Standard . . . "Queen's will not enter the O.H.A. senior series, but will enter collegiate ruling against college teams travelling to Kingston to play town play and the collegians will be kept busy in their VanHorne athletic club."

"There was a report in Belleville and also in Kingston that Trinity would enter an O.H.A. senior "B" grouping with Oshawa, Cobourg and Peterborough, but Charles Hicks put the clubs official on the line when regarding the Kingston collegians.

With Peterborough homeless, concerning senior play, Hicks produced the last two O.H.A. senior "B" championship teams were from Lindsay. Mountain View Juveniles produced the last two O.H.A. junior "B" champions and Lindsay is now playing in a "service league" and the last O.H.A. junior competition until a star team is selected for the O.H.A. playdowns.

Remember when Percy Beacom, the hard-hitting right fielder of the Montreal Canadiens' hockey club, suffered a terrible fracture of his right leg in an automobile accident a year ago today? Tiny's hockey prognosis was that he would be ended when the motor car in which he was travelling struck a tree near Vallegield, Que.

He died it again . . . yes sir, Promoter Frank Tunney, who presented the Swedish Angel to local wrestling fans, but had Toots Mondt, his co-promoter, to thank for the privilege wasn't given "the business". However, it took the united efforts of Mondt, the angelic (?) one and Referee Phil Lawson to finally subdue John Kalan, the Palermo powerhouse, who accomplished something very few, if any, wrestlers ever did. Namely Kalan, flattened Master Ugly and back in not long for his lively antics and rather foolish attempt on Referee Lawson, by those and Belleville wrestling fans might have seen Master Funny Boy defeated. Kalan lost his own boat in his useless attacks on Lawson. Now the Queensway Pier promises another all-star show next Wednesday when goodness knows what may happen.

Only three batting champions in modern National League history attained their batting crowns with lower averages than .311, the figure recorded by Ernie Lombardi, of the Boston Braves and 1942 National League batting titlist. They were John Daubert of the Dodgers, who led the pittsmiths in 1914, with .329; Edd Roush of Cincinnati, with .321 in 1919, and Larry Doyle of the Giants, with .320 in 1918. Rogers Hornsby of the Phillies of 1910 took National League batting honors with the same figure fashioned by Lombardi in 1942.

THIS AND THAT . . . No matter how you look at it the Dominion football final for the Grey Cup will be staged on an Air Force program . . . Yesterday Lew Hofmann Toronto "Hurricanes" pushed the only civilian entry left in the running into oblivion as the Hurricanes blanked the Balmy Beach 36-0 . . . Incidentally Jack Parry, stormy backfielder for the Hurricanes was picked on the senior O.R.F.U. all-star team for 1942 . . . Parry, it will be recalled, played centre field and ran bases like a broken field runner for Amble Green's No. 8 T.S. softball nine there last summer . . . Parry rank first among the 72-yard gain for the Toronto Flyers yesterday . . . Left in the O.R.F.U. Dominion playdowns are Air Force squads from Toronto, Ottawa and Winnipeg . . . George Selkirk, Canadian-born Yankee outfielder, joined the United States Navy last week . . . By the time spring rolls around, the fans won't recognize the pasture of some of the Yankee Stadium outfield after a lapse of nearly 40 years . . . Columbia and Harvard schools will resume football relationships in 1943 . . . Tech dirt meeting was in 1877. . . . Cy Slapnicka, the oldest player on the New York Rangers, will captain the team this year, says Leader Patrick . . . Lefa Sewell has a one year contract to manage the St. Louis Browns in 1943 . . . The Browns finished third last season and are forever in close in one-two in 1942. . . . A little move of the same please.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Lady Has Plans"

Entertainment—in capital letters —is on its way to Belleville when the load of comedy, excellent and romance that is Paramount's hilarious spy-chase picture, "The Lady Has Plans," is unreeled at the Capitol theatre.

Ray Milland and Paulette Goddard now playing are co-starred and are supported by Roland Young, Albert Dekker, Margaret Hayes and Cecil Kellaway. The story revolves around Paulette, a reporter, who is mistaken for a spy known to have drawn on her back in invisible ink, plans stolen from the U.S. Navy. Every foreign agent in Lisbon is suddenly interested in Paulette's back, including Milland, the newscaster for whom she works. Milland's interest is romantic as well as patriotic, and the love story develops apace with the rapid-fire action.

"Hands Across The Rockies"

A lawless frontier ruled by flaming guns...a gun-fighter at the mercy of soft blue eyes! Wild Bill Elliott packs the thrills blazing action at fists and bullets blast a trail of hate across the terror-filled range! In "Hands Across the Rockies," the added western hit, newest in Columbia's Hickok adventure films, Bill Elliott's popularity as an outdoor action star climbs to new heights as he smashes a band of desert renegade to free the West ...with either terror! Lovely blonde Mary Daily, Columbia's newest starlet, completes the romantic interest, and Dub "Cannonball" Taylor contributes to Hickok's comedy-playing sidekick. Others in the top-flight cast are Kenneth McDonald, Frank LaRue, Donald Curtis, Stanley Brown, Slim Whitaker and Art Mix.

A funny cartoon and the serial "The Perils of Nyoka" complete another grand bill for all to see.

AT THE BELLE

"Ten Gentlemen from West Point"

A little known, but thrilling story of West Point has been gloriously brought to the screen in 20th Century-Fox's action-packed adventure film, "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" which opened last night at the Belle Theatre. Starring George Montgomery, Maureen O'Hara and John Sutton, the film has a patriotic theme that is bound to thrill every Canadian. It is a rousing successor to "To the Shores of Tripoli," and it scores through its pace without a hitch.

"The Magnificent Dope"

"The Magnificent Dope," 20th Century-Fox's hilarious display on the fetish fringes of American high-pressure "success schools" opened yesterday as the worthy second feature.

Henry Fonda, Don Ameche and Lissome Lynn Bari play the fun-fertile travesty to the hilt, with the result that from first guffaw to last, the zany pace never slackens.

The plot, briefly, concerns the machinations of Hank Fonda, a lazy bumpkin addicted to the bucolic life, who rups afoul of Don Ameche, fast-talking operator of a big city "Success School."

Hank is shy. He is unimpressed by the glittering lures of the metropolis. He, plainly, has no love for the beads of the commercial world. Yet, Dwight Dawson—Hank's alter-ego—to have his own skin, would convert him into the wanting type (in eight easy lessons) for all the world to see. And Lynn loves him—which adds to the confusion.

The whole affair is a riotous, tongue-in-cheek debate on the relative merits of the ideal and urban ways of life. Which means that "The Magnificent Dope" is magnificent film fare and a definitely superior sophisticated farce.

Edward Everett Horton tops a sparkling cast which includes George Barbier as "Olympic Champ," a clever color caricature is exhibited on the same program.

Japanese-Held Burma Bombed

New Delhi, India, Nov. 26 (CP)—Continuing the almost daily air blows against Japanese-held Burma, R.A.F. bombers effectively attacked the railway station at Myingyan and three enemy airfields yesterday and last night, a British headquarters communique said today.

In the morning raid on Myingyan, bombs were seen to burst on the main line and among station buildings," the communique said. No enemy aircraft challenged the raiders, Blenheim bombers and fighters.

Medium and heavy bombers were used last night to attack airfields at Heho, Mingaladon and Meiktila. Hits were observed on the targets at all three places and especially good results were noted at Mingaladon, the principal airdrome for Rangoon, and Heho.

Japanese night fighters gave battle and in the several combats that followed the latter were credited with shooting down one enemy plane and damaging several others, the communique said. From all operations one plane was reported missing.

Military Mission Arrives in Dakar

London, Nov. 26 — (CP) — The Vichy-controlled Paris radio said in a broadcast today that a United States Military Mission had arrived in Dakar, French West Africa, to talk over control of naval units and coastal batteries.

There was no Allied confirmation of this report. Yesterday an authoritative source in London indicated the problem of Dakar not only was not settled but might take some time.

Referring to Dakar's potential value to the United Nations, this authority said a delicate political situation involving French factions had to be unravelled before it could be determined whether the French fleet units at the West African Naval Base would fight with the Allies and whether the facilities of the base and port would be available to them.

CHAPTER 26

Hugh went away and Sonny appeared.

He stalked into the room, looking like a Swedish Stone Brought. "Say, what's going on around here? Why didn't you tell me you were coming to town to see me, Mr. Blake? I don't want you to spend the afternoon with my brother—"

"No?" said Stone, who almost showed indifference.

"I should have preferred seeing you in my own apartment, but as we are coming here, I live in it, and I'll do well to get used to it."

"You are moving about?"

"Yes, immediately. Hugh insists upon it. He is so lonely in this big place, without Alma—"

"Why, Mr.Cleed, Mr. McCleod is not lonely for you and your father to live with him. He does not want you to do so."

"He told you that? But Hugh has been my boy since he came to live with him. I make a great sacrifice in giving up my home and coming here, but I think, so, he prefers to do so; not that I mind it at all."

"You think that? Sonny's eyes showed plainly his disbelief. "Now, Miss Emmy, the thing your brother needs is a long trip, perhaps by water. You personally ought to take that trip, and see how it will make a new man of him. What is it you want to ask me about?"

"I can't let Hugh go away from me," she said, positively.

"It needs two with him. And you have Mr. Burt, your father. No, Mr. Sonny, don't leave Hugh. Stay with Stone; that is out of the question."

Stone was trying to pursue the subject further.

He then listened to Emmy's glowing account of the wonderful project that Mr. Murray had of—and stated her intention of accepting the offer without the unnecessary expense of a lawyer's assistance or the advice of a banker.

Stone told her she made a great mistake to pursue such a plan, and she would soon discover that if she attempted it he was sorry to say he could not undertake the business of buying the oil stock for her.

Sonny informed her was not such a simple process as that, and he would be glad to lay the matter before her brother when he returned from the obstacles.

Whereupon Sonny showed signs of temper and Stone gently but firmly put him in his place.

He went next to see Haynes at his home.

Stone's personality and manner always brought him a friendly welcome.

Haynes greeted Stone cordially. "Mighty glad to see you, sir," he said; "and if I can do anything to help you in gladder yet, for here is not Alma—"

Stone noticed the way in which he pronounced the name, and he had no further doubt that this was the man who had come into the living room next after Brand Herrick.

"Nothing, thank you. I went to tell you that I have brought that I learned that you purchased that diamond necklace."

"Yes, I did, and gave all my fancy jewelry to Alma. I don't wear it myself, you know. It was my mother Hugh didn't know it. But I make up stuff—"

"No, don't—"

Haynes looked at him. "Mr. Stone, does that make you suspect me of the murder?"

"Not at all," said Mr. Haynes, the murderer was the man who entered the room next after Brand. I have been out of you four men, whom I consider innocent, and I believe it very likely, probably. You say, it is your opinion that Herrick came in just after you were there?"

"Does Herrick deny that?"

"He does not deny it, but he thinks the man who entered his room after he was there—if it might have been you and he has a reason for keeping on."

"Mr. Stone, if I should tell you that I did go into the room by one door, as Brand was going out at the other, would you consider that the murderer?"

"It would be to a degree, evidence of your guilt."

"Why? Why do you and Mr. Poor decide that one or four things are to be suspected? There were others at the party. Other men went in and out."

"I have been informed that the last of you four who entered committed the crime. It was discovered immediately after."

"They haven't the time pinned down so closely as that, Mr. Stone. I did not kill that girl. I did not kill Mrs. McCleod. I took her in my hands, and I gave it to her; she adored it, and said, 'I shall tell Hugh that I bought this myself with my own money!' I agreed, as I would have agreed to anything she said. I was deeply in love with Mrs. McC. Stone. We all were. That may shock you, but it is true. No one knew that that girl without loving her and the more one strove against it, the more loving she became. Admiration was in her very life."

"Did she love any of you in return?"

"Yes; she! She just laughed if any one became serious and told her to clear out. And if he cleared out it was only to drift back again."

"Then whom does your suspicion fall?"

"I don't know, but I'll say one one but Brand Herrick! That chap is a cut above the rest of us. I mean he is honorable and clean-minded. He didn't fall for Alma's charms as the rest of us did, and that only made her try harder to get him."

Again Stone noticed the way in which Haynes pronounced the name, and he felt certain that he had come into the room after Brand, but he had not killed Mrs. McCleod. There was something about Haynes' voice or his manner of speaking that commanded confidence.

The detective was deeply troubled. He took a shot in the dark.

"Did you see a girl come in front tents were separated—just a trifle?" he said.

Van stared at him.

"Why," he began, "I've seen two or three in my life, I suppose, but not lately—half on, though. I mean the girl who was in the devil did I see her? Not long ago, but I can't tell where. It was at some, hotel, Why, gothamnight, it was at the McCleod party. But I don't know who she was. Not one of our crowd you bet."

"If the name comes to you, let me know. Didn't you dance with her?"

"No. But Cy Murray did. He was the only one I saw in that line. I remember, because I thought she disappeared. A Cinderella act, you know."

"Never mind; not likely she's the one I want to find. It has

"Probably not. She was a Lucy Gray sort of person. I was introduced to her, and did have a cute smile, and I noticed her teeth."

"All right, if you see her again, ask her what her name is."

Stone left young Hayes without telling him he was going to see Miss Malcolm. He was in the line for that gentleman's office.

When Stone announced himself, Murray said, almost gruffly, "What is it you want of me?"

"Just answer a few questions," said Stone, quietly. He took a seat without being asked.

"I'm exceedingly busy," Murray said. "Shall you be long about it?"

"It is not in death that I want to question Miss Malcolm. It has to do with a young lady who was at the party, but who did not belong to what Mrs. McCleod called her crowd. This young lady had a sweet smile, which showed her front teeth slightly separated. Do you know her?"

"I know the girl you mean. I never saw her before that night or since. Don't tell me she's mixed up in the murder?"

"No, indeed. It's another affair. What was this girl's name?"

"I don't remember. We flirted a bit, and we had a drink together, then went home early. She was with Miss Malcolm. Wait a minute, her name will come to me, I've got it. It is Una Deane. That's all I know about her."

"I'm glad to get that much information. Now the lady she went with, who was she?"

"Miss Malcolm, the artist. She's a landscape painter and stands pretty high, I believe."

"Do you know where I can find her?"

"I don't know where she lives, but I know she is one of the patronesses of that big school of Design on Madison Avenue. I guess the Deane girl studies there."

"Now, one last question—"

"I'd say about twenty-one or three, but I'm not certain. She isn't really pretty, but she has a nice way with her, and she knows how to dress."

So eager was Fleming Stone to carry on his investigations that student with separated teeth and so diminished was he to say anything to, Ogden Murray about his oil stock, that he left the office without mentioning either oil or Emmy.

He went straight home and sat down in his study to think things out. He hadn't much hope of the Una Deane clue, but he would be exciting to follow the hint Murray had given him.

The telephone bell rang.

Relieves Distress From FEMALE WEAKNESS
And Those Nerves Made Jumpy by Functional Disturbances

Thousands upon thousands of women have written us telling how they suffered from such symptoms of functional nervous disturbances—periodic pains, nervousness, dizziness, "irritability"—hot flashes, when due to this cause—who obtained most gratifying relief by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Tablets (with added iron).

Pinkham's Tablets not only relieve such distress, but they help build up resistance against it. They are also helpful up'ed Blood! Made in Canada.

SUFFERED CONSTANTLY WITH SOUR, ACID, UPSET STOMACH

Even Lightest Foods Gave Him Trouble With Indigestion, Gas Pains, Bilious Attacks, and Headaches. Tells of Splendid Relief by Taking Syntone.

MR. GEORGE ADAMSON

"Nobody but myself knows how much trouble I have had with stomach disorder and indigestion during the past few years," says Mr. George Adamson, Mount Elgin, Ontario.

"It got so bad that even the lightest food gave me trouble. It brought on belching and hot, sour, acid stomach. Often I suffered with bilious attacks which would be followed by a splitting headache. Sometimes when I ate a meal I was so miserable I could not get my mind off it. I was very nervous and would fret at the slightest thing.

"That is the condition I was in a few weeks ago before I began taking Syntone. Now all my troubles are gone. Nothing I eat gives me trouble. I would tell it to everyone how wonderful it is. The gas, soreness and sick feeling have left me and I sometimes eat things I never touched before. I can enjoy my meals now. I am feeling fully as well as I ever did."

We know that many people suffer as I did and certainly recommend that they try Syntone.

Syntone is the ideal system tonic. It is especially good for anyone suffering as Mr. Adamson did' kind, good, too, for anyone at this season of the year. It is made from the finest grade herbs and roots which aid in the elimination of excess acids and poisons, waste material and promote better assimilation of food for more strength and energy.

Syntone is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Community Fair By Bridge St. W. A. A Marked Success

Sponsored by the Women's Association of Bridge Street United Church, the Community Fair held last evening, in the Sunday School rooms was attended by a large crowd and all found the appeal of the fair features irresistible. The sale of home cooking proved a very original variety, while the attractive booth of each tenement was proclaimed in true midway style by the barker. Rocks coals and assorted costume touches.

Newton Thompson as the village constable and master of ceremonies welcomed the gathering and announced each of the organizations that the friendly atmosphere of the community fair would prevail. He introduced the barkers, H. O. Rose and Mrs. Buchanan, R. A. Hackborn, James Barclay, E. David, R. Grant, T. Franklin, V. White and C. H. Fisher.

A musical invitation was extended the visitors by Mr. James Bankier with his beautifully rendered solo "Down the Vale," Mr. Alec Gordon acting as accompanist.

Opens Fair

Dr. James Semple cordially welcomed the visitors and told of village fairs in Ireland in his early days. Dr. Semple expressed appreciation of the efforts of the W.A. in arranging this interesting and attractive affair, and proceeding such a decorative setting for the event. The fair was then announced to be officially open.

Such a variety of attractions awaited the visitors that all evening was taken up with making the rounds of the "stalls". There were the fish pond, white elephant booth, the home-baking booth, the Aunt Eastern bazaar atmosphere, the refreshment stands where popcorn, hot dogs, apple juice and doughnuts could be purchased.

Movies, in charge of Miss Souter; articles of handicraft, beautifully made; dart games with the targets the Axis conspirators, Hitler and Hirohito; and peeps through an old-fashioned sterescope; were some of the attractions.

Original Features

Attracting much interest was the Art Gallery in the preparation of which family albums had been produced. One saw prominent members of the congregation in the various stages of development from babyhood. A special booth was that of the Nickell sessions while a bound album of photographs which had been presented to the Hon. Billa Flint by the officers and teachers of W. A. of Belleville in 1864 was on view. A picture of Madame Nordica when she sang in Belleville, a portrait of Sir Gilbert Parker as a Church of England clergyman, were included in the hundreds of exhibits which were reported to by the barker as "maps of long ago".

The ever popular Mrs. Jarley's wax works was in charge of Miss Tuite with Miss Helen Sulman, Mrs. Jarley and Phillip Plaster as "Grace, the helper." Those taking part included in making the figures in the cabin and in their very beautiful costume they presented a very interesting sight. They included such historical characters as Mary, Queen of Scots, Richard the Lion-Hearted, Sir Walter Raleigh, Mother Goose Folks and other people of legendary fame.

The Modern Art Exhibit, the brain-child of Alec Gordon was a very clever feature. On entering the visitor was presented with a catalogue and then proceeded with the masterpieces described for instance as "Dear Sir Winker" was a piece of coal; or that "Sweet Sixteen" proved to be sixteen pieces of kindling wood. An object cataloged as "Self Portrait" was a mirror.

On the stage was a beautifully very clever tableau depicting a large gally colored umbrella, and garden flowers that were most realistic.

The very successful event was in charge of the W. A. Committee with Mrs. W. H. Fields, president, Mrs. R. O. Truman, Mrs. Thomas Barclay and Mrs. R. B. Morden, with every member of the Auxiliary interested enthusiastically into the plans and arrangements for the event.

THE WAR TODAY

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

A Moscow-based report from Berlin today tells of a new Russian assault in considerable force against the German lines south of Stalingrad to supplement the other new and increasing pressures which have been addressed across near Rzhev and in front of Stalingrad.

This seizure of the initiative by the Russians over such a wide front, at a time when the Germans have to face the two major problems of defending Tunis and of getting the soldiers in Russia into winter quarters, has given rise to satisfaction in Berlin.

Dispatches from Moscow—which has not yet announced the Kalinin or Rzhev attacks—show that the greatest pressure is on the Russian front, the one that has battered unsuccessfully at Stalingrad, is at least partially disorganized and under the strain of transport and ammunition and equipment.

Hitler must hold his Stalingrad position if at all possible. A major setback there would permit the Russians to follow the Don River westward and cut off and annihilate the powerful steel fingers the Nazi machine has stretched out in the direction of the Caucasus oil and minerals.

Reports are indications the Germans will attempt to fall back into previously-prepared positions, as they did last winter to Kharkov, and dig in for the winter surrounded by hedgehog defenses.

But such falling back is expensive. The Russians, according to the German radio, have accumulated new armies for the Moscow front, moving up reserves trained and equipped for back in the Urals and appear ready once again to exploit the advantage that accrues to them each time the German force is compelled by weather or other considerations to dig in. Stalingrad is at war with the land forces. Today the Germans and their Italian, Anglo-American air forces in North Africa give the Russians such an advantage.

The evening session opened at 7.30 with a song service conducted by Rev. W. J. Davis. The worship service was taken by Mr. Fred Searles and Rev. W. Howard Hall. A. F. Hall rendered a duet at this time.

Reported Truck Driver Says He Saw Car on Road

Cobourg, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP) — Investigation today into the slaying of William Wallace Cunningham, 40-year-old Toronto bachelor, and Mrs. Tony Pardella, 30-year-old Cobourg mother of five children revealed a few new angles in the mysterious case. Three persons have appeared far from solution.

Police said they have been told Cunningham's car, found near the scene of the slaying and laying close to the highway, is a motorcycle-type machine which was stolen yesterday. The bodies were found at 8 a.m. and police said they believe the killings occurred around 4 a.m.

Officers also said they were checking the reported story of a passing truck driver who said he saw a car parked beside the Cunningham automobile shortly before the shooting. Investigators also were checking reports had learned Mrs. Pardella had been seen talking to Cunningham on the night before the slayings.

The truck driver in question is reported to have told authorities that the second car appeared to have been parked on the driver's side of the road. Cunningham's car was parked on the shoulder in front of Cunningham's machine, indicating the possibility that Cunningham's car had been forced to halt at that point.

A second transport driver is reported to have seen the two cars at approximately the same time and to have said that he saw a well-dressed man talking eastward on the highway about 500 or 600 yards from the two vehicles.

Autopsies performed showed that Cunningham and Mrs. Pardella had been killed by a shotgun fired at close range.

JUSTICE MINISTER ENTERS CAMPAIGN

Tells of His Admiration for Gen. LaFleche, New Minister of National War Services

Montreal, Nov. 26—(CP) — The Justice Minister, Hon. Louis St. Laurent, entered the Nov. 30 federal by-election campaign in Outremont riding last night, in support of Hon. Ernest J. LaFleche, Minister of National War Services.

In a speech prepared for delivery over a Montreal radio station (CKAC) Mr. St. Laurent said he had intervened in the campaign for three reasons: First, because "the call of sorrow" as a Canadian citizen of French origin at the murder and "last" of speeches made by Gen. LaFleche's opponent "for one who supported him; second, because of his personal admiration for the new Minister of National War Services; and third, because of the importance that Parliament attached to an election result which would affirm the approval of the people to the total war policy and after-war preparations of the Government.

Gen. LaFleche is opposed in the campaign by Jean Drapeau, self-styled "candidate of the organizer," Marg Carriere, was arrested under the Defence of Canada regulations. The campaign speech here last week.)

Mr. St. Laurent said that it was "unfortunate" that the language used by those supporting Mr. Drapeau "did not reflect that of the people of all the races who live on Canadian soil." He said he was astounded ears of the whole continent united in praise of Gen. LaFleche's services.

Gen. LaFleche had been called upon to apply all his energies to the task of organizing "and it is known with what weight and justice he has applied himself to it."

"When it is said that it is a compliment to the Province of Quebec that its employed in the sense of forced conscription of wealth or of manhood," he said.

"It is also claimed that it is an indignity to Quebec because it is said that once enrolled, the almost 50,000 men in the forces will be sent to fight overseas. It is for this that my critics have chosen to attack me and my colleagues.

"There is no doubt that is true. There is no doubt that we have sent and will send troops. It is said that if the fate of their country requires their presence on the battle front, it is for the government to indicate it to them, and they will go there as a matter of duty, their prefer to enrol for service anywhere rather than overseas. I explain and will for the enemy to come here and spread destruction and death in Canada. That is the thing what Gen. Lafleche wished to do and that is why he left his home to join the inspiration which guided our heroes at Dieppe."

General Pleased With men Joining Reserve Units

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—(CP)—Satisfaction with the calibre of men who are joining the Reserve Army and the co-operation being given by reserve units by employers was expressed today by Maj.-Gen. W. H. S. Bowman, director-general of the Reserve Army, following a tour of Military District 10, Military District No. 3 (Kingston, Ont.)

"I was particularly pleased with the calibre of men who are joining the various Reserve units", he said in a statement; "in fact it was not an uncommon thing to find that this is typical of every district, to see bank managers, merchants, professional men of all classes and leading agriculturists, training together as privates. That's a democratic sign if there ever was one.

"The Reserve Army needs clear-thinking, intelligent men in its ranks to supplement the Active Army, training of necessity is not so intensive and therefore the time of absence is less.

"Should the Reserve ever be called on in the defence of this country it is necessary that the men who are in it have the intelligence and ability to grasp their training specially and efficiently."

Among manufacturers and other employers he had met, he added, that the men who forge the tools of war should also learn how to use them.

"The Reserve may yet be called upon actively to defend Canada", Gen. Browne said. "The Allied victories of recent weeks are a big step toward defeat of the Axis but much hard fighting is still to be done and the enemy may yet strike at Canada."

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT IS GRANTED

Crown Will be Asked to Show Why Accused Detained Under War Measures Act

Montreal, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Mr. Justice Pelletier granted a writ of habeas corpus to Private Leo Mantha, 24, of Montreal, Marc Carriere, detained under the War Measures Act, Carriere will appear in court at 11:00 tomorrow morning to show why he will be asked to show why he is being detained.

Military officials here said it was the first time a writ had been granted in Quebec for a case under the War Measures Act and pointed out it was the first time such a writ had been granted in Canada.

Motion for the writ was served Monday on the Quebec Attorney General and Wardens of Carriere's Montreal jail where Carriere has been in solitary confinement under Article 21 of the Defence of Canada Regulations following an order signed by the Acting Justice Minister . . . and pursuant to which he was taken for a writ of Habeas Corpus against that order . . .

In the campaign speech Carriere was quoted as saying that:

"Sometime ago I received my call-up notice . . . I don't like to talk about it."

Defence Counsel Noel Dorion yesterday said he was claim a right and a privilege to a British subject, to be heard in open court on the merits of the case since, this may be done only after the writ has been granted. The Federal authorities acted in keeping with Carriere's case. It seems that in this matter it was not Canada's security that was sought to be protected as much as a candidate's"

Immediately after his plea, which in a few minutes after the tribunal opened, the court recessed for five minutes.

TOULON FLEET SCUTTLED

Action Follows Axis Occupation Of Fr. Naval Base

62 Warships Sent to Bottom on Order Of Admiral DeLaborde State Vichy Broadcasts — Germans Admit Some Of Warships Are Scuttled

ALL OF FRANCE UNDER NAZI HEEL

By GLADWIN HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 27 —(AP)— French sailors scuttled the greater part of their powerful fleet in the Mediterranean harbor of Toulon at dawn today, the Vichy radio announced, French captains went down with their ships and French crews fought off German boarding parties a shiller moved in and occupied the naval base, the last bit of heretofore unoccupied France.

The battleships Dunkerque and Strasbourg and the cruisers Foch, Algerie, Duquesne and Jean de Vienne were among the 62 ships rent by mighty explosions as their motorized columns poured through the streets of Toulon and Nazi soldiers swarmed through blocks of strategic buildings in an apparent effort to seize the base and perhaps the fleet by surprise.

As an excuse Hitler accused the French, in a letter to aged Marshal Petain, of having ordered the French forces there not to resist if British or American forces landed.

"Tonight, rather than the wreckage by fire and explosive, a Vichy broadcast said, the harbor was a smoking ruin, its coastal batteries, arsenals and other works shattered along with the ships.

"All the captains stood on the bridge until their ships sank; most of them lost their lives," said the broadcast, and many lives were lost both among the defenders and the Germans when the crews opened fire to hold off the Germans until the scuttling could be accomplished.

This sudden stroke, in violation of Hitler's specific promise, provoked the first officially-recorded resistance to the Germans by French armed forces on home soil since the armistice of Compiegne in 1940.

It was the final bid by Frenchmen for their liberties, for with it the last trace of their sovereignty was obliterated, the last spot of unoccupied France snatched and the whole country turned over to Nazi military rule.

A German communique frankly attributed the step, jointly ordered by Hitler and Mussolini, to fear of the growing Allied might in North Africa and the refusal of French armed forces to submit to the Axis will.

An accompanying letter to Marshal Petain informed the French Chief of State that Field Marshal Von Rundstedt "will be in charge of all measures deemed necessary and will make all decisions in French territory."

All French naval and army forces were demobilized by Hitler's order. Yet armistice of 1940 allowed France an army of 80,000 men.

The order to enter Toulon was given by the Axis war leaders last night "to prevent the French fleet from putting to sea as planned and to demolish immun contingents of the French army," it said.

The Vichy station broadcast this excerpt from the letter in which Hitler notified the French Chief of State of the decision to occupy Toulon:

"On November 12, 1942, orders were given by French authorities to the defences at Toulon not to open

Germans Strip French R. Roads of Equipment

London, Nov. 27 (CP)—Germany has requisitioned more than 1,000 locomotives, 800 passenger coaches, and 60,000 cars from the French railway lines in recent months, Secretary B. S. Townrse of the United Association of Cross Britain and France told his organization today.

The association is one of the principal organizations for promoting goodwill between France and Britain.

The German requisitioning, coupled with serious shortages or oil and coal, had persistent R.A.F. attacks on trains, had caused a serious transport crisis in France which is leading to bad distribution of food supplies and greatly increased sufferings of the French during the coming Winter."

'Hitler's Problem Is How to Parry Our Strokes'

London, Nov. 27 (CP) — Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Secretary, told the Foreign Press Association today that "the dispositions of the German high command" now are conforming to the will of the Allies.

"Twice within a month the German army has been soundly beaten," he said. "In addition the German high command has been outwitted, and out-maneuvered in North Africa."

INFANTRY CORPS IN ACTIVE ARMY TO BE FORMED

Puts Infantry On Same Organization Basis as Other Branches of Service

RETAIN REGT. NAMES

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP)—Formation of a corps of infantry in the Canadian (Active) Army was announced today by the Defence Minister, Hon. J. L. Ralston in a statement from defence headquarters.

The move puts the infantry on the same organization basis as the artillery, engineers, signals armored corps, medicals and other branches of the army which are all on a corps rather than a regimental basis or organization.

When the infantry goes into being infantry soldiers will belong to their corps and not to a particular battalion just as artillerymen belong to the artillery and not to a particular regiment or battery. They will be completely interchangeable between units at the will of the higher command.

Regimental names and traditions, however, will not be discarded. On the contrary, the departmental statement quotes Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of the General Staff, as saying the new system is designed to preserve them.

Toronto, Nov. 27, (CP — Retailers should be seeking ways of curtailing non-essential services, on their own account, rather than waiting for government restrictions, E. G. ## LITTLE REQUESTED WIDER POWERS IN MEMORANDUM

Humphrey Mitchell, Labor Minister, Releases Little's Document

MAJOR PROPOSALS

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP)—A 73-page memorandum on proposed manpower regulations submitted by Elliott M. Little the day before he resigned as National Selective Service Director — A which would have provided the director with much wider powers if it were adopted—was made public today by Labor Minister Mitchell.

The plan provided authority for the Director of National Selective Service to "take such steps as may be necessary to ensure the most efficient use of manpower by employers, other than His Majesty in the right of Canada."

After consultation with the armed forces and government departments concerned with manpower, the director would be empowered to "recommend to the proper authorities action as, in his opinion, is necessary to co-ordinate the most efficient use of manpower by employers, other than His Majesty in the right of Canada."

She'd Hold Nazis Till Aid Arrived

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (CP — The elderly postmistress at a little settlement on an inland cape jutting into the Atlantic wrote to headquarters of the R.C.A.F., Aircraft Detection Corps, offering her services as an observer.

But, she said, she didn't have a gun and there wasn't one to be found around. Would the A.D.C. send a gun and some ammunition by return mail? "I'll hold off any Germans that might land here until help comes," she said.

The A.D.C. gladly listed her as an observer but said any gunnery involved will be left to the fighting services.

JAPS REINFORCE BUNA-GONA AREA WITH MARINES

Allies, However, Make Gains Yard by Yard and Gun by Gun

DARWIN RAIDED

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters in Australia, (AP)—Reinforced by strong and well-equipped marine units, Japanese troops crammed into the narrow Buna-Gona beachhead are holding their major positions in the face of day-long air assaults and steady but slightly-shaded pressure from Allied ground forces.

Comparatively meagre official reports from the New Guinea battle zone showed little geographical change in the battle picture in the past 24 hours.

But a check on the Japanese dead confirmed earlier indications that the enemy, despite severe blows by Allied aerial marauders, has succeeded in bringing reinforcements into action.

During the night of Nov. 19 Allied bombers have sunk a Japanese cruiser and destroyer and left a landing boats, have heavily hit and damaged another cruiser and have damaged another moving toward the battle ground in Milne Bay, Lieut. Gen. Tomatore Hori's hands.

(A dispatch from the New Guinea front said Japanese reinforcements and "beautifully-placed demolition bombs" were being landed on canoe troops in the Papuan Peninsula campaign.

(Gains were made tortuously, by inches and feet. Enemy gun positions fell slowly, one by one.)

DANGER GROWS FOR NAZI FORCES AT STALINGRAD

Fast-Moving Russian Columns Cut Across Besiegers' Supply Lines West of City

CASUALTIES MOUNT

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Nov. 27—(AP)—Danger deepened hourly for Hitler's battered spearhead at Stalingrad today, the latest battle dispatches indicated, as fast-moving Russian troops into the aggressive Red Army garrison over a newly-won land route and fast-wheeling field columns cut across the besiegers' lifelines to the west.

A confused war of movement swirled across the broad steppes west of Stalingrad and it was impossible to define battle lines clearly, but overnight dispatches said that in some places the Red offensive was gaining such momentum that fleeing Germans were frustrated in efforts to form aerial on fields overwhelmed too swiftly for withdrawals.

Dozens of planes were reported captured intact at one airdrome in a sector described only as hilly.

Overnight reports pushed to 113,000 the number of Axis soldiers said to have been killed or captured in the nine-day-old drive, (AP)— and 100,000 wounded.

The German radio not only acknowledged the Russians remained on the offensive around Stalingrad but announced the electric sports of a major Soviet drive on the Volga city of Rzhev some 600 miles to the north.

BLAMES INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—International trade which permitted United States industrialists to ship iron ore from Labrador to Japan only weeks before the attack on Pearl Harbor is "mainly responsible for present world conditions." Howard Cowden of Kansas City, Mo., resigned told the annual convention of the United Farmers' Co-operative Conference here.

"We do not want such a system after this war," said Mr. Cowden, president of Consumers Co-operative Refineries, in an address to the convention.

Mr. Cowden said that the movement was led by "two disgruntled ex-cabinet ministers."

"I am not naming them, but the Globe and Mail said it was understood that Hon. Charles Dunning and Hon. C. Nixon, former Provincial Secretary and Sir Eric W. Cotton, former Minister of Public Welfare and Municipal Affairs.

"In my judgment the members did exactly what the people of Ontario expected of them in voting to support the government," Mr. Hepburn was quoted.

Wide-Ranging R.A.F. Planes Cause Much Damage in Enemy Territory

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP)—Freight trains in Northern France, ships off the coast of Holland and war industries at Turin, Italy and Stuttgart, Germany, were rocked with explosives dropped by men of the R.C.A.F. during the past week.

This weekly communique on operations of the R.C.A.F. based in Great Britain, issued today, described a wide variety of operations in which Canadian-manned bombers, fighters, coastal patrol and army co-operations planes took part.

Nov. 20 was the busiest day of the week. On that night R.C.A.F. bomber squadrons took part in raids on both Italy and Germany. During the day coastal command planes participated in an attack on the heavily-defended port of enemy ships near The Hague and fighters made a daylight sortie over Holland and attacked a heated camp on the coast.

During the morning of the same day Mustangs of an R.C.A.F. army co-operation squadron had attacked locomotives and freight cars near Coutances on the Cherbourg Peninsula in France.

"Some of our bomber squadrons flew on both night raids on both Germany and Italy on the night of Nov. 20," said the communique. "They formed part of a styling force which made a concentrated attack on the great industrial city of Turin in northern Italy."

Two nights later Canadian bomber squadrons were over the German industrial city of Stuttgart which, with its engineering works, freight yards and railway repair shops, is an important industrial centre.

Clash With Axis Forces at Mateur 25 Miles South Of Bizerte

STRONG AIR SUPPORT

London, Nov. 27. (CP) —Allied spearheads were reported today to have lanced to a point 15 miles from Tunis and to have clashed with Axis forces at Mateur, a communicating junction 25 miles south of Bizerte, in an effort to drive a wedge between the fortified capital and the naval base of Tunisia.

Both developments were announced in a Berlin radio broadcast.

The position of the force striking at Tunis was not stated, but an Allied communique today had announced that British 1st Army troops, striking northeastward, had captured Majes El Bab, 30 miles southwest of Tunis, after stiff resistance and was "advancing successfully".

HEPBURN'S VIEW OF CAUCUS VOTE

Says Postponement of Convention Means Rout of Prime Minister King's Forces

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Provincial Treasurer and former Premier of Ontario, said last night that in the decision of the caucus of Ontario Liberal M.P.P.'s Wednesday to support the government during the coming session and to postpone a party convention until spring he saw a "complete rout of the forces of Prime Minister Mackenzie) King forces."

"In an interview with the Toronto Globe and Mail. Mr. Hepburn said: "Up to the moment the members went into caucus, there was a persistent lobby by prominent Liberals for a party convention Federal Liberal interests to be represented there and to force a general election."

"The caucus member, who resigned Oct. 21 and was succeeded by Mr. Conant said that the movement was led by "two disgruntled ex-cabinet ministers."

"I am not naming them, but the Globe and Mail said it was understood that Hon. Charles Dunning and Hon. C. Nixon, former Provincial Secretary and Sir Eric W. Cotton, former Minister of Public Welfare and Municipal Affairs.

"In my judgment the members did exactly what the people of Ontario expected of them in voting to support the government," Mr. Hepburn was quoted.

Great Prize Slips From Axis Grasp

The prize Hitler was after in occupying Toulon was the most important French naval base on the Mediterranean and 62 units of the French fleet, including three capital ships, believed to be there.

Admiral Darlan, who was alignment himself with the Allies, had broadcast appeals for the French warships to steam for "Allied bases; the Petain regime has made counter-efforts to keep them from doing so.

These men-of-war possession of which by either side could, on paper, tip the balance of naval power in the Mediterranean theatre, include the battleships Strasbourg, Provence and Dunkerque.

Other units include cruisers, destroyers, submarines and auxiliaries.

Toulon itself is of tremendous importance, lying as it does less than 400 miles across the Mediterranean from Allied-occupied Algeria. Nazi hands in the base could be of great aid to Hitler in meeting an Allied invasion from across North Africa.

The 62 French warships based at Toulon are believed to include three battleships, the 26,000-ton Strasbourg and Dunkerque, and the 22,000-ton Provence.

The other ships set believed to be:

Four heavy cruisers, each of 10,000 tons; three light, 7,900-ton cruisers, a 10,000-ton seaplane tender, 28 destroyers and 26 submarines, sloops and auxiliaries.

An overheated stove is blamed by firemen to be the cause of a minor blaze at the home of Mrs. Lena Hall, 19 Baldwin Street at 9:30 this morning when smoke issued from the kitchen because an outside kitchen became ablaze and fired clothes hanging on a line well. Damage to the wall was slight, as the fire was quickly extinguished upon the arrival of firemen.

At midnight on Thursday an alarm was received calling the department to the shoe repair shop operated by D. Kentish, 180 Front Street, but no fire was discovered, only smoke being in evidence.

CHEESE EXHIBIT WILL BE LARGER THAN LAST YEAR

Contrary to previous reports, the number of cheese received at headquarters of the British Empire Cheese Show for the 1942 exhibition show starting next Monday is above that of last year, it was reported on Thursday by Chief Daily Grader J. C. Irvine. Approximately 100 more cheese will be on exhibition this year than last, it was stated.

Workmen were busy today completing the job of placing the cheese into tables in readiness for judging which was expected to get underway Friday morning. The exhibition room in the Riggs Garage next to the Hotel Quinte is being decorated by the two artists whose work last year evinced much favorable comment, Walter Baker and Don Lee, and visitors will be assured the usual appropriate display when the show room is opened to the public on Monday.

Won't Be Out For Christmas

It was another case of "out again, in again," for John King, Peterborough, when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on a charge of intoxication here today.

This man only got out of Jail Thursday morning after serving 14 days on a drunk charge. He was arrested for imbibing too freely of intoxicants late Thursday afternoon," revealed Deputy Chief Harman after King pleaded guilty to a second charge of intoxication and was sentenced to serve one month in the Belleville Jail in default of payment of a $50.00 fine.

"Think you might get it so I would be out for Christmas?" pleaded King.

"Sorry, but it looks as though you'll be just a day late," remarked Deputy Chief Harman. Mr. Lloyd, K.C., as he glanced at the court calendar to observe that he was arrested on November 26th.

At the time Parks pleaded guilty and was granted a month's enlargement during which time he promised to raise $15 to make restitution.

"I understand he has joined the army," revealed Deputy Chief Harman.

"He should have the money to pay for the glass by now. After all he has a decent job and will have to make restitution", added Crown Attorney J. R. Deacon, K.C.

Following His Worship's warning a warrant for Parks' apprehension was issued.

Belleville Cheese Board Adjourns For the Season

Members of the Belleville Cheese Board voted for adjournment for the season at the meeting held on Thursday night's session at which the number of cheese boarded sufferred a decided drop from the previous board two weeks ago. A considerable number of the boards were not represented at the board, while others boarded cheese only for the one week, signifying there would be none offered for next week.

For the balance of the season the different factory heads will therefore make their own arrangements for the sale of their cheese though the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has granted the right to factories at 30 cents per pound on the shipping point.

While the cheese not to be forwarded to the Dairy Products Board for shipment overseas, factors at last evening's cheese board meeting were not restricted to any quota in their purchase of cheese. Buyers present were Canada Packers' bid being accepted for the entire board offering. The factories, however, declined to sell their cheese and made separate sales to buyers following the adjournment of the board.

REV. I. G. HORNSBY IS INDUCTED AT ST. ANDREW'S

Impressive Ceremony Is Attended by Large Congregation

MINISTER WELCOMED

Rev. J. Gotorth Hornsby, formerly of Owen Sound, was inducted into the pastoral charge of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Belleville, on Thursday evening in the presence of the moderator and members of the presbytery, and a large congregation.

Rev. J. D. McDonald, Rodlin, clerk of the presbytery, prior to the opening of the service declared that the meeting would proceed immediately with the induction, after singing a psalm selection, the choir and moderator and the minister entered the church when the Moderator Rev. Dr. Wilson Walker of Toronto opened the service.

The sermon was delivered by the Rev. R. Lorne Riddle on the theme of the call to serve Christ. Speaking of the induction service that young men might be brought face to face with the duty and the decision when a man follows the Master. Andrew and Mr. Lorent were because one of the great lights of the church but it was he who brought Simon Peter unto Christ. The church needs such as Andrew today in its hour of need, a word for Christ, men who make soul-winning their business.

Rev. D. McMeekin, interim moderator during the vacancy of the pastoral charge, then took charge to fill the charge.

Induction Ceremony

The moderator thereupon proceeded with the induction of the congregation and the managers and elders stood. The new minister was given the charge by the moderator.

After the singing of the induction hymn, "Peace Unto This House" by Rev. H. S. Graham delivered the charge to the people of the newly inducted minister. Rev. Mr. Graham pointed out that the people had a definite role in delivering the charge as he was himself a member of the church and also a brother of the Kirk session. He stressed the importance of the office of minister, which Mr. Graham said is not a business enterprise but a spiritual moral leader and above all a minister of the Gospel. The minister is a prophet, one who speaks for God in the sight of men, and speaks for Christ and His cross. The minister is to be married as a man of God.

Rev. R. C. Mackay addressed the congregation stressing friendship and goodwill due to the minister and bespoke the sympathetic cooperation of the people, as managers, teachers, officers of church organizations and members of the congregation.

"The more you give of yourself to your minister the more he will be able to give you in return," said Mr. MacKay.

The moderator congratulated Mr. Hornsby on his induction to the beautiful church of St. Andrew's which occupies a strategic place in the Province and extended salutations of the congregation on Mr. Hornsby's acceptance of the call.

With the hymn "O God of Bethel" the service was brought to a close pronouncing the benediction. The minister and Mrs. Hornsby proceeded to the entrance of the church and met the members of the congregation.

6 ARE NOMINATED

Referring to his opponent, Alderman Rollins, the mayor stated that he had "nothing" to say. He had nothing against him and if he wins this fight, he will still be my personal friend.

He paid a fine tribute to the late Mayor Wills and stated that things could not have happened the way they did without the cooperation of my fellow councillors. "I urge the election of Mr. Rollins to carefully study the aldermanic candidates and exercise great care in the selection of aldermen. A mayor cannot do much without the cooperation of the aldermen."

The mayor stated that in his term of office with the able assistance of council, he was able to reduce the tax rate in 1-3 mills in three years, but that he declared "is a pretty good record. Peterborough has reduced its rate by thirty mills and I will not be satisfied, if I am re-elected, until Belleville has its rate down to a comparable size. The picture here is much better than it was three years ago and I urge a pay-as-you-go policy."

Alderman Rollins

"I am not entering the candidature for mayor in a personal fight against Mayor Thompson," Alderman Rollins said in his opening address. "I feel that I am concerned it will be a straight clean fight with no personalities. I am glad to see that since 1937 when the tax was 48.9 mills. Belleville is at 37, but that is not together been due to the present mayor and council. The rate has been reduced through the retirement of debentures and some credit must go to the previous mayors and councils for the good work they did.

True, former councils issued debentures but the result today is that we have 27 new schools, parks and educational buildings.

In a tribute to the present council, Alderman Rollins stated it had estimated its business on a conservative basis. Chairmen had stayed within their budgets and came out with a credit which has aided the taxpayer.

He appealed to the electors to vote. "Let us keep on with a good sane administration and make further gradual reductions in the tax rate. I would like to see it down to thirty mills now, but I don't think that can be done next year".

He urged the grant of preparation for post-war conditions, and the mapping out of a programme that will cover the next twenty years.

Alderman Rollins closed by stating the office of mayor", Alderman Rollins concluded; "is because when I am elected I will give my ambition to work my way to the top. The mayor's position is an honor but I believe it should not be held more than two years by the same man. If you think I can do the job, vote for me. If you think another chairman can do the job better than I, then vote for him."

Alderman Clarke

"I appreciate the honor of being nominated for the fourth time and have lived in Belleville 73 years and like a younger man should have the job", Alderman Clarke told the meeting.

Declaring you elect of these two men, you will get a good council, Alderman Thompson we have had good leadership. He has given a large part of his time for the taxpayers. Alderman Rollins has been an excellent chairman and it is my sincere regret that whatever the outcome, we shall not have the benefit of his knowledge good official at the end of this election".

Reviewing the work of the present council he said it had performed favorably with any previous one. It has not issued any debentures in the four small ones amounting to $10,000 must be issued next year. It had retired a great many debentures and as a result Belleville's credit is the best found anywhere in the province.

Not all the credit for tax reductions goes to previous councils, he said. The present one has retired the rate 4 1-2 mills but it had had to compensate for the non-payment of taxes. It will rate in 1943 but predicted a further reduction.

Mayor Thompson in rebuttal stated that if the present council had issued debentures along the same lines as some previous one, no tax reduction could have been made. He did not agree with Alderman Rollins that the office of mayor should be limited to one or two terms.

"In other parts of Ontario some mayors have been in office for a number of years. A good man cannot stay in office too long if he is doing the job the way it should be said.

The mayor George Reid started his brief address by taking issue with Alderman Thompson's election questions. Chairman Woodley interposed and that the campaign of such points were to be avoided and remarks confined strictly to the issue. "I want to put my decision," Mr. Reid stated and took his seat.

W. C. MIKEL, K.C.

He laugh-provoking lighter vein, replete with gems of traditional Athenian oratory and humor, Mr. W. C. Mikel addressed the gathering of the "28 gentlemen and two ladies, who had braved this chilly winter evening to participate in this great public function".

"It must be a tribute to the council", he said, "when so few turn out to criticize, it surely means council has pursued an entirely satisfactory course".

His remarks continued, amid laughter, "that we must lose one of these two estimable gentlemen who have served public administration so well. Mayor Thompson's and Alderman Rollins' remarks not only from you people but from themselves as well.

Now, if these two gentlemen would drop out and leave the field to me. Belleville would still have a good mayor, am prepared to take the position and the affairs of the city would be carried on in the same efficient manner".

"I am willing to make tremendous sacrifices", he continued amid laughter, "and I know the electors men of their onerous duties. There is no reason why they should be forced to carry on for two years. They should be given the opportunity to look after their own families, attend bridge parties, and the many things they have missed during their hardships of office. That should reflect upon my office when they have given their all for the city in sacrifice and work. I will therefore endeavor to cross the youth of labor with an old age pension".

"I am willing to sacrifice myself for the good of the town. You should be willing to reward my sacrifice".

He touched upon the possibilities of a great "Quinte City", and urged Belleville to take a broader view of things.

The great stream of water should flow down the Moira twenty-four hours a day to give its residents, "every drop of water", he said.

At this point Mr. Reid jumped to his feet and thanked the gathering that the speaker be forced to desist from remarks pertaining to Hydro.

"I'll admit", replied Mr. Mikel. "I'll admit there is anything that smells like Hydro".

INFANTRY CORPS

Maj.-Gen. H. F. G. Letson, Adjutant-General, explained this in practice. "Infantry corps principle is that regimental titles and integrity will be maintained, that officers will be commissioned to the corps, will name their preference for the unit to which they are to be attached but not necessarily be posted to that unit; that uniform training of officers and therefore of men will be founded on that tradesmen can be posted according to needs; that the corps spirit will be fostered but that unit and territorial choice on enlistment of all ranks will be followed to the limit that fullest efficiency will allow."

This step is considered a logical consequence of the more vital and consolidated role assigned to the infantry in modern mechanized warfare. Today's infantry is hard-hitting, mobile, scientific and has been modernized and streamlined in far greater degree than is generally understood, the statement said.

Need Tradesmen

The infantry units of today need a lot of tradesmen and specialists. The average infantry soldier must know how to use a variety of weapons—not only the rifle and the bayonet of other days but the machine gun, the mortar, the grenade the Tommy gun, the anti-tank rifle.

When enemy planes streak by 40 or 50 feet over his head, the groundstaffing him with cannon and machine gun fire, the modern infantryman knows what to do.

The statement said armored units will lead Canada's streamlined army when it goes into action. They afford final victory will rest on the skill, spirit and fighting qualities of the infantry and the gun group. It will not be necessary to keep track of every man as a member of a particular battalion, only as a member of the corps.

Promotions More Equitable

Fulfilling the whole of the army's infantry into a single corps will make it possible to provide an equal distribution between the different units of the skilled and unskilled. It will make promotions throughout the army more equitable; in that commissioned and non-commissioned officers may qualified for promotion may be shifted from one unit to another instead of having to wait until vacancies occur in their own units while other units possibly promotion have fallen them.

If new infantry units are formed said the announcement, under the corps system they will be supplied with men by (1) direct enlistment to the unit; (2) by transfer from the infantry schools; (3) transfer from the corps pool.

The proposal has been under consideration by the general staff for a long time and by a coincidence the British army arrived at the same decision at almost the same time and has recently organized its infantry into a corps.

About two years ago when the Canadian Armored Corps was formed many of the country's active cavalry units and later some infantry battalions were absorbed into it. Thely former separate existence as regiments which, in reality are simply small corps, came to an end but their former regimental names are preserved.

They now run somethine like that: 1st Armored Regiment (. . . Dragoons) with the old name in brackets. It is not proposed to adopt this new nanine practice in the infantry at once but it may come later.

Many Officers Shifted

In actual practice, for some time the active army division have operated on the corps principle. The divisional commanders makine promotions of officers in the divisional regimental list. Few if any of the battalion commanders in the army overseas were formerly with the units they command. Almost all have been shifted from other units as vacancies occur.

Now that system will be availed thiroughout the army. Promotion to corps as the standard practice. For non-commissioned officers of the rank of warrant officer class II and under promotions will be handled by unit and brigade commanders as at present. Above that rank divisional officers command, but will handle promotions and on all nominations for commissions from the ranks corps authorities will decide.

"There is a very great need for a corps of infantry in the active army," said Gen. Letson, "but we do not yet quite ready for the reserve army but that may come later."

ATTEMPT TO DRIVE

Mateur is athwart the railway line and one of the highways between Tunis and Bizerte, in which Allied forces have driven the majority of German and Italian troops in Tunisia. It is 40 miles south of Bizerte and 25 miles westward, toward the Mediterranean coast, from Djedeida, another town between Bizerte and Tunis.

Allied airmen raided all ground engagements this far, fought amid the mountains of the Tunisian northern season, have been on a small scale. It reported the French forces under Gen. Alphonse Juin's command were advancing rapidly eastward in co-operation with the British 1st American program.

Need For Increased Speed

The need for disciplined speed was indicated by German and Italian headquarters communiques from Libya and Sicily which, despite Allied air and sea attacks were shortening the manpower odds.

Authoritative London quarters estimated that the new push about 30,000 men in Northern Tunisia, several thousand more read to board transports in Sicily and between 2,000 and 4,000 transferred from Western Libya to man coastal defences. Between the British, French and American divisions, perhaps 150,000 men—of Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Anderson.

"Allied aircraft have provided unprecedented support for offensive operations on the ground", the Allied headquarters communique said.

18 Enemy Planes Downed

It reported 10 enemy planes were believed destroyed on the ground in a United States air force attack upon the Tunis airdrome early yesterday and R.A.F. squadrons the day before "conducted several sweeps, destroying a minimum of 12 enemy aircraft for a loss of seven of our aircraft".

Airmen also said to have found the Tunis airdrome littered with the planes destroyed in previous raids.

"Our planes encountered heavy machine-gun fire from the ground, but no fighter opposition," it was announced.

Although the communique mentioned only the capture of Mejez El Bab, the Vichy radio said Allied vanguards were within 21 miles of Tunis at one point, implying an eight-mile penetration of what Axis defences roughly thirty miles from Bizerte and the capital. Military works built lon, ago by the French, however, are said to be formidable barriers against the advance.

Wet Season Coming On

Reinforcements moving from Algeria reported by Reuters news agency to be contending with the initial bad weather of the wet season. "The 1st Army, however, has covered more than 300 miles of difficult country in a week. The Montcalm radio said the Allied air attacks were pressed through "wind, rain and sleet."

The Axis also claimed aerial success.

Without confirmation from Allied quarters, a trans-ocean dispatch from Berlin to Madrid said 400 raiding planes had sunk 64,000 tons of Allied transports off French North Africa and in the Western Mediterranean, the period was not specified.

Selected French pilots in Morocco are being equipped with new pursuit planes and they are expected to be "a great help on the side in the coming campaign," a visitor declared. American officers said at Casablanca. Gen. Lahoulle was described as co-operative.

Repercussions persisted from Allied approval of an arrangement under which Admiral Jean Darlan became civil administrator of French North Africa.

London political circles said Gen. Charles De Gaulle, veteran leader of the Fighting French, is expected to make a strong personal appeal to Washington for a change in Darlan's status.

Ethiopia Makes Demand

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden refused a demand yesterday by minority members of the House of Commons for time to debate a motion expressing disapproval of the Darlan plan, which President Roosevelt said was a temporary wartime expedient.

Pledges of the final destruction of Hitler are made by high officers of the British and United States navies in Thanksgiving Day addresses before the American Society in London.

Sir A. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, commented that "today air power has been added as power," and

"The continental powers gambled on the false premise, that shorebased aircraft by themselves could destroy sea power," he said. "We see after three years of war how their calculations were, how interlocked are the functions of air and sea power."

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of the United States Naval Forces in the European theatre, said it has been "a slow and discouraging business establishing sufficient control of the sea to use our convoys, but all the world now over is rejoicing in the first signs of success."

POLICE SEARCH FOR SLAYER

With gaping shotgun wounds in their chests, the bodies of Wallace W. Cunningham of Toronto and Mrs. Tony Pardella of Cobourg, ABOVE, were found in a ditch near Cobourg. Search is underway for the slayer.

HEMP FOR MONEY

In early times hemp served as the standard of exchange in Kentucky.

GIANT PINEAPPLES

Pineapples weighing 30 pounds are common in the New Hebrides islands.

Deposits Exceeding A Billion And Assets At An All-Time High Feature Bank of Montreal Report

Assets of $1,175,319,000 include $683,835,000 of Government and Other Bonds Reflecting Co-operation in Financing National War Effort.

INCREASE IN TAXES REFLECTED IN EARNINGS.

Showing characteristic strength in all departments, the Bank of Montreal's annual statement, just released, marks a record in the institution's 125-year career with assets at the new high figure of $1,175,000,000 and deposits exceeding, for the first time, the billion dollar mark.

Profits show some reduction compared with those of a year ago, owing to the increase in Dominion Government taxes, which this year amount to $2,359,874, compared with $2,362,000 a year ago. In the former figure is included an amount of $72,360, which is refundable under the provisions of The Excess Profits Tax Act. The profit, after payment of taxes, amounts to $3,283,018, compared with $3,437,026 a year ago, and is equal to 8.57 per cent of capital, rest and undivided profits. This contrasts with 9.51 per cent in 1941.

Dividend payments show a reduction of $180,000, compared with last year's figure, the decrease being due to the lower rate of the dividend made effective in recent months. The dividend payments amounted to $2,700,000, which, with $500,000 appropriated for bank premises, left a net amount of $83,018 to be carried forward to profit and loss, making the balance in this account $1,236,686.

Notable Increases

Notable among the increases in resources is the figure for government and other bonds and debentures which amount to $683,835,000, compared with $496,740,000 a year ago. Commercial loans amount to $221,354,000, compared with $275,864,000 in 1941. The latter figure reflects, no doubt, lessened requirements of business due to the increasing extent of government assistance to concerns engaged in war work, as well as the fact that many firms engaged in peace-time pursuits are not now requiring the accommodation needed in former years.

In line with this is the increase in the bank's quickly available resources which amount to $896,935,000, being 81.86 per cent. of liabilities to the public. Substantial increases are shown in items included in cash in the bank's vaults and money on deposit with the Bank of Canada, which stand at $112,710,000, compared with $92,750,000 in 1941.

Like commercial loans, call loans show a reduction from $17,890,000 to $16,254,000, the decreasing trend which began some years ago when the banks commenced the gradual reduction of their note circulation. In favor of the Bank of Canada. This reduction is now, under the terms of the Bank Act, occurring at a rate equal to 10 per cent. of capital per annum, and the liabilities will eventually reach a figure equal to 25 per cent. of capital.

With assets amounting to $1,175,319,000 and liabilities to the public totalling $1,098,526,000, the excess of resources amounts to $76,793,000. This is made up of the capital of $36,000,000 and reserve fund, profit and loss account and reserves for dividends totalling $40,793,000, which together represent the shareholders' equity in the bank.

Shown below are comparative figures for main items of the statement:

| | 1942 | 1941 |
|---|---|---|
| Total Resources | $1,175,319,231 | $1,046,551,479 |
| Liquid Resources | 896,935,228 | 769,062,010 |

Be in this mood when you buy!

Does something to you, doesn't it, when the flag goes by? What you wouldn't do for your country, just about then!

Well, you can do a lot by feeling that way when you buy. In that red-white-and-blue mood you'll buy only when you must; and what you must you will be the longest-lasting product you can find.

That is one sure way to help your country's war effort. For the longer-lasting things you buy won't need to be replaced so soon, releasing material, machinery and labour needed to help win the war. And, when you buy longer-lasting products you get better value.

Fraternizing of Democracies

The spirit of fraternity existing between the two Anglo-Saxon peoples had a magnificent demonstration on the United States Thanksgiving Day. For the first time in history Britain marked this occasion, one which fills so large a place in the life of the American people. Wherever U.S. soldiers were the day was marked and in Britain the people saw to it that they entered into the spirit of the time with their American cousins of the armed forces. In the shrine of Britain's faith, Westminster Abbey, American soldiers crowded for worship, in Buckingham Palace King George and Queen Elizabeth entertained 200 American officers of the American army and navy in honor of Thanksgiving Day. In Washington was the same spirit of fraternity in thanksgiving.

This year the American Thanksgiving Day came after the weeks of exhilaration and the nations' spirit of thanksgiving over the British and American victories in North Africa and the world spirit of confidence over the turn of events, due to these operations and to the Russian offensive which has helped to swing the tide of war powerfully to the Allies and to the non-pinning of Hitler and his Axis associates.

Nations of the Allied world have much to be thankful for at this time.

During this war the Anglo-Saxon peoples have had opportunity of fraternizing as never before. They know one another through their same democratic ideals. So powerful is the spirit of liberty they cherish. Both have developed along similar lines, having had one root. The result is a world outlook which gives them ideals as broad as the world.

Fighting side by side these two peoples are one in spirit.

In mid-Europe are examples of brave nations suffering under the heel of oppression, and only waiting the trumpet call to rise and join the march of freedom. In Russia is seen a powerful nation, one of the greatest examples of all time of the devotion of a people to their native land. The Russian people are fighting literally as those who are free men fight. China, the oldest national unit in the world, has shown how vitalizing is freedom, and how powerful a nation can become when aroused at the most exalted idealism in its national life. China has her ideal of liberty and progress which puts her in the great company of peoples who have known liberty and best breath the air of liberty.

Fraternizing of the Allied Nations in the fight for the maintenance of freedom is a natural consequence of this freedom. They have and will have reason to be thankful for what they have been, are and will be because they have carried the torch. The association of Britain and the United States on Thanksgiving Day is an evidence of the goodwill existing between them and is a token of the same spirit existing among all the United Nations.

Nazi Air Defeat in Libya

Germany's air force suffered the greatest debacle in air history in Libya, says Air Vice Marshal Arthur Coningham, commander of the R.A.F. in the desert. His statement yesterday at Cairo brought to the attention of the people some interesting facts which explain the great battle in North Africa in the Italian province of Libya.

So far has the situation developed from the early months of the war when Germany's air force was the most powerful in the world and when British airmen through sheer courage and spirit were able with their smaller air fleet to force Hitler to desist in the attempt to dominate the British skies. Today Britain is master of the air in the Mediterranean and her United States ally are dominant in the air over Germany. In Libya happened one of the great events of the struggle when Britain obtained control of the eastern Mediterranean ports as far as Malta by gaining airfields in Libya. In this rout of the Axis air force, the Italian desert air force has almost ceased to be and accordingly the R.A.F. commander Germany's force is badly strained.

More and more stands out the greatness of the victory of the British Eighth Army.

The best preparation for the future is the present well seen to, the last duty well done.—G. Macdonald.

CONFERENCE IN BERCHTESGADEN
(With Apologies to H. L. Phillips.)

Hitler: "Sit down, you Axis Wazis, and we'll discuss the situation before we bring this war to a glorious finish."

Laval: "Hail Hitler."

Mussolini: "Whew, it's hot in here. I can hardly get my breath."

Hitler: "Schinewund. How did you lose it? Trying to keep pace with some of your generals?"

Mussolini: "No, boss, I was pacemaker for Rommel in Libya, but he passed even me after the first ten miles."

Laval: "Hail Hitler."

Hirohito: "Ah, hon. friends, what have you to worry about? M'sieu Laval will look after hon. problems providing hon. United Nations do not make him a better offer."

Benito: "Listen, brother, what are you growling about? A few bombs dropped on that Tokyo of yours and the first thing you think of is hari-kari—mata-hari or whether the Dodgers will win the pennant next year. What about my poor Genoa, Milan and Turin. The Solomons in all their glory were never a-raided like this?"

Hitler: "Quit your squabbling, you glory-seekers. After all I have done all the work. Look at the glorious Russian campaigns. Did I not push them back to Moscow and Stalingrad, then stop and cry 'April Fool?' Those crazy Russians thought I meant to conquer their country. They are as bad as the British and these silly Americans when I let them into North Africa."

Hirohito: (humming) "I'm dreaming of a white Christmas."

Hitler: "Stop that you slap-happy Jap. You are not appreciative. You forget I would not give you permission to attack Siberia."

Hirohito: "Right, Hon. Addy, then I would have been the April Fool."

Mussolini: "What kind of a Tunisia humming, Hiro?"

Hitler: "Stop that wisecracking, you overgrown balcony bumper, or the Italian book will lose its biggest heel."

Mussolini: "Now whose wisecracking? That sounds fine coming from a leather-brain with no soul."

Hirohito: "Shame, hon. brothers, you should be fighting instead of quarrelling. Look at the glorious Japanese troops and navy, clearing the seas of the Yankees and the British."

Mussolini: "Oh, yeah? What about the twenty-three Jap ships sunk off the Solomons?"

Hirohito: "That, hon. yellow-stomach, was a radio error. It appears one of our glorious warships had twenty-five members of the Imperial Chorus on board. A shell exploded in one of the ship's magazines, and twenty-three of the Imperial ladies were blown overboard or were hurt. The radio announcer should have said 'hips' instead of ships."

Hitler to Hirohito: "Will you stop that verdammte humming. What are you composing now? 'A Salute to Germany?'"

Mussolini: "No boss. I was trying to set to music some words I found on one of my officers recently returned from North Africa. They read:

'Now's the day and now's the hour
For Montgomery and Eisenhower
If they give us what they gave Rommel
The Axis will end up in . . .'

Well, you guys can figure the last word yourselves."

Hitler: (sneering) "So you're trying to run out on us, eh. Well, you know what will happen if that Churchill-Roosevelt mob muscle in on my territory. Loyal and bigger men will look after you (if I can trust 'em."

Laval: "Heil Hitler. (Just let 'em make me an offer.")

Hitler: "This meeting is adjourned. One word before you go. Barring all accidents the war will be over in 1943 and we shall be in London and Washington."

Chorus: "Heil, boss, Heil!" with the United Nations barring all windows so the Poles, Czechs, Greeks, Albanians and Filipinos can't get at us."

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Censorship in Wartime

New York, Nov. 27. — Events which have happened in the last days force us to open public debate on the question of the limits of censorship in wartime.

Certain utterances of private individuals, journalists and public officials have been stopped by United States censorship from being transferred to Great Britain. On the other side the British censor has applied in kind. Whether this is retaliation or connivance is not established.

Some United States writers who are regularly published in Great Britain, whose publishers purchase their writing, have been barred by United States censorship from their British market. Oddly enough, one of them is a person who has fought consistently and unremittingly for the most cordial understanding in all matters between Britain and the United States.

The opinions which have been expressed in the United States and suppressed by the United States censor from publication in England have not been military opinions in any case of which I know. They have been political opinions. In some cases they have been critical of British political policy—in the Indian question, for instance. In all cases, I suppose, that the expression of these criticisms is injurious to the cordiality of Anglo-American relations.

But other opinions have been expressed which are critical of our own policy; for instance, in regard to Darlan. And it is well known that there is much criticism in England itself of our Vichy policy.

Factors to be Considered

Now, in a political matter there are several factors to be considered. The first is that the United States censor is unable to prevent expressions of United States opinion from reaching the whole world, for there are too many channels open through which American or United States newspapers and publications, for example, are sent regularly to Argentina. There they are read by correspondents and officials of all countries, including those of our enemies, and from there are cabled to Berlin as well as to London.

But if an expression of United States opinion reaches London it is not necessarily a matter of which London press that the United States Government is suppressing it, and the expression therefore takes on a far more profound significance than it would otherwise have, as a mere personal and private opinion.

Furthermore, we give the German propaganda machine opportunity to form British public opinion of United States public opinion, and to inform the British in a distorted manner, lifting a sentence here and a sentence there and making their own comment on it.

And in such cases the author has no chance even to clarify his meaning, or deny the distortion, because he is, himself, in the dark. Nor does the United States censor undo the author the courtesy of informing him that such and such an article is prevented from being transmitted. Its therefore does not know which or his writings is being published and which not; he does not know the reasons for the objections; and his own mind is therefore confused.

Political Strategies

Now, as our military campaign proceeds, it is accompanied by political strategies. These strategies will determine the political and ideological outcome of this war and profoundly influence the peace that follows. And there is no good telling the United States people, or the United States Press, that these political strategies are no concern of the public, but are all dictated exclusively by military necessity, and belong in the military field and are therefore not open to public criticism. For to say so is tantamount to claiming that the most profound issues of this war may not be publicly discussed, or it publicly discussed must be confined within the United States.

And this issue is of peculiar importance in the United States because here the press — in all its ramifications of the printed word—including the radio, has come to constitute the only forum of disinterested public opinion outside the Executive on all the issues of foreign affairs (because on foreign affairs is completely dead.

The same cannot be said of Britain, where the government is continually forced to explain itself and defend itself before an extremely active Parliament. Nor can the British censor suppress Parliamentary remarks. What critics of the Vichy policy say in the House of Commons is, therefore, known to the people of the United States by the arbitrary judgments of the various lines of thought in this country are suppressed, according to the opinion of an anonymous censor.

Disadvantageous Effect.

Now this has one practical effect of extreme disadvantage to our government, and I beg the government to consider it seriously.

The moment it becomes known that there is a censorship which lets some things go by and suppresses others, everything that is allowed to go by receives by inference the imprint of the government, its passage by the censor is tantamount to a government okay, and the government, therefore, becomes by every implication responsible for the wholly personal opinions of Mr. Lippmann, or Miss Dorothy Thompson, or Mr. Swing, or any one else who has a large British public.

Does the government wish this to happen. I would like to know. And does it not amount to a limitation of the freedom of the United States press, without the writers knowing how they are gagging themselves?

The larger issue, is much more important. Freedom of speech and freedom of expressions are written in Anglo-Saxon tradition and in the Atlantic Charter. It is an odd people that suppresses them while we fight for them.

"THE LORD WATCH"

There are at the present time, because of the global war, a great number of people away from home and separated from their families, friends and dear ones than at any other time in the history of the world.

This fact has a particular poignancy at yuletide, the traditional season of the year when around the home board and before the fireplace.

Fortunately, however, modern methods of communication make it possible for those separated from one another to keep in closer touch than ever before.

It is remarkable how many different and conflicting proverbs and sayings there on the subject of absence.

One proverb says that absence makes the heart grow fonder, while another says out of sight, out of mind.

One says distance only lends enchantment, while another says absence sees, soon forgotten.

One says far from eye, far from heart, while another says absent in body, present in spirit.

One says absence is death, or worse, to them that love, while another says the farther off, the more desired.

Perhaps the makers of these contradictory proverbs had different things in mind.

La Rochefoucauld, in one of his maxims, perhaps made the nearest approach to a reconciliation of these apparently inconsistent proverbs that are so freely quoted without a thought of their inconsistence. "Absence," wrote the great French moralist, "diminishes moderate passions and increases great ones, as the wind extinguishes tapers and adds fury to fire."

During the reign of King Herodium, both British and American soldiers and seamen were fond of singing a song, which commencing about 1750, entitled "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

One stanza of this popular song runs:

I went for one sir, fair and gay,
But find none to remind me:
How blest the hours pass'd away
With the girl I left behind me.

One of the finest things ever written on the subject of absence occurs in Genesis 31:49. After Jacob and his brethren had set up a stone for a pillar and made a heap of stones on Mt. Gilead and eaten thereon as a witness of the covenant made between them and Laban, the latter said: "The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another."

The place where these beautiful words were uttered came to be known as Mizpah, a Hebrew word meaning watch-tower.

Rear Marines Insignia

Today's Allied headquarters communique said some Japanese dead bore marine insignia and Yokosuka naval troops, "apparently a special landing forces of shock troops," and "new arrivals from Japan" identified by physical condition confirmed their recent landing by Japanese convoy forces in the frequent sorties off the north coast.

The Yokosuka depot, Sasebo and Kure are the principal stations from which Japan's naval and army garrisons the Empire's landing force shock troops.

Attacking Allied air units were out in force throughout yesterday, but so were Japanese planes.

Formations of Zero fighters and Allied bombers and fighters clashed in relays over the narrow battle-field, intervening low-level attacks occasionally for dogfighting. Six planes would be shot down, with down against a loss of three United States and Australian planes.

Twelve Japanese bombers raided the Australian port of Darwin and Allied airfields on Timor, but the communique reported damage was slight.

Northern Offensive Continues

(Latest Berlin broadcasts told of Russian attacks in the Velikie Luki region, 365 miles west of Moscow and 100 miles from the Latvian border. The broadcasts said massive Soviet tank forces had achieved a fairly deep penetration northwest of Moscow.

(The Russian communiques spoke only of activity on the northwestern front and no mention has been made of an offensive there but German reports indicated the Red Army might be striking out on an even greater scale than it did last winter when it routed the Germans back from the gates of Moscow.)

Details were lacking, but a broad outline the picture sketched by front line dispatches showed the estimated 300,000 survivors of the Axis Stalingrad forces have ended Stalingrad for three months were beset by fresh perils on two fronts.

Spread Over Don Bend

To the south the German expansion of Stalingrad was strengthened by supplies and reinforcements run down the west bank of the Volga—for the first time since early in the siege — and behind them, 40 or 50 miles to the west, the Russians were digging in along the Don bend and striking across vital supply line.

Opening of the new land supply line into Stalingrad was made possible by the column which early this week drove southward down west bank of the Volga to join with the garrison. Few weeks the garrison had depended on supplies and reinforcements carried perilously across the river, which now is increasingly choked with ice.

Further to the west Russian groups driving west from Chernyshevskaya were unopposed in one sector traversed by the Nazi-held Moscow-Rostov line, one of the few east-west rail routes remaining to the Caucasus.

Thus the Russians were in position to gain control of a triangular region between the Don and Volga, north by Millerovo, on the south by Tormosin and on the east by Stalingrad.

Nazis Acknowledge Gains

The German radio acknowledged the Russians still were on the offensive around Stalingrad and also expanded on its earlier reports of a major Soviet drive in the Caucasus, saying it was to the north. Broadcasts told of heavy fighting in Baby, 186 miles due west of Moscow, and said Red troops were opening "west of Turopets" which is about 240 miles northwest of Moscow and only 135 miles from Smolensk.

(A later German broadcast reported Russian tank and infantry attacks in the Velikie Luki sector southwest of Toropets and only 100 miles from Latvia.

(Soviet communiques again made no mention of these operations which indicate the Russians may be entering into a winter offensive much more extensive than the 1941-42 cold-weather drive which threw the Germans back from the gates of Moscow.)

But it seemed equally clear from the continued struggle of the invaders within Stalingrad that the Germans have decided not to meet their problem by withdrawal, believe Hitler will try and smash the Soviet columns on the bleak steppes west of the city and relieve the starving, shredded lines.

Better Britain Blueprint Ready

London, Nov. 27 (CP) — Sir William Beveridge's blueprint for a better Britain, realistic, happier, better fed and more secure, is to be unveiled next Wednesday.

The "blueprint" is a 100,000-word document containing proposals on the reconstruction of Britain's social insurance and Allied services. It has been months in the making by a government commission headed by Sir William, noted economist.

Sir William, the director of most of Britain's social legislation for 30 years, says the report covers "the whole of life" — pensions, unemployment, workmen's compensation, sickness, widowhood, housing, orphanhood and schooling.

Newspapers more than a month ago had forecast the outstanding proposals of the report would be one providing insurance for all workers and the appointment of a minister of social security who would be responsible for settlement of unemployment, pensions, medical services and workmen's compensation.

Among other things, the report is understood to deal at length with methods of maintaining employment, possibly through a general economic staff responsible to the state.

Seventh Operator From C.P.R. Telegraph Goes on Service

The Canadian Pacific Communications Office, Bridge Street East, has the proud record of having six of its telegraph operators in the armed services, the seventh has joined the Navy and will report in the near future.

Included in the list are Frank Hitchon, Carman Spencer, Clare Carter of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and Corporal Harry Frank Pepper, Les Cole, Harry Lummiss of the Royal Canadian Navy, Clarence Cook, one of the office operators, joined the Navy yesterday and will report in the near future.

According to Manager Jack Belcher, the company, due to the serious shortage of operator help caused by enlistments, is seriously considering the installation of a teletype system.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Somewhere in Libya, Nov. 26— (Delayed) — Marshal Rommel is likely to try to regain the fallen laurels of himself and master by making a stand at El Agheila, on the Gulf of Sirte.

No one here doubts the determination of the Germans to pay any price in an effort to maintain a foothold in North Africa — for this is essential to control of the Mediterranean.

Further to the south Axis forces can hold Bizerte and Tunis against the Allied offensive from the west.

3. What striking power remains in Rommel's army.

The greatest danger to the Axis would lie in the thrust to Bizerte and Tunis.

If there were strong positions should fall, the defenders would have to retire to the hope of Mareth line, where Rommel presumably at Tripoli, this concept of the Axis strength of North Africa. Such a contingency would mean the loss of Rommel's abandon the idea of holding El Agheila and make a dash for Tripoli forthwith.

What strength Rommel can muster for the defence of El Agheila is a matter of speculation. It seems to me it must depend to a large degree on how much help Hitler can manage to deliver to his captain through the tough Allied sea and air blockade.

Machine Suffers Damage

If the Nazi marshal must depend on the resources which he brought through with him on the mad race from El Alamein, then he undoubtedly will be in a difficult position. The fighting value of Rommel's force commanded a few short weeks ago before his debacle has suffered serious damage.

Apart from the 75,000 men Rommel lost in battle and through arrests, his sacrifice in tanks, aircraft and other equipment has been colossal.

I have just had a remarkable demonstration of the material losses in an unforgetable air trip over the line of his retreat.

There, scrawled across the sands and over the escarpments of the desert, was the record of one of the great routs of military history. It was pictured in the shattered hulks of planes, tanks and motor transport and in the thousands upon thousands of supplies abandoned in the frenzied rush to escape. Here and there it was emphasized by an eloquence within which should rows of new white crosses.

Most impressive was the clear indication of speed. At times the lorries were fleeing in such panic that their transports spread out for several hundred yards across the desert on either side of the military highway which skirts the Mediterranean for hundreds of miles. You can see tracks of wheels where the chassis of a vast chariot race westward across the sands.

After the first bloody stand, panic seized the Axis forces. Signs of combat lessen and the marks of speed increase. Here you can see mountainous evidence of the devastation wrought on Axis tanks, warplanes and transport by the Allied Air Forces.

Patriotic Housewives Search for Metal Scrap In Daily Routine Jobs

The words 'scrap' and 'salvage' seem to enter the lives of the women of Canada more and more these days. Housewives salvage fats and bones in the kitchen. Mothers of worn-out rubber articles such as hot water bottles, and galoshes add to Canada's rubber stock pile. They can also assist in the collection of other salvageables if they will watch carefully for them as they do their housework. For instance, the keys used to open various tins contain metal and can be salvaged. Old house keys which are no longer of any use can be added to the metal scrap and don't forget the collapsible metal tubes.

Recently the Department of Munitions and Supply entered more fully in this 'scrap' drive by stating it compulsory for workers in war industries to segregate various metals, label and store them in such a way that they will not become mixed. It is important that many thousands of pounds of priceless metals have been lost because they were mixed with three less valuable in the scrap heap and could not be effectively recovered.

The Munitions Controller pointed out that it is a small thing to ask women and men war workers to keep the various metals and alloys in separate containers, but it is a big thing for the war effort. The importance of this is indicated because many plants are providing for any infraction of the regulations.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to have a "Sweet Sixteen" birthday party next month and since all the guests will know it is long enough in advance for printed invitations.

My mother says that thanking them when they give me the gifts is all sufficient. That I should also, after the party, write notes of thanks. Do you think this is necessary?

Yes, my dear girl, your mother has the right point of view about this. Instead of rebelling against her perfect advice, you should bless her for trying to direct you into good manners". You'll be a wiser sixteen if you're a mannerly sixteen.

Even if you do not know your doctor's wife, you should address your greeting to both husband and wife. And it should be addressed to their home, not to his office. This happens not to be in his home. Also it is much the best form to cut your card when to get my coat after the dance. If so, how much?

Red Cross Asks Help Of Women to Make Surgical Dressings

Women of Belleville are asked to rally to a special emergency call of the Red Cross Supply Depots to assist in making three thousand surgical dressings which the local branch will undertake on Monday evening, November 30. This appeal has just been received and the Belleville branch has already been noted for the response of its workers to sudden calls for help in aiding the women of the district to assist again in this manner.

As the Red Cross Corps, Emergency Reserve, is having its weekly lecture on Monday evening in the room on the second floor of the Bridge Street building, it was felt that the medical staff of No. 5 I.T.S., will give a lecture on Hemorrhage, it has been decided to make the surgical dressings there at nine o'clock.

It is planned to cut, pack and ship the dressings on Monday night so the assistance of the executive and members of the Red Cross and any women interested in this project is required. Those who can come are asked to bring large scissors and a tape measure. It is important to note that headquarters requests that workers on dressings wear clean, white dresses.

Ultraviolet Light Now Weapon In Influenza Fight

One of the most difficult problems which occurred during World War I was the spreading of influenza among the soldiers and civilians. Today medical men are on the lookout for means of limiting the occurrence of influenza among the armed forces and civilians, to prevent a great struggle.

Drs. Joseph Stokes, Jr., and Warner Henis of Philadelphia have stated that preventive measures against the disease may be divided into three groups. The first is that used to control the spread of the disease through the air. The second is vaccination, and the third is the use of a serum to prevent the condition.

The air can be disinfected in two ways: first by ultraviolet irradiation and, secondly, by using the vapor from a chemical known as propylene glycol. Air-borne infection can be destroyed by irradiating the air with ultraviolet rays.

Mrs. Stokes and Henis have carried out some experiments with animals in which they show that the ultraviolet irradiation and the vapor from propylene glycol are almost equally effective in preventing the spread of influenza infection. From the standpoint of convenience it would appear that the use of ultraviolet light would be the most satisfactory method to be employed in hospitals and other places where a great deal of air must be made to keep influenza from spreading.

The experiments with influenza vaccine have as yet not been carried on for a long enough period to make any conclusive results possible. It would seem at present that this type of prevention is not promise and perhaps in the near future a vaccine will be devised which can be satisfactorily employed.

Immune serum is blood serum collected from a person who has recently recovered from the disease. Attempts have been made to prevent influenza by spraying this serum into the nose and some good results have been obtained. Thus, new weapons which, told much promise, are being devised for attacking Influenza.

Parlor Meeting Of the W.C.T.U.

A very enjoyable parlor meeting was held at the home of Mrs. A. M. Maguire, Bridge Street East, on Thursday, under the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. M. O. Denton, supt. of the department, had charge of the meeting and gave a very interesting report of the recent Provincial Convention in Ottawa.

Mrs. F. E. Houston and Mrs. Bernice Moore, contributed vocal solos, suitable to the Christmas season, to the delight of all. They were accompanied by Mrs. Hubbs.

Mrs. Corden gave an amusing reading by Nellie McClung in her pleasing way. The Scripture was read by Mrs. Percy Meiklejohn.

Mrs. Coulson was presented with a county life membership pin, by reason of our honored members, Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn.

A short account of the opening of "Fellowship Lodge", a home centre for the soldiers, presented to the "Soldiers' and Airman's Christian Association" at Petawawa Military Camp, by the Ontario W.C.T.U., was given. It is a beautiful building costing $6,000.

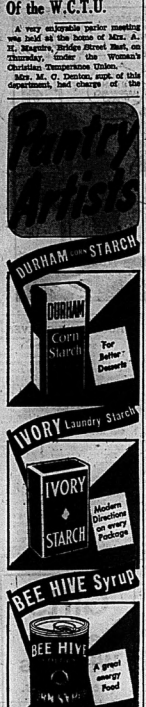
A clip sheet on how "Liquor Hampers our War Effort", presented many startling facts.

Liquor ads in showcasing in Canada. In 1940 Canada spent $181,000,000; in 1941, $233,000,000. In 1941 information available indicates an increase of 30 per cent, $300,000,000. The money received by the liquor traffic is so far beyond the returns from any other form of industry, that the yarns the one extensively advertised business in time of war times.

The brewers publicly boast, that since the outbreak of the war they have shipped enough beer to enough to fill a train of box cars fifty miles long. The army's greatest need is surely "tools of war", yet acres of war machines have laid on Canada's railway sidings for weeks, waiting shipment.

Gasoline and rubber are severely rationed, so that many forms of business are hampered. But liquor beer trucks are constantly on the highway. Bottled beer may be delivered everywhere in Canada.

The large overseas liquor trade of which the Scruffs Bottle board, occupies shipping space sorely needed for war supplies abroad. At Hong Kong, Singapore, Burma and Libya, thousands of brave men have died for lack of tools of war. Toward this tragic result the liquor traffic has been at least a contributing cause by decreasing production and hindering transportation.



Agriculture and the war industries are clamoring for men even labor is being drafted to register for labor services, yet the government permits a small army of men in the liquor traffic distribution and sale of non-essential commodity.

In Victoria, B.C., the women held a protest meeting. The government deliberately protects the liquor traffic on account of the revenue and because it is a business paying big dividends even though it be at the expense of public welfare.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

The Argentine Congress is considering the financing of large plants to distill power alcohol from grain and potatoes.

Save Decorator's Bill By Keeping Wall Clean

To save re-decorating bills and keep walls fresh and bright, frequent cleaning is necessary according to Consumer Information Service. Painted or papered walls should be dusted regularly, and completely, if dirt is not to become embedded in the finish. A soft duster will do the trick if care is taken to rotate the wiping surface so that more dirt won't be rubbed on than is taken off. A soft cloth formed in a bag over a broom helps to get the job done more quickly and easily.

Fresh grease spots may be removed from wallpaper if a hot iron is placed against a blotter held to the spot. Two or three applications may be necessary, but be careful, for too persistent an ironing can scorch the wall.

Another way to get rid of grease spots is to apply a thick layer of fuller's earth or talcum powder. Left on the spot for 24 hours and then brushed off lightly, either of these may get rid of a blemish.

A bad odor can be treated with ordinary household hydrogen peroxide (3 percent). But this may change the color of the paper slightly, so try it on a hidden spot behind a picture before deciding to use it.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Avoiding Operation In Peptic Ulcer

During the war of 1916-1918 the number of cases of ulcer of the stomach and of the small intestine among the young male civilian population greatly increased. After the war there was a gradual decrease in ulcer until the years of the depression, when again there was an increase. After the first year of the depression the ulcer cases gradually decreased. Since the beginning of the present war there is again an increase of ulcer in both army and civilian life.

The above facts definitely show that aside from other factors — slender body, rough foods, infection— nervousness and emotional disturbances is the match that lights the fire.

For many years the treatment of stomach and intestinal ulcer was by medicine and diet in mild cases and operation in severe cases. In other words the physician looked on the case over to the surgeon when he felt «he patient required operation; to save his life.

Today the physician and surgeon work as a team on cases of peptic ulcer. "What is called a combined clinic was started at Bellevue Hospital, New York, by Drs. Lloyd Du J. Willian, Associate Professor of clinical surgery, Columbia University, in Medical Clinics of North America, states:

"When the clinic started, January 1938, it was believed, as a result of what we had seen in our follow up of surgical operations, that operations gradually gave poor results. For that reason we would not advise operation unless the pain was so severe the patient insisted. Apart from the beginning that medical care for the "uncomplicated" ulcer gave excellent results".

"If a patient with ulcer is seen early in the course of the disease, meaning the first few months or year and is put under medical management and if he co-operates in the treatment, the chances of avoiding surgery over a ten year period are excellent. If the patient with ulcer is not seen late in the disease, five years or longer after the onset, then the chances of improvement under medical management are greatly reduced".

The lesson here is like the lesson we have learned in other diseases, namely that the sooner the patient reports to his physician with symptoms that persist more than a few weeks despite "home" treatment, the sooner will the disease be recognied and surgery avoided.

Wives at Home Can Take A Tip From Soldiers on Moth Control

Both all housewives are as carefully instructed in care of clothing and housekeeping equipment as are Army personnel. When said soldier husbands return to civil life they will be able to give the little woman many pointers in conservation and economy.

What a soldier must know about moths and mildew is that materials liable to damage by moths are woolen or felt goods, bristle brushes, fur and horse hair. Those likely to be damaged by mildew are linen and cotton goods, fibre brushes, hemp cordage and any fibre goods.

He is taught that moths dislike light and heat, and frequent spot, dark places. He is also taught that to protectgoods from mildew they should be kept dry and clean.

Principal safeguard against moths is frequent brushing and exposure to open air. Army Orders point out, "Soldiers shall be instructed that all garments are to be neatly fully brushed before being placed in storage, and examined frequently for signs of moth damage."

Nothing is so efficient as a complete and intact covering of ordinary brown paper for moth protection, but it must be devoid of holes or tears and foded over carefully where the ends join. Moths are quite unable to penetrate such paper but if there is any opening, however small, they will probably discover it, and deposit their eggs on the material underneath, soldiers are warned.

Red Wings Gain First Place By Defeating Leafs by 2 to 1 Before Huge Crowd in Detroit

Carr Tallies for Leafs With Howe and Brown Scoring for Wings

RANGERS BEAT HAWKS

By the Canadian Press

The National Hockey League netminding debut of Jimmy Franks has served to redeem Saskatchewan's reputation as a breeding ground of great goaltenders.

It wasn't strictly his National League debut, since the Melville, Sask., rookie played a few minutes for Detroit Red Wings a year ago in Stanley Cup playoffs. But it was his first full game under the big top and he responded brilliantly, allowing only one goal as New York Rangers thumped Chicago Black Hawks 3-1.

Rangers purchased Franks from the Detroit farm system to replace Steve Buzinski, 25-year-old Dunblane, Sask., wheat farmer, who had allowed 35 goals in nine previous games. By contrast at least Franks durned his opposite, the Chicago total was the lowest scored against Rangers in seven game this year.

Max Bentley fired the only shot which eluded Franks in the third period, but it was too little and too late to offset the second from Lynn Patrick and Clint Smith provided the victory with first period goals. Patrick and Bentley moved into a first-place tie with Gordie Drillon of Toronto in the individual scoring race for their night's work.

Detroit Real Leafs

The victory moved Rangers into a fifth-place tie with Montreal, but the major change in the standing reflected by Detroit's 2-1 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs in their other game of the card. It gave the wings a two point hold on first place ahead of Leafs and Hawks, marked the fourth time they have gained the lead since the season started.

Lorne Carr tallied first for Leafs in the second period on Billy Taylor's pass, Nelson Sid Howe equalled for Detroit at 10:11 of the third period on a three-way passing play with Mud Bruneteau and Carl Liscombe. Five minutes and 10 seconds later, Connie Brown swiped the winning tally with Modest Goodfellow and Harry Watson assisting.

A mammoth crowd of 12,912, largest ever to attend an N. H. L. game in Detroit, watched eagerly for a recurrence of hostilities between the two Stanley Cup rivals, but it failed to materialize. Always a volatile pair in hockey combat, Leafs and Wings appeared on the scene for an open break in the first two periods, then quieted down and went through the third without a penalty.

Jimmy Orlando, Detroit had man who figured in a melee with Gaye Stewart of Leafs last time the teams met, didn't get in any fisticuffs—but it took five stitches to close a skate wound in his left ankle inflicted during the second period.

LISCARI SCORES SIX GOALS IN FLIERS VICTORY

R.C.A.F. Swamps Bloomingdards 13-4 in an Ottawa Senior Loop Game

HULL VOLANTS WIN

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (CP) — They Liscari, little right winger who played with Dallas in the American Association last winter, scored six goals and assisted in another as Bill Tuohey's R.C.A.F. team defeated Bloomingdards 13-4 in the first game of an Ottawa Senior City Hockey League schedule here last night.

It was the fifth triumph in as many starts for the Flyers, who won the title last season. Liscari, R.C.A.F. scored three goals in the first period without reply on shots from Tuelin, Bloomingdale centre. Trembley got an assist on the first goal, Boucher and Blake assisting with the second and Miller with the third.

The Flyers counted five goals in the second period, after Monties opened the scoring with a goal by Leger, assisted by Gration, at 4.15. R.C.A.F. responded, Goalkeeper Turner of the Monties unmercifully showering the puck. Robbins, Seymour, Tuelin and Liscari scoring in quick succession.

One Penalty

In the third period, Liscari scored for Flyers at 3.34, Gration retaliating for Monties at 5.30. Rooke and Liscari scored again for the R.C.A.F. before Blais put two shots past Scarlet, in almost identical fashion, to record twice before the period ended.

Only penalty of the game was imposed on Tuelin, of R.C.A.F., in the third period.

Hull Volants whipped home two goals in the last period to edge out Canadiens 4-3 in the second game of the doubleheader and the two clubs finished tie with Canadiens.

Outscored by Jack Wilkinson on defence, Volants came from behind twice to their credit with the winning 3-1 lead at the end of the period, only to have Canadiens tally twice.

18-YEAR-OLD IN BACKFIELD

Winnipeg, Nov. 27 (CP)—When the Winnipeg football champions of Winnipeg R.C.A.F.-Bombers—line up against the eastern titlists in the Dominion final at Toronto Dec. 5 an 18-year-old Winnipeg high school youngster will be on the fullback position.

Frankie Parker, one of the best players ever developed here in high school football, was chosen today by head coach Ken Threlfall to start in the backfield spot.

Parker, 5 feet 10 inches, who led Gordon Bell high school to the city championship last winter, was the first player to be named to a definite starting position on the western team.

Frankie began this season with Winnipeg Bombers in this city's senior league, then transferred to the University of Manitoba team. An excellent runner, kicker and passer, he starred with the Varsity squad and was recalled by Bombers for the league playoffs against R.C.A.F. Flyers, the third team in the circuit.

Bombers won the league title. Frankie was one of three selected from the university team to play with R.C.A.F.-Bombers against Regina in the western final.

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP)—Bingo Kampman, the former Toronto Maple Leafs defence bruiser, now an army transport driver in the Halifax area, is nostalgic for the big time. Asked by Ken Hallifax (Halifax Herald) Chisholm how it felt to be back playing hockey, Kampman replied: "not so good. I can't even listen to those games Saturday. No, I don't get to see them . . ." Gordon (Gash) Pettinger, who helped Regina Pats win the Canadian Junior Hockey title in 1930 and later toured the N. H. L. with New York Rangers, Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings, is playing coach of No. 8 Air Observers team in the Portage La Prairie Military League. . . . Bill Gilligan's Falls Brewery Cayuga says Carson Cooper, Detroit's head scout, is the toughest Detroiter Kennedy, Canadian Junior Hockey title in 1930 Colborne Juvenile.

The Expert Says:

Alan (Branford Expositor) Rose: "Just right between Jimmy Orlando, Detroit, and Gaye Stewart, Leafs, which will be settled by the press reporters like the chicken covers the dressing on a platter. is now garbage matter as both boys report they may be changing uniforms shortly for something a more drab hue. Glory to glory, as it were. Maybe they'll make commandos out of them."

Incidentally:

Edmonton, without un indoor rink and therefore without winter hockey, is turning to basketball in a big way. A 40-night Senior Men's League is organised and two more clubs are seeking entry. So many other leagues are organizing or operating that playing space is at a premium . . . Already speaking of basketball, the hockey ace, Wally Stanowsky (Wally spells it that way and likely does right) cuts quite a caper as a cager. Playing with R.C.A.F. Trenchards in the Winnipeg Intermediate Hoop Loop, Wally is a leading scorer . . . Also speaking of Stanowsky, that's quite a defence weaving Winnipeg R. C. A. F. hockey Colts—Stanowsky of Toronto Leafs, Bill Juzda of New York Rangers and Andy Branigan and Wilf Field of Brooklyn Americans. Remi Vandelle, a Montreal junior of wide experience, if fifth man.

HERSHEY BEARS, PROVIDENCE REDS FIGHT FOR TOP

Both Teams Score Victories Over Barons and the Bisons

MANY PENALTIES

(By The Canadian Press)

The struggle between first-place Hershey and second-place Providence for top honors in the eastern division of the American Hockey League continued unabated last night as both won their contests.

Hershey took its fifth straight victory by defeating the Cleveland Barons 4-1 and the Reds defeated Buffalo Bisons, leaders of the western half, 5-3. In the only other game, the western division Pittsburgh Hornets went into a second place tie with Indianapolis Capitals by stinging Washington 5-3.

Both the Bears and the Barons scored in the first period but from the second period on it was all Hershey. Wally Kilrea got the winning goal at 7:45 of the middle stanza. Hershey has seven games of its last eight games with only a tie marring its record.

Providence's second line of Jack Forsey, Jack Pusplin and Don Webster accounted for all the goals in less than 18½ minutes of the first period. Oscar Aubuchon also scored in the first canto to give Providence a 4-0 lead.

Buffalo scored twice in the second period and once in the third. Ab Demaray clinched the game for the Reds at the 15-minute mark of the final canto.

During a wild third period in which one major and four minor penalties were handed out, Pittsburgh enjoyed its victory over the Lions with three goals. The Hornets' first two goals were scored by Tony Stemmerling in the middle stanza.

Oasie Smundson of the Lions drew a minor and a major penalty in the final chapter when the Hornets went on a scoring rampage.

There's no league action until Saturday night when Cleveland plays at Washington, Buffalo at Hershey and New Haven Eagles at Pittsburgh.

Soldier Admits Story is Hoax

Calgary, Nov. 26 (CP) — Pte. Fred Barr of Vancouver, who was hobbled into a cigar store here Tuesday night and said he had been stabbed by a soldier, told the whole story was a hoax, city police said today.

He claimed originally that a civilian with whom he had been fighting in a back alley had "pulled a knife" on him and stabbed him in the ankle and arm. On questioning, police declared he said he had stabbed himself in the leg and had pulled the scab off a scratch on his arm to make it appear as if he was bleeding when he entered the cigar store.

The soldier admitted, police said, he was absent without leave and had "made up the story" to conceal his absence.

Pte. Barr is the enlisted man mentioned in the story of the stabbing. He is being held by military authorities.

FOOTBALL SCENE HAS EMPHATIC AIR FORCE TINGE

Uplands Gains International Finals by Defeating Rough Riders

PLAY SATURDAY

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—This Canadian football season has been as surprising as 10 cigarets in a small package and the climax promises to be equally disconcerting—for sports writers, anyway.

All autumn long press box pundits have been installing their fancy (sports writers are so original) by referring to R.C.A.F. Hurricanes variously as skyhirds, flyers, hurryhawks, or the airmen. Nice, fuzzy names maybe—but doomed for this season at least.

Hurricanes dotted Uplands R.C.A.F. in the eastern final at Varsity Stadium Saturday and any splitter with a service origin will be as confusing as ever. Despite this, writers won't fare any better when it comes to the Dominion final here Dec. 5 when the western representative will be Winnipeg R.C.A.F.-Bombers.

An Air Force Tinge

All of which is a tricky way of saying that the football scene now has an emphatic air force tinge. That Uplands defeated Hurricanes Tuesday when Hurricanes suppressed Toronto Argonauts 8-6 in the Ontario Rugby Football Union final which ended in a deadlock, Uplands win in 11 starts, Uplands gained the intersectional semi-final on the strength of another civilian team, defeating Ottawa Rough Riders 9-0 in a city-and-district contest.

Meanwhile, flyers—we mean Hurricanes—are a 4-to-5 favorite to win for Saturday's contest. AC2. Cecil Potentarius suffered a shoulder injury against Beaches and may be unable to play. A definite casualty is Flight Lieut. Lloyd Harrison, wing who suffered a wrenched left knee against Argonauts. Warsaw Panthers last week.

Not to overlook what is commonly known as "payday" and we must produce," said FO. Lew Hayman yesterday. "The point here that is that there're all set."

Hurricanes spent an hour yesterday on running exercises and possible Monday workouts. Coach Hayman's tuition and will taper off today with a 40-minimum drill scheduled. Uplands, last by FOS. Tony Golab and Bobby Collier, will arrive in Toronto late tonight.

They'll Do It Every Time— By Jimmy Hatlo

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

WHAT ABOUT A JUNIOR O.H.A. team for Belleville this winter? How about a Senior team? Ah hear! After all this war isn't going to last forever, is it? It's hoped not and unless, the teen-aged boys are encouraged and induced how there'll be a shortage of puck-sters here in years to come, along about the post-war period.

Yesterday R. L. "Home" Taylor, O.H.A. secretary was called to ascertain the status of junior hockey in Belleville.

"Well, just ain't any," we replied.

"Well, I'm a newcomer to Trenton and with an associate interest in Belleville Intermediates. However, we'd like to get a grouping to insure hockey for our boys", explained Mr. Taylor. "I am wondering why Belleville, Trenton, Oshawa and Peterboro can't get together on such a program. It's food for thought."

THE VALUE OF JUNIOR FARM

clubs is being considered more than ever by National Hockey League clubs these days. If the junior league clubs realize the value of junior hockey, instead of looking for subsidy, they shouldn't the respective municipalities are even interesting citizens to give the same benefit. After all there is a subsidy available for boys attending hockey players, who later make the big time. Take the Toronto Leafs who operate the Marlboro Juniors, while the Canadiens, Offmeil and Lloyd Schnarr, McDonald, a goalie is from Flin Flon, Manitoba, from Port Colborne, Vogt from Tavistock, Bartlett from Glenora, Gauthier and Quenneville from Perth and Brown from Ximira.

ALONG THE SAME LINES

comes a timely resume from the pen of Peterboro Fred Craig, who says: "Thirty years ago when the population of Peterborough was only a little better than two-thirds of the present total, the local hockey club was preparing to enter the ranks in the Junior, Intermediate and senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association and Peterborough's sport interests of thirty years ago today announced that there was enough material for all three outfits. We are slipping badly. Last season was the first time since the early days of hockey Peterborough entered no junior team. The number of players is the unfortunate position of having ample material for a real senior B combination and no league which to play, and the worst of that situation is that while the present crop of senior players passes off the scene there is nothing coming to replace them. Of last year's senior B champions Goals Ray Hamilton and Centreman Don Crews, Les Burton and Drake Jopling, and Defenceman Bill Hollingsworth are all that remain. Centre Ice Hal Honey Tompkins, Joe Blewett and Bill Hogg are all at present time played junior hockey for Peterborough. They had all been promoted to the senior ranks here to give Peterborough first an Eastern Ontario Intermediate championship and two years later a senior B title. But where the championship teams of tomorrow are to come from, I guess is as good as this column's.

IT'S CENTRE-ASHLING FOR

Ralph "Highpockets" McCabe of Sudbury next Wednesday. Ralph is marrying Miss Jean McMeice, of Cooper Cliff and Nickel Belt next week. Congratulations are in order. Incidentally before McCabe left for Northern Ontario and wedding bells he was called into the office of Secretary Lehman, of the Toronto Maple Leaf Baseball Club, and his contract terms were discussed. McCabe is still the property of the Leafs and will report to the spring training trip with Burleigh Grimes, Fulgham, Poulson, the beautiful season enjoyed by McCabe with the Harrisburg Senators of the Interstate League, last season it is expected "Highpockets" will stick with the Leafs as a starting pitcher in 1943.

REMEMBER WHEN DICK

Irwin, veteran hockey player and former coach of the Chicago Black Hawks, played eleven years ago today to coach the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League? He remained with Toronto until 1940 when he went to the Montreal Canadiens as coach.

Ottawa All-Stars To Play Hurricanes

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP)—Members of Ottawa's Upsides R. C. A. F. team, who meet Toronto R. C. A. F. Hurricanes in the Saturday in the eastern Canada football final, earned places easily on an All-Star Ottawa City Senior Football League team selected for The Canadian Press yesterday by the capital city's sports writers and coaches.

The all-star team which emerged from the deliberations of Ottawa's gridiron experts reflected lustre upon Ottawa Rough-Riders, since the Riders and R. C. A. F. each received seven nominations for stellar ruling. Of the players chosen, all but two played for the 1941 Rough Riders, last year's eastern Canada championship squad.

LAC. Jack Buell of the R. C. A. F., who will start Saturday at Flying Wing against the Hurricanes, shares a spot on the all-star aggregation with PO. Hart Findley, who will hold down an outside berth in the Eastern Canadian Final.

PO. Tony Golab, R. C. A. F., who will also be in Ottawa's starting backfield, was a popular choice for half in the capital's all-star team.

AC2 Simon, who will play in the backfield with PO. Bob Pentland, split all-star honors with Arnie McWatters of Rough Riders, both of them receiving ten votes each for the position of half (secondary defence).

PO. Sydney Coulter, a popular choice for all-star quarter, will take that position against Hurricanes. PO. Doug Turner, all-star scrap, will start there for the Flyers, while Sgt. Ed Justice, who received two nominations for all-Ontario position with all-star, will play inside with Sgt. Ted Grierson.

PO. George Sprague, chosen all-star middle, will be at middle wing with Pte.-L. Doug Annan.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

(By ALLAN NICKLESON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
London, Nov. 27.—(CP)—As a country that links boxing with beer and being indispensable to relaxation and entertainment, Canadian Army fighters are puzzled.

Two Canadians were there: Tiffin on technical knockouts in an All-to-China show at Bristol that marked the latest appearance of Dominion scrappers.

Cpl. Arnold Rhyne, the big negro from Montreal, overcame a weight advantage of that pounds to stop Sgt. Jim Guilty of the British Army in the eighth round of a scheduled ten-rounder. Guilty entered with flat eye cut. Apart from an even exchange in the third and fifth heats, the 194-pound Canadian Army heavyweight king wielded much the harder blows and scored heavily with terrific blows to Guilty's head and ribs.

For Hayes Montreal lightheavyweight champ in 1939, it was the second straight triumph within a few days. He promoted Gunner Jack Smith of Worcester over eight rounds in London.

Tony Roberts of Winnipeg started his bout in whirlwind fashion and forced his opponent Les Turner of Oxford, to retire in the third round of the scheduled bout. Roberts' non-stop battling caught Turner off his guard and he received the greatest ovation of the night. He was cheered particularly at the end of the second round when he displayed agility at ring-craft. In another three-rounder Jacques Inugas.

Berlin radio, heard in London, said that Adolf Baumgartner of Hamburg, four times winner of the German middleweight amateur boxing title, was killed on the eastern front. He was 27 and an NCO.

Lieut. A. Evans of Toronto, a member of the R. C. N. V. R., says that he put into Gibraltar just in time to watch a baseball game between a team composed of R.C.N.V.R. officers affectionately "Old" along with R.C.N. Skippers, and Royal Navy men from the Rock, in which Lieut. Evans, a former R.C.N.V.R., Toronto, is serving. The Canadians bested each of the 5-3 victory, aided by such stalwarts as Lieut. Evans, Lieut. and N. J. Alexander of Vancouver.

No Commebit: The London Evening Standard says that sports popular with the Germans in occupied Britain include "pitching, a game which is played with a heavy horseshoe at an iron stake".

Lieut. Wedgwood, R. A. F. Orderly, A.F.O. who trained and captained the Aldershot Command team in 1939 and 1931, and a former holder of the world's all speed record for motor conveyance, is R.A.F. fighter group.

Spry on Cricket: Established in 1929 a record of 267 miles an hour, which stood for 13 years, Italy won the 1942 battlefronts of the world.

The English Rugby Union, first championship in 1926, J. G. Carruthers still is winning. Rugby union's only Scottish international Bill Chalk's championship for the 16th time in 30 final appearances.

Smoke Gets In Their Eyes?

Sheridan, Ill.—Although Johnny Mine, New York Yankees' farm hand, and Si Johnson, pitcher of the Phils and a former Cincinnati Reds' star, both Lewis County, Indiana, got their legal limit of two pheasants in their first day of hunting here last week, it wasn't as easy as that. Johnny whipped the first one, but it was still alive when the dog reached it; then he threw three straight shots before getting the second.

"It's that darned sun," complained Mine. "Every one of those birds are going west, and, for gosh, I can't even see 'em." Which led to some ribbing by Johnson who asserted: "I suppose the sun was in the sun's eye that day you faced me in Philly last summer, too." Johnson, who lives here and was host to Mine on the hunting trip, also indulged in by shooting "strikes."

Johnny, however, got even with Si when they stopped at the town of Norway for lunch. The youngster first greeted Johnson and Si said: "There goes my No. 1 fan. Every time I face a ball game he goes home crying and won't even eat supper."

Mine exclaimed: "Holy smokes, no wonder that poor kid looks so starved. He's probably been crying and going hungry for the last five years."

'I Come to You As Win-The-War Candidate'—LaFleche

Montreal, Nov. 27.—(CP)—Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche told electors of Outremont riding last night that "I come to you as a win-the-war candidate."

The Minister of National War Services, a candidate in the Nov. 30 by-election, declared in the riding said "I come to you as one who wants to be a friend of every Canadian. I have no bitterness in my heart for any Canadian. I have had in the past, but I have successfully washed that all out of my soul, for hatred of fellow-Canadians is unworthy."

The Minister, who is opposed in the by-election by Jean Drapeau, "candidate of the people," stated that he regretted "very much that it would appear that some young men do not understand that we, all Canadians, have for three years stood in great peril."

Damaging Blow Could be Dealt On Lovat River

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON)

Although Ile place in Russian strategic concept at this stage is not quite clear, the Rzhev-Sychevka sector salient of the Moscow front warrant special attention.

The Russians may be pointing at vast communication objectives in that area which are critical to security of the whole northern flank of the German front in Russia from the upper bend of the Dnieper River to the Baltic. A Red advance west and south of Toropets of less than 100 miles into and down the valley of the Lovat could crack the main north-south communication line upon which the enemy's northern front largely depends.

The Russians have made no concentration of events on the Moscow front for days. In some cheerful news however, that it was in that sector, west of Toropets on the lake-studded southeastern flank of the Valdai plateau and under shelter of the Soviet mountains, the Red High Command expected the main thrust of an extended Russian winter offensive to come.

Germans at Velikie Luki

Velikie Luki junction on the east bank of the Lovat less than two miles from Velikie Luki and less than thirty miles southwest down the Lovat from that junction lies Nevel, a vital rail hub of German north-south communications. Recaptured by the Russians Nevel would represent a dangerous dent on the enemy front close to the Latvian border.

It would threaten both the Vilebast gateway, 100 miles or so south-through which the German army has broke to take Smolensk, turn the Stalin line on the Dnieper and Invest Smolensk—and Dr. Pskov enemy port through which they poured to lay siege to Leningrad. A relatively small further Russian advance to the Lovat could go far to pave the way for a synchronized Red drive on Pskov from the long stalemated Lake Ilmen front north of the Valdai hills.

Could Put Him Down

Stalin is not close to achievement of his purpose of driving the invader of Russia and in the Toropets-Rzhev salient of the Moscow front than at any other point along the vast Nazi-Russian battle line. Moreover, in that region of West Central Russia, and in the Lake Ilmen area further north winter is much further advanced, than southward in the Don loop west of Stalingrad or in the Caucasus.

Critical as the situation appears for Hitler in the Stalingrad sallient an even more damaging blow could be dealt him on the Lovat. It could end at a stroke any lingering peril to Moscow and place in serious jeopardy from the north all his armies east of the Dnieper in the Moscow central Smolensk theatre.

The immediate Russian purpose in pressing on German communication keys like Velikie Luki and Nevel in the north, however, could be more limited. Attacks there must have the effect of pinning powerful elements of the German Army of the centre to their present positions and preventing substantial shifting of reserves southward to bolster the tottering Nazi Stalingrad salient.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Moon and Sixpence"

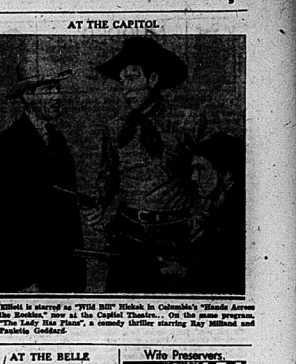
To David L. Loew and Albert Lewin belong a rousing cheer from moviegoers everywhere for their brilliant film translation of a great and famous book—Somerset Maugham's "The Moon and Sixpence." Their film production of this exciting yarn opened last night at the McCarthy Theatre thru United Artists and was rated as extremely welcome by a large and enthusiastic audience.

Not one line of this hardy classic has been deleted or softened to spare the feelings of screen sanctimony. The script, which blends stark realism with vivid drama and romance, is liberally salted with dialogue of the sort that may cause the ladies to rise and shake their fists; but they are not likely to ignore it.



The story deals with the adventures of a London stockbroker, Charles Strickland, who abandons his respectable wife and family for a fling at Paris and the Latin Quarter, obeying an irresistible urge to paint. His wanderings take him also to the raucous waterfront dives of Marseilles and he finally winds up amid the magic beauty of a coral isle in the South Seas, storied haven of enchantment for artists and those seeking escape.

Strickland is unquestionably one of the most fascinating, if reprehensible, characters in literature.

AT THE CAPITOL

Bill Elliott is starred as "Wild Bill" Hickok in Columbia's "Hands Across the Rockies," now at the Capitol Theatre. Out the same program is "The Lady Has Plans", a comedy thriller starring Ray Milland and Paulette Goddard.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Comedy Thriller"

Laughter lovers at the Capitol theatre last night when Paramount launched its comedy-thriller, "The Lady Has Plans," starring Ray Milland and Paulette Goddard, supported by Roland Young, Albert Dekker, Margaret Hayes and Cecil Kellaway.

It is high-powered entertainment of the type that is mites than welcome in these troubled times. Every moment of it is crammed with fun and excitement, a combination devoutly to be wished for and seldom achieved.

"The Lady Has Plans" is a picture designed for the entertainment of one and all. It more than achieves its purpose.

"Hands Across the Rockies"

Action-tense adventure permeates the latest Wild Bill Hickok film. Columbia's "Hands Across the Rockies," now showing at the Capitol with Bill Elliott again to be seen as the legendary gun-fighter whose exploits wrote a new chapter in the bullet-filled page of the old West. Escorted by Leonard Hilyer, and with a supporting cast headed by Mary Daily and Dub "Cannonball" Taylor, "Hands Across the Rockies" is a colorful, punch-packed drama filled with gun-blazing excitement and tender romance, a funny cartoon and the serial "The Perils of Nyoka" complete the bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Ten Gentlemen From West Point"

From one of the least known and most dramatic episodes of early American days 20th Century-Fox brings to the screen the scrumptious action-packed story of the United States Military Academy in "Ten Gentlemen From West Point," now on the Belle theatre screen.

Starring are George Montgomery, Maureen O'Hara, and John Sutton the film has been called a rousing successor to "The Shores of Tripoli" and boasts a climax that will send the blood racing through your veins.

You'll have a howl of a time when a hick from the sticks shows the city slickers how to be a success in "Re Magnificent Dope", the accompanying feature, featuring Henry Fonda, Lynn Bari, Don Ameche and Edward Everett Horton.

"Olympic Champ" a funny Pluto Walt Disney cartoon completes the program.

"The Major and the Minor" Funny

Handsome Ray Milland and Academy Award winner Ginger Rogers have the title roles in Paramount's hilarious comedy, "The Major and the Minor", which comes to the end to the Belle theatre, with Rita Johnson, Robert Benchley, Diana Lynn and Ginger's own mother. Lela Rogers.

In their first film together the two stars are said to top anything either has ever done before, when if past performances are any criterion, should mean a double treat for moviegoers.

Ginger's part is that of a small-town girl who, sadly disillusioned with life in New York, tries to buy a ticket home to Iowa—but finds that she is five dollars short of the required fare. She is then put into the women's lounge with her suitcase and comes out looking exactly like a half-fare twelve-year-old. On the train, however, she runs into difficulty.

The plight which result when "the minor" agrees to accompany a Major to his school in order to help him get a furlough accepted by her presence in his compartment are reported to be the funniest ever screened.

CHAPTER 27

Story Developments

It was Dickson, the valet-sitting. He said that Miss Emmy McCleod was dead and that she had been murdered.

Stone listened to attention and asked Dickson if he had better come over.

Dickson replied that he didn't know, to wait a minute and he would ask Mr. McCleod. In a minute he reported that Mr. McCleod said for Mr. Stone to come right over as soon as he could.

So Stone went.

Stone went to Hugh's apartment. Poo Chow let him in.

"Mr. McCleod expects me," he said.

"Yes, sir. Mr. McCleod is in the little smoking room. He bids me take you there."

In a moment Stone was in the presence of Hugh McCleod, Detective Captain Raynor and the helpful Sergeant Colby.

"I tell I must look in," he said to the policemen. "Tell me the details, Raynor."

"I'll tell you," Hugh spoke in a constrained voice. "I know what happened as well as if I had seen it done! Ogden Murray killed my sister and no police investigation and no detective work can change that fact."

"But we have to search for proofs," Raynor said. "It seems to me, Stone, that this murder and Mrs. McCleod's were by the same hand."

"Then Ogden Murray killed Alma, too," Hugh's voice was low and intense. "I have suspected it from the first, Stone, and free young Herrick. I never really thought he was the one."

Stone looked at him curiously. He had taken it for granted that McCleod believed in Herrick's guilt. He thought the man is near-family beside himself with this new sorrow that has come to him, I must not judge him.

"What we think or what we suspect doesn't matter much," Raynor said. "It is proof we want. You see, Mr. Murray was here this afternoon, Mr. McCleod?"

"Yes, he was." The words seemed to be addressed to Stone. "You left here between three and four, Mr. Stone. Murray came a half-hour, and was closeted with Emmy in her own sitting room for a half hour or so. I got this from Dunn, Emmy's valet. Dunn let Murray in, and let him out. Dunn knows Murray was there from four to half past."

"Who discovered Miss Emmy's body?" Stone asked. Hugh went on. "She expected Emmy would summon him for orders after Murray left, but Emmy didn't ring for him, and after a while, he knocked at her door. There was no answer. He found Emmy—"

"Yes, Stone," Raynor said, "the butler found Miss McCleod dead in her chair."

"You say she was smothered?" Stone said, very exactly, until I learn the autopsy report," Raynor replied, "but there was no shot, nor any visible wound."

"You are going to interview Mr. Murray?" Stone asked.

"At once."

"I saw him this afternoon," Stone told them. "At about five o'clock or early after. He did not look like a man who had just committed murder."

McCleod looked at him. "I should think," he said, slowly, "that you men must have had experience that went to prove if a man can commit a murder, he cannot help having enough will power to carry it off afterward."

"Not always," Raynor said. "A murderer is obeyed by one will motive, whatever it may be, and afterward, reaction sets in, and he is often lacking in will power and even self-control. I have seen them."

"Then who could have killed Emmy?" Hugh's voice was almost a wail. "I am not a weakling, but after Alma's injury is more than I can stand. But for father, I would go back to Scotland."

There is much to be done," Raynor said. "The men from the Homicide Bureau are upstairs now, but I doubt they find much in the way of clues."

"I must go now," Stone said, rising. "I am glad to have been of service to Herrick's affairs, and I have to be in Chicago tomorrow morning. I hope to be back soon and will see you again, Mr. McCleod."

"No, Mr. Stone. I would be glad of your help. I know you and Captain Raynor are good friends."

Once in the street, Stone beckoned a taxi and gave John Marika Malcolm's address. He went there without waiting to ask if she would see him.

He gave his name to the maid who opened the door and in a few minutes Martha Malcolm, a gentle, dignified woman, was with him.

"I am trying to trace a young woman by the name of Una Deane," he said. "Can you tell me where to look for her?"

"I wish you could tell me," Miss Malcolm said, sadly. "I, too, am trying to find her."

"She is missing, then?"

"Yes, Mr. Stone. Though I can tell you the circumstances of her disappearance, I fear that is of benefit to the finding of her."

"Tell me, please."

"Una Deane was in our school," Miss Malcolm said, "and is one of our most promising pupils. Moreover, she is a fine girl, high spirited but honest and industrious. She longs to become a real artist. Of her private life I know little. She boarded with a Mrs. Odeshan on Lexington Avenue. Three days ago, there came to the school, during work hours, a taxi driver, who said a gentleman had requested him to drive to the school, ask for Miss Deane, give her a note, and be handed to the driver, and then, he said, Miss Deane would go with him to the address she note indicated.

The note, evidently written by a man, purported to be from my brother, and said I was very ill, having had a stroke and that I was most anxious to see Miss Dlang at once and for her please to come with the bearer. The note was given to Miss Deane, who insisted on starting right off with the driver, one of the women who went to the door with Miss Deane. Said she had not got much a decent look. That was the last we have ever heard of Miss Deane. Oh, please try to find her, Mr. Stone."

"Indeed, I will try, Miss Malcolm. Can any one describe the man who came for her?"

"Not more definitely than I have told you. We have no doubt he was a regular driver and has no purpose but to obey the person who sent him upon the errand."

"He did not bring Miss Deane to this house?"

"No; that's why we are so worried. Where did he take her? Who is a working for? Why should any one want to harm that lovely girl? Una held herself rather aloof from companions and I feel sure she had no men friends. But somebody made up that story about my being ill, and so lured her away from the school."

"Thank you! I have found you, Miss Malcolm. You know Ogden Murray?"

"Oh, yes; he took quite a little notice of Una at a party I took her to at the McCleods."

"Yes and she left the party before the tragedy occurred?"

"Yes, I am thankful to say, we did."

"You have communicated with Miss Deane's boarding house?"

"Yes, Mrs. Coleman, who seems a good woman, is worried about Una, but she can give us no help."

"Was your brother with you at the time?"

"No, he was out of town. That's what first made me think it was queer."

"Miss Malcolm, I hope to find the girl. Tell me, Miss Deane had from teeth that have a little space from one another?"

"Yes. She told me her mother's teeth were the same."

"Thank you; everything you tell me is a help, now, I must be going. I will let you know of—I hope, my success."

Stone then went to see Clarence Bliss.

He told him of Emmy's death, and they discussed the question of telling Brand Herrick of it.

"I think yes," Bliss said. "I hope the finding of the murderer of Miss Emmy will show up the murderer of Alma McCleod. If they are one and the same, as Raynor seems to think, then it is not Brand Herrick. Still, it is someone else, whom they would not suspect in Alma's case, for—do we want to argue, Brand's hopes, falsely?"

"He should be told," Stone said. "If there's a gleam he ought to know it. He's very sad and lonely."

"Tell me if you have a hint about Jenny Wiley."

"I do not. Wiley don't tell Brand that. My hint is so faint. If my guess is correct, young Wiley hadn't found out she was an art student. I'd ever get on her trail. Good night, old chap. I'm off on my way to Chicago. My work there will! I think, finish off the case, for better or worse."

"I'll bet on the better," said Bliss. "Good luck."

Cobb met him on his arrival with a smiling face. In Cobb's hotel room, they had a talk.

"I know where Wiley is," Cobb said, with a little triumphantly. Stone expressed due surprise and pleasure.

"I did just what you told me," the youth went on. "I got hold of Chief and I was sent down here for you. And did he fall! Well, he told me some back at an hour. And then he gave me the dope. Wiley, under the name of Abe Conners is in this here jail. I wrote it all down for you. His time he up in a few months. I guess I have seen him. But you didn't tell me to do that, so I just marked time till you got here."

Then Cobb recounted his sessions with Wiley's wife and with the terrific Ben Monk.

"You think Monk is a pal of Wiley's?" Stone said.

Cobb was not sure of that. He goes to see Wiley in jail, and I got a chance to hear them once or frequent co- his own account."

"I wonder if I'd better escape acquaintance with Ben Monk, before I see Wiley?"

"The feller's gone outa town for a couple days."

"How do you know?"

"I've made friends with a guy that lives near Ben Monk and this lad is keen for a quarter any day in the week. I get quite a few pointers from him. Monk is away for two or three days and he has a sort of stand-in, who keeps his place goin'. This is a spindly lad he just washes out. A young chap. He don't pretend to think they're up to something shady. The substitute guy—Colly, I think his name—manages drops in at the jail to see Wiley in visitin' hours. Say, Stone, there's some double crossing going on. Monk did something to Wiley in New York and it had to do with some girl, something like kidnapping."

"How do you know this much?"

"I was told by this feller that tells me things and I pay him. Lott, his name is. He says Monk ought to something that is driving Wiley frantic. Lott says Colly is trying to get the girl's address out of Wiley but can't. Same time guards listen in all the time, and Wiley can't tell to Colly—they are there."

"Cobb, I believe you've got some thing there! When is the visiting hour?"

"Right about now, sir. You'd have to hustle."

Stone started off.

Axis Powers Gambled On False Premise Says Admiral Stark

London, Nov. 26. (CP)—Leaders of the Royal and United States Navies told a Thanksgiving luncheon of the Anglo-American Society to-day that the combined fleets have already taught the world a new lesson in the meaning of seapower and "ultimately defeated Hitler.

Because they understand the sea and have established supremacy of sea communications the United Nations have been able to strike and will continue to strike when and how the common strategy demands", said Admiral Stark, Chief of, U.S. Naval Forces in the European theatre, said the continental powers gambled on the false premise that shore-based aircraft could by themselves destroy seapower.

Little Activity Reported From Libyan Front

Cairo, Nov. 27 (AP)—British Middle East headquarters said today for the first time since the Axis Army's offensive was launched against Field Marshal Rommel's El Alamein line Oct. 23 that "there is nothing to report from our land forces" and aerial activity was relatively limited.

"A large force of our medium bombers attacked a landing ground at Marada, 200 west of El Agheila, on the night of Nov. 25-26," the communique said. "Bombs fell among dispersed aircraft, causing fires."

Derelicts, gasoline depots and oil tanks were declared fired at Tunis by another communique with the fighters of Lt.-Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's command as direct hits were scored on railway installations, freight yards and warehouses.

"Three Axis ships were damaged in a series of attacks, at sea and in port, a communique said.

"Yesterday a north-bound Junkers 52 carrying troops was attacked by our two-engined fighters and shot down into the sea off Cape Bon Tunisia," it was declared. "It was not known if any Axis troops managed to be flying north when Hitler's efforts are directed toward reinforcing the Tunisian garrison, a situ but such a party might be staff members heading for the Sicilian way-stations.)

The communique said all Allied planes assigned th the operations returned.

Trenton and District

Large Crowd Watches Launching of Tender

Trenton, (Special)—The second of a series of naval tenders being built in Trenton was launched from the sliding on the Canadian Pacific Railway on Thursday afternoon.

The small craft to play a most important part in our Canadian Navy as they ply back and forth from the coast to the ocean large naval vessels which go to make up our Canadian fleet. They are used principally for towing work, mine boats, which are unable to get directly into the harbours, with supplies of all kinds including water and food.

Though the weather was wet and cold hundreds of spectators dined the town bridge to get first hand glimpse of this interesting boat as she slipped silently down the way.

A crew made up of members of our Canadian Navy from Montreal was on hand to take over as the ship hit the water.

Poultry Market Prices Steady

Toronto, Nov. 27 —(CP)— The dressed poultry market has remained fairly steady during the current week, the Dominion Bureau of Agriculture reports. Receipts of chicken have been heavy and sold today on the Toronto stock while those of the larger dealers were apparently not increasing their volume into storage as demand for fresh poultry grows.

The quality of chickens was improving.

Supplies of fowl were not too plentiful, producers evidently keeping the heavy stock while egg prices were high.

Arrivals of turkeys, ducks and geese were on the light side, a few producers were getting 30-33 cents lb. basis Grade A and moving immediately into consumer channels.

The local demand has remained fairly steady, the out-of-town movement has been more active, with Montreal and Quebec getting forward to northern and eastern points during the past week.

Some western turkeys have been bought for delivery here, but were to be determined the day of shipment.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 27 —(CP)— Dressed-weight were up 10 cents at Hamilton and prices were unchanged at other boom-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $11.75.

Dressed-weight: Barrie and Hamilton $14.25 delivered, London $13.85 delivered, Brantford $14.10 delivered, Kitchener $13.85 plus transportation, Stratford $13.85 plus transportation.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP) — Western oils pushed into the forefront today on the Toronto stock exchange. Golds and base metals were dull.

Royalite advanced a point to 20, Home Oil a point to 12 cents to 4.75, Calgary and Edmonton 3 to 1.06 and Anglo-Canadian 9 to 4.45.

Prices were stronger for Noranda, Sudbury Basin and Falconbridge and a bit weak for Bankfield and Sicoy Stock.

Domn. Mesabi, Hollinger, Chesterville and Canadian Malartic were moderately weak while Mclntyre was up 10 to $5.

Steel, utility and bank stocks did better. Maple Leaf Milling common and Standard Paving firmed to new highs for the year. Simpsons, Tip Top Tailors and Consumers Gas added 1.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 27. (AP)—Wall Streeters returned from their holiday festivities today to about the same market opinions as they had before and the stock list was that today's stock buying continued on a selective basis.

Although peace favorites continued to attract mild demand as the battle front news remained encouraging, selling in the war, group never was urgent and the opinion was expressed that perhaps there had been a little too much liquidating emphasis placed on the latter recently. Tax offerings still were a restraining influence.

Dealings were slow and price changes negligible from the chart but plus marks led a shade the best of it near the fourth hour.

Bonds and commodities were narrow.

Among Canadian stocks, Distillers Seagram and Canadian Pacific were fractionally higher, McIntyre Mines lost one point and Dome Mines 1-4.

Everett Hanna Elected President Of Tyendinaga S. S. Association

The annual Sunday School convention for Tyendinaga was held at Salem Church Nov. 18th, 1942.

The devotional period was in charge of Rev. Mr. Lochead. Reports of various Sunday School departments were given. Music by Mr. Pleasant group included a piano selection by Doug Wannamaker.

An address was given by Rev. Mr. McKenzie on the theme "Waste, Salvage or Our Moral and Spiritual Lives." A short talk by Mr. Lochead was entitled "What Provision Are We Making for the Future."

Demonstration of C.G.I.T. work was given by Mrs. (Rev.) McKenzie to encourage this fine training for girls. This demonstration was called out by six girls—Miss Bessie Boldrick taking over after Mrs. McKenzie had given the introductory. This was very capably given and should encourage a group of girls to organize.

After the nominating committee and resolutions were appointed a discussion and new idea period was conducted by Rev. Mr. Lochead. The convention adjourned for supper. During intermission, Bible games were indulged in.

Evening Session

Evening session opened with song service conducted by Douglas Wannamaker. Rev. McKenzie of Plainfield took charge of worship service.

The following names were submitted and accepted to act on executive for the following year and Rev. Spencer, Tabernacle Church, Belleville, conducted the installation of officers.

President: Mr. Everett Hanna.

1st. Vice: Mr. J. Blathwayek.

2nd. Vice: Mr. Donald Leslie.

Sec.-Treas.: Miss Bessie Boldrick.

Children's Div.: Mrs. Clarence Hagerman.

Girls' Div.: Mrs. Chas. Treverton.

Boys' Div.: Douglas Wannamaker.

Secretary: Mrs. E. Badgley.

Teacher Train.: Rev. Mr. McKenzie.

Temperance: Mrs. J. C. Milligan.

Home Dept.: Mrs. Sam Elliott.

Adult Dept.: Mr. J. C. Milligan.

The report of resolution committee was read by Mrs. F. Bennett.

It was suggested by Mr. Lochead that the convention be changed to one evening session. This was recommended to the executive and accepted. Music was provided by Mimrose orchestra.

Rev. Mr. Spencer addressed the convention in his usual capable manner, his theme being "Gather up the Fragments", Jesus likes our lives orderly and without waste or fragments. Talents are our biggest waste. War effort is important but we are for the welfare of our church and Sunday Schools if we are not careful, Christian character is what men and boys are fighting for; final victory depends on the Christian character.

"Children's first impressions of God are reflected in Sunday School teacher and home training. One of great adult problems is the teaching of Christian principles. Teacher training can be taken by mail the same as any technical course. We are using our spare time and talents as we are really able if we would face the task.

"Consecrated and devoted love of God is the heart of success in response of the class. By having this love you are able to gather the fragments that otherwise would never have been found. Christ can only gather up fragments through you and me. Let us do our part.

Music was given by Melrose ceremonies. Rev. Mr. Lochead closed the convention with Benediction and National Anthem.

MEMORANDUM TO BE RELEASED

Labor Minister Announces He Will Make Public Text Submitted by Elliott M. Little

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP) — Labor Minister Mitchell announced today he will make public the text of the 70-page memorandum submitted to him by Elliott M. Little before he resigned as National Selective Service director.

Mr. Little said today in a statement issued in Montreal that Mr. Mitchell's attitude in regard to these proposals was such that he could not expect from the minister "that support which is necessary if this, or any other plan of National Selective Service is to function properly," and left him "no alternative but to submit my immediate resignation."

The decision to release the text of the memorandum, Mr. Mitchell said in a brief statement, was reached "in view of the public interest in the proposals submitted by Mr. E. M. Little."

"Copies now are being prepared and it is expected will be ready in time for distribution on Friday," the statement said.

"It was pointed out by the minister's office that the proposals, in the natural course of things, would come before the National Selective Service Advisory Board at its next meeting.

"Public involving matters of high policy naturally would be for cabinet council to consider."

Mr. Mitchell said in an interview that he had "no comment" to make on Mr. Little's Montreal statement.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on our front steps with Trixie after the dinner bell to ring for supper and old Admiral Tricker and Mrs. Tricker went passed taking a walk, pop saying. That's certainly a beautiful day for a walk old couple. I wonder how preserved old folks like them admire they do it. As far as I can admire is concerned, I'd say he got that way by never having a thought in his whole life and a grain of sense in it, and yet that can hardly be the answer because I've known men his age just as devoid of brains as he is, and yet they were physical wrecks, to a man.

And pretty soon they came back again and stopped to talk to pop, and pop said, I was just commenting on what a wonderfully hale and hearty couple you are. If you'll tell me your secret of perpetual health I promise not to let it go any further without your written permission, he said.

It's just sane eating, that's the long and the short of it, Admiral Tricker said. Ninety 9 out of a hundred people die their own graves with their teeth. Look at me, 79 years old and never been sick a day and never expect to be. I haven't touched a slice of white bread in 50 years, and I eat one meal a day and it's a natural meal that I call my two bowl diet, one bowl of brown rice and milk and one bowl of raw vegetables, he said, and Mrs. Tricker said, Dont pay any attention to him, he's just too plain stubborn to get sick, that's all. I'm a year older than he is and I'm twice as healthy and active, and my favorite hobby is eating raw beet and onion sandwiches between my 4 regular meals, and I invariably drink 3 bottles of beer before I go to bed and always keep a hot of cody under my pillow, she said.

And they kept on going, and pop said, Well, I guess I'll just continue with my own system of simple living and keep my fingers crossed, and he went in and ate 3 helpings of liver and onions.

FLEET SACRIFICE SEEN AS HOPEFUL SIGN

Action at Toulon Indicates Rising Of French Spirit

Lack of Harmony Among French May End With Darlan Being Accepted

HAVEN FOR SURVIVORS

By GLADWIN HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Allied ports held out the hand of welcome today for any surviving units of the martyred French fleet which defiantly chose mass suicide at Toulon rather than the choice of Hitler.

Even as great explosions still were tearing out the vitals of the stricken ships, Admiral Jean Darlan went on the air during the night to appeal to what surviving units there might be to make for the haven of United Nations bases.

Whether any of the ships got away was problematical; conflicting reports reaching London said some smaller units, possibly including submarines, had destroyed part of the fleet before Hitler sent his armored columns racing in the Mediterranean naval base.

Regardless of whether all the Toulon fleet, the pride of the Allies the scuttling in itself was regarded as a tremendous setback for the most hopeful symbol yet of French resurgence.

As the Russian government newspaper Izvestia put it, the incident "undoubtedly will be one of those cleansing frames of shame and capitulation."

While arch-collaborationist Marcel Deat was quoted by the pro-Nazi Paris radio as saying "this insane Frenchman must unreservedly take Germany's proffered hand," reports from the continent indicated France was becoming united against the Axis.

Incidentally, crystallization of French sentiment is expected to help speed the disappearance among pro-Allied French which came to the fore with acceptance of Darlan as temporary high commissioner in Allied-occupied North Africa.

Some London observers interpreted the Toulon incident as vouchsafing Darlan's sincerity but pending a visit to Algiers by de Gaulle is expected to make soon to Washington, the admiral's status remained in question.

Darlan's appeal last night to any remaining French ships to make for the Allied fleet was the second he had addressed to the squadron to come over to the cause of the United Nations. The first broadcast, time her apparent to Marshal Petain but not to active collaborator with the Allies, sent his first appeal after Darlan marched into southern France on Nov. 11.

Then the French government-in-exile army made ready for disbandment as the last pretense of an independent Vichy Government faded out.

Explosion Continues

Muffled explosions from the sunken hulks continued to reverberate over Toulon harbor throughout the night, a Vichy broadcast dispatch said.

After first declaring that some of the vessels were saved by German troops from the fires that gutted the vanished naval base before dawn yesterday, the Vichy radio later acknowledged the fleet "mostly scuttled herself."

"France's old glory sank into the grave," a Nazi radio announcer said.

But Allied observers here and in the neutral capitals said uncertain pictures the first state is the "resurrection of France." The report of destruction of some 60 warships was regarded as a severe setback for Germany and the Italian fleet by the hard-pressed Allied

Reports Some Destroyers Escaped.

Report from Vichy and Berlin (The BBC) quoted a British correspondent accompanying the Free French destroyers" had escaped from Toulon and reached a safe port en route to North Africa. The broadcast was heard by the United States Federal Communications Commission. Earlier it was reported two submarines made their way out of the harbor which had held three battleships, four heavy cruisers, nine light cruisers, 32 destroyers, a seaplane tender and 27 submarines.

Although all information concerning Toulon came from German-controlled sources there was little disposition in London to question the accounts of the scuttling. Observers said Allied reconnaissance planes probably had already brought back pictures of the harbor scene and that the Germans would know there would be little detection of a hoax.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle and Admiral Philippe-Marie Auboyneau, commander-in-chief of the Fighting French Navy, ordered all flags on Fighting French ships at half mast today and observers of a one minute silence at 10 a.m. in memory of the French sailors who died with their ships.

When Vichy Express naval commentator, W. A. Crumley, expressed the belief the Germans probably would not attempt to salvage the Atlantic 220,000 tons of warships. It would take the best part of two years to float and refit them, he said.

It was generally agreed the destruction of the Toulon fleet as a possible hostile force ended a major Allied anxiety that the warships might be united with the Italian fleet in the Mediterranean.

The Vichy radio, after giving early details of the naval drama at Toulon, lapsed into periods of unannounced silence. The Vichy announcer said all the ships had been sunk and coastal batteries destroyed by their crews "to prevent any of them occupy the port on Hitler's order.

The Berlin radio reported last night that "thick clouds of smoke are still rising from the scuttled warships," it said.

Seven New Prisoners.

The Swiss radio told of long lines of French soldiers marching through the streets of Toulon as Axis prisoners.

Reflecting the armistice-army maintained by the Vichy government at 40,000 men, the Berlin radio said 10,000 of them would return to their homes with the next few days.

The Germans issued a denial from "official French quarters" of a report that Admiral Jean Darlan, the Allied nominee for high commissioner in French North Africa, was dead. The report said he has taken in part in all deliberations over Hitler's letter. Yesterday Darlan met with Laval and held a long conference with Pierre Laval.

German diplomatic correspondents here write that the Vichy government tells them to write, said the seizure of Toulon could be blamed on the British-American air attacks. It said "demonstrated at the decisive moment, the loyalty and courage of the French colonial empire was at stake, that Petain and Laval would enforce obedience to his order."

The French members of the Fighting French Navy and the Admiralty staff in London marches to the French Church in exile to protest and observed a minute's silence in tribute to the French sailors who died at Toulon. Flags at Fighting French headquarters and the Admiralty were at half mast.

U.S. Tank Destroyer Expected to Play Important Part in Tunisia Battle

By J. R. TRIPLETT
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Equipment into Tunisia by both the Allies and the Axis has made it easy to suggest that battles of manoeuvre still persist throughout much of the Gen. Eisenhower command's budding offensive.

New Tank destroyers of the U.S. armored force—lread-tracked speedsters mounting 75 millimeter guns —were among the cargoes sent to North Africa. Afrika was the key to wide the edge needed to pen up the Germans and Italians or drive them into the sea. The Germans are both wheeled and fixed anti-tank defenders.

The use of tanks against tanks will not be the only weakness for one side or the other.

An example is the sheltering of a large British armored force in a Libyan desert ambush last June 13, a battle which shocked Marshal Rommel on his way toward Alexandria and the Nile.

Pursuing a light German armored division and, in turn, pursued by a heavy German armored division, the British forces were trapped in a defile between the German guns and Nazi 88-millimetre batteries reported so skilfully camouflaged that reconnaissance fliers did not detect them.

The tables were turned eventually, however, by the British 8th Army's drive to Mersa El Brega—a set piece which found himself stripped of tanks.

Hitler flew 12-ton tanks to Tunisia and has moved heavier armor by sea. But he still has his last stand in North Africa.

Reinforcements are well within confirmation that Col.-Gen. Hans Guderian had been transferred across the Mediterranean in an effort to help Rommel stem the hole. Guderian in the tank expert published by the Nazis as the "Panzer General" led the Nazi panzers in the 1940 campaign against France.

Possessing a strong frontal shield and packing a powerful punch, the new 76 tank destroyer is designed, in the traditional phrase, to hunt, spot and destroy the enemy. The 106 gun has a diameter of half-inch larger than Hitler's 88's and greater hitting power.

Against the lack of cold and topography, the destroyer crew has a greater visibility and manoeuvrability than tanks and less heat, noise and vibration.

GERMANS ORDER EVACUATION OF COASTAL AREAS

Inhabitants Must Vacate Homes by November 30 Decree Issued By Nazis

AFRAID OF INVASION

By J. VAN DEN BOGAERT
(Nazis Staff Correspondent)

London, Nov. 28 (Aneta to CP)—The inhabitants of Nord Holland coastal areas are in a turmoil as German authorities proceed with enforcement of their decree for the evacuation of the entire province by Nov. 30 as a safeguard against Allied invasion, it was reported today.

Scenes in the affected areas are described as similar to those which have taken place all over Europe in the Nazi occupation of invading armies.

Despite Nazi orders to leave everything people go through the streets pushing handcarts loaded with household effects and goods. Vehicles of all sorts are being pressed into service.

The evacuation order itself showy the anxiety with which the Germans regard the possibility of an invasion by the United Nations, and this is further betrayed by recent utterances of officials connected with the Nazi regime.

The German Rear-Admiral Reichsdr. Gadow declared a few days ago in the German newspaper Deutsche Zeitung in den Niederlanden that the evacuation was vital as the possibility of invasion constituted a "permanent" (in German) danger.

Anton Mussert, the Dutch Nazi leader, declared in a speech broadcast in the party organ, Volk En Vaderland, early this month that "the German forces count on the possibility of British invasion."

Reichsdr. Gadow said, he said, the evacuation order as a humane measure.

"The coastal zone may become a battle-area, and the population must have limited themselves to bringing with them what they can carry without needing the population which might be crushed between the warring armies," he added. To prevent this, however, the Germans planned the evacuation.

These pretentious of benignity are assailed by the Amsterdam Gazet, however. He alluded to the unanimity of The Netherlands people in opposing the Germans. Now not concerned for Dutch lives and welfare, but for those of the Germans the German defence forces greater difficulties in the unhampered movements if and when they come.

Reichsdr. Gadow's declaration has affected the entire nation. Not only is the property left by him in his happy ferment as people are torn from their homes, but other districts are feeling the effects as the emigrés from the coast flood the hinterland in search of new quarters.

History May Record Greatest Invention Of War is Lend-Lease Aid

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Nov. 28.—Of all the inventions of the war, history may some day record the greatest, lend-lease, the force of which is being exerted in every part of the world.

When first conceived by President Roosevelt and passed after a stubborn and, at times, bitter fight, by the United States congress, it was regarded by many Americans as a grandiose piece of of loose charity. It was a one-way traffic in those days, with Britain the sole recipient of a tiny trickle of food and munitions.

Today lend-lease is a two-way stream of munition, food, raw materials, production methods, scientific and military designs and information that crosses and recrosses every area of the globe.

Lend-lease may be said to be a new use as a method of reconstruction in liberated countries such as those of the old provinces will be extended to all territories released from the Axis domination the people supplied not only with food and clothing but with arms where they organize to fight at the side of the United Nations.

That promise of the president means that if Italy folds or in consequence, the Italian people be assured of immediate help and a chance to fight their way to freedom by resuming the fight on the side of the United Nations.

When the President announced in the week his determination to use that material wealth of the United States is placed behind rehabilitation plans for small countries, he probably had lend-lease in mind as the economic machinery to be used. That would carry it into the post-war period, as a weapon of the peace, and making it a permanent agency of the United States government.

Canada is practically alone among the United Nations for having stayed clear of lend-lease, preferring to pay cash on the barrel head for all purchases in the United States. There are factions within the Roosevelt administration who would like to see Canada accept lend-lease because it would simplify many administrative problems, but no pressure is being applied to force a change.

Military equipment is being sent to Russia, Australia, the Chinese, the British, the Australians and all the other people fighting the Axis, as an indication of that, the value of the equipment and supplies shipped from the U.S. since the rout of Rommel's army, exceeded $1,000,000,000.

In October alone, the value of lend-lease shipments to Russia was $900,000,000 and in the last four months, nearly $3,000,000,000.

That figure is only the one-way stream. While the United States is receiving raw materials and supplies, the recipient nations were sending war equipment to American forces abroad.

ALLIES EDGING FORWARD STEP BY STEP AT BUNA

Desperately-Resisting Japs Driven Back in Two Counter Blows

FIERCE FIGHTING

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Nov. 28 (AP)—Fighting for every foot, Australian and American soldiers edged forward step by step toward Buna today after beating back two sharp counter-attacks which desperately resisting Japanese pocketed around that eastern New Guinea area.

Apparently using reinforcements landed at sea on previous nights, the Japanese struck out in efforts to break the ring which threatens to a coastal area of some 40 miles, but were thrown back with heavy losses. Today's communique said.

After this diversion the Allies resumed their advance, pressing in the same way that they have been since the enemy only a few days ago was within strongly-prepared positions along the twelve miles of coast between Buna and Gona.

The carefully-hidden machine-gun nests and mortar positions behind which the defenders are scouted out, softened by artillery and bombs, if possible, then overwhelmed by the swift thrust of infantry, fighting it is the use of grenades, rifles, pistols and light machine-guns. Usually it is necessary to kill all the defenders in the position.

Then the operation starts all over again on the next strongpoint.

The communique said Allied airplanes continued to aid the ground troops all they could by repeated heavy strafing and bombing of the Japanese lines.

(Fierceness of the fighting was apparent in a Sydney wire correspondent's dispatch describing the engagement early this week. Two Australian companies were in the action but one lost 66 of their own in taking an enemy gun which has been holding up the Allied advance near Sopula a few miles from Buna, he said.)

SUBMARINE PACK BEATEN OFF IN MID-ATLANTIC

Merchant Seamen Battle Axis U-Boats for Night and Day

3 SUBS SUNK

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Mid-Ocean Convoy Battle, Nov. 28 (CP)—Sinking of several German submarines and the damaging of another was reported here today by merchant seamen of a United Nations convoy that ran the gauntlet of wolf pack in mid-Atlantic and beat off a fierce night and day attack.

These men, more than 100 tough veterans of the sea, declared they lost their vessels in the running fight that raged sporadically across the Atlantic for a week, but that they believed the score was even when they docked at a British port. Allied corvettes smashed the squadron of submarines.

"I'm sure we got three of them at least," said an Irish gunner who told his story in a Navy League hostel here, "because I was there when they exploded. I'm not sure about two, but I can't vouch for that."

The men told how the attack opened in the light of a fat harvest moon that lit the sea like daylight, later when a spot of burning oil marked the destruction of the last U-boat.

Expected Attack.

The gunner, who asked that his name not be used because, 'my family might be hard and worry,' said they had been expecting the attack. "We knew we had subs on our trail, so we were more or less prepared for something to happen," he explained.

"It happened, all right," he went on. "Just after I'd turned in to get my bunk to get a little sleep. You don't undress when you're on watch for a long time, and I needed that sleep.

"But I didn't get it. I was awakened by an explosion, right in front. It was a terrific one. Sounding another ship, I guess, but didn't have much time to worry about it. Got up to get to my feet my ship shook all over.

"I knew we had been hit, and not by a depth charge, so got out on deck station. The ship was going down by the stern.

Few Survivors By Blast

"Quite a few of the fellows were killed by the blast, about twenty I guess. The rest of us got away. I'd a lifeboat and a life raft. After about two hours, we were picked up."

Then the rescue ship put on speed in an attempt to catch the convoy. One of the corvettes came back for prosecution had to wait only a few hours before they plump depth charges were put to good use.

RUSSIANS DRAW POCKET CLOSER AROUND ENEMY

Columns Striking To ward Rear of Hitler's Stalingrad Assault Forces

BLOCKHOUSES STORMED

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Nov. 28 (AP) — Russian columns striking eastward toward the rear of Hitler's Stalingrad assault forces have thrown the Germans across the Don River and have captured another citadel around the enemy at the Volga citadel, front-line dispatches said today.

The army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda said the German war left on the west bank of the Don in the battle zone of Stalingrad and further advances were claimed northwest and southwest of the city despite German reinforcements and a heavy snow that hampered the fighting.

Some 300,000 Axis troops still at Stalingrad also appeared to be growing danger from Red army forces pressing overcoming strong counter-attacks and pushing westward toward the Don River across a German supply corridor stretching southwest from the beleaguered city.

Neither pocket has been reported entirely closed, but Stalingrad's garrison was doing its part by shoving the Don bridgehead to the east ward the Red bayonets thrusting in from the east.

Cannot Use Winter Shelter

In the factory area that Hitler's legions had captured in their abortive assault against the bitter Russian winter, the backbone of German defenses swept the invaders from 30 blockhouses, the mid-day communique reported. The capture of several blockhouses in the area.

Northwest of the city 700 Germans were reported killed at one point and 300 at another as Red troops continued the advances that were threatening to seal Hitler's Stalingrad assault forces into a great pocket between the Volga and the Don.

German counter-attacks were decided and fruitless and further attacks scored southwest of the city.

On the Leningrad front Soviet artillery, snipers and scouts were reported killing 1,200 enemy in the last few days.

Northwest of Tuapse on the Black Sea the Russians announced the capture of an important height and fierce fighting was continuing.

Many Prisoners Taken

Large Nazi food stores and hundreds of additional prisoners were officially declared to have been captured.

Allies Now Within Heavy Artillery Range of Tunis

Offensive Moving Forward Beneath Shelter Wings Of Allied Air Force

BOMB SUPPLY LINES

London, Nov. 28 (AP).—The enemy acknowledged today that the reinforced Allies had launched violent attacks before the Axis' Tunisian bridgehead base, the probable decisive battleground of Tunisia.

This report, from the Nazi controlled Paris radio, reported Africa can reports that the climactic battle may have been the enemy DNB radio Bab region, a tactically important communications hub outside the Tunis-Bizerte fortifications are while Allied dispatches already had reported taken.

Both Axis communiques, however, mentioned only the first local fighting on the two North African fronts, Tunisia and Libya. The Italian high bulletin reported a raid on the Allied airfield at Bone, Algeria, where it said runways and grounded planes were hit, and the Germans claimed 30 Allied planes were destroyed.

Striking deep at the roots of reinforcement and supply for the armies in North Africa, the R.A.F. was reported by the British communique to have struck in the area of the big Sicilian ports and the Messina and Reggio Calabrese Island of Letos, causing damages at both places.

Earlier, however, the British radio announced that the British 1st Army in the backbone of Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Anderson's British, American and French fighting forces—has "hit its defence positions for the big offensive.

The period of patrol activity was declared completed, this within two weeks after the Allied armies crossed the Tunisian frontier by mountain path and desert trail from Allied-occupied Algeria.

The British radio said the Allies were within twelve miles—within heavy artillery range — of Tunis. The day before, it said, the enemy had been battered by repeated Allied air attacks.

A United States War Department communique announced that operations during its operations which cost but two fighting aircraft, whose plans were lost.

The Allied air forces successfully bombed enemy communications in northeastern Tunisia (the Bizerte-Tunis area) and fighter and bomber patrols attacked enemy reconnaissance.

Straight Fight For Mayoralty Seems Assured

Indications that the mayoralty contest in Belleville would be a straight two-cornered affair seemed imminent today, when out of the six candidates who yesterday were nominated for that position, only two, Mayor Thomas Thompson and Alderman Harry Rollins, had qualified. There was still a remote possibility, however, that Clare B. Morgan might qualify, as well as the other three aldermen, Alderman H. J. Clarke, ex-Mayor George Reid, and Alderman Earl Reid, who yesterday signified their intentions of having their names withdrawn.

For Hydro Commissioner two of the three nominees, Commissioner Morley F. Duff and Mr. George James have qualified, assuring an election for the position.

Out of 31 nominations for aldermen, only 12 had qualified up to noon, these being Thomas Cushing, Harry Reid, Earl Reid, Albert Bernish, Frank S. Pollwell, Thomas Jeffery, Robert Wade, Frank Clarke as Jeffery, Robert Temple, Russell F. Wotten and Harold G. Woodley.

Two of the seven nominated for school trustee have qualified, these being Mrs. Peters and Mrs. George Wishart. Five are to be elected.

Urges Passage of Bylaw to Avoid Possibility of Cumbersome Council If City Population Reaches 15,000

Alderman H. J. Clarke in Letter to Electors of Belleville Explains Importance of Precautionary Step to Eliminate Possibility of City Having Large Council of 22 Members if City Population Should Reach 15,000 —Under Bylaw Such Council Is Created Automatically Incidentally Save About $2,000 Yearly in Expenses of City Government If Population Does Not Become Operative

Belleville, Nov. 28, 1942.

To the Electors of Belleville:

On Monday, Dec. 7, you will be asked to express your opinion on what is styled "a by-law to regulate the composition of the city council". I am introducing this by-law in council, I feel that you should be informed as to why such a by-law is required.

Some years ago, probably when Belleville became a city, by-laws were passed to divide the city into wards and enacting that each ward should elect three aldermen to represent them in council. This made a council of twenty-two, including the mayor and the mayor. These by-laws were followed until comparatively recent times when it was decided that the council was too large and cumbersome for the city, but what sections of the city.

Accordingly a by-law was prepared to put the provisions of section 46 (1c) of the Municipal Act which enacted that the council of any city should be elected by the general vote of the electors at large, but that the council should be one for each 1,000 of population. It is this by-law that I am now requesting under. But Section 2 of the above Act provides that the council shall consist of not more than 15,000 the number of aldermen elected shall be twelve and they were elected by wards; in our case that would mean that whenever our population at 14,999, and it is then automatically and officially announced we have passed the 15,000 mark then automatically at the next municipal election we would have to elect eight additional aldermen. If however you approve of this by-law, and this section (3) does not apply, the number of those to be elected would be two per ward or a total of fourteen aldermen.

The by-law has no other object whatever, but is purely of a precautionary nature to avoid a cumbersome council in the event of Belleville's population reaching 15,000. If it receives your approval, and I sincerely hope that it will, it will continue in force in your council by a general vote of the city as at present, and the following year will save yourselves approximately $2000 per year in the expenses of the city council, and as your chairman of finance, I am deeply conscious of this saving, and in every other economy that is possible without sacrificing efficiency. I am also conscious of its being large enough, some of us think it is a good deal too large, we were in a minority. To enlarge the council, would be to increase the expenses, a great mistake, from whatever viewpoint you look at it. I need hardly add that it is not likely that the 15,000 mark in our population, this by-law will be automatically null and void, but we have every reason to believe that we will reach it before another election.

In view of these statements, which I trust fairly, I ask you to support the by-law by voting "yes".

Yours very truly,

H. J. Clarke, B.A.,
Chairman of Finance.

Assembly Wednesday, Nov. 25

Mr. Turner opened the assembly period by reading the announcements, among which was a plea for girls to help prepare for the Y.M. C.A. canteen, one each day, from four to seven. One girl is required for each period but there will be no other remuneration. Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Hagerman and Mrs. Hall formally welcomed and loud applause, Mr. Turner duly expressed the sympathy of the school to Mr. J. Ben Hall in the loss of his wife, which he and several other masters left to attend the funeral.

Mr. Hall read the Scripture lesson, Psalm 24, and led us in prayer. Mr. Hall presided at the piano. Most gave the war savings report for the week, as a whole very low, only $110.75 and the leading forms are still low: XIII-B, $12.00 and XII-B, $132.75.

The band obliged us—with a selection which was immediately demanded an encore. Mr. Mayhee then read a poem, which is the number of Christmas carols. In fact, he declared it with a shout at short though it was. Assembly, as usual, ended with the National Anthem, played by drummers distinguished themselves.

Basketball on the Blankets for British Fund were numerous and varied. The results were: IX-B one; X-D, one; X-B, one; IX-C, one; Mr. Hall's brother; XI-F and XII-E, one; XII-B, one; IX-C, one; IX-O, one.

Girls' Sport News

We had a well-contested week of Basketball and already promising results are coming up in the Junior Games. X-A is in the lead at this moment, and is closely followed by X-B. Both of this group have a very good player, indeed.

The Senior Basketball games are now under way and they promise to be very interesting for the games.

Congratulations are in order to the new executive of the Girls' Athletic Society. The following are the results of the Bulletin Board outside of Room 114 is as follows: Honorary Pres.—Miss Mac-Vico-President, Betty Johns; Secretary, Mary Treasurer, Dena Pardee.

We wish the new officers the best of luck, and we will all try to co-operate with them in the best of our ability.

—Evelyn Allison.

Class-Room Chatter

They were earnestly discussing the Assembly. Said one, "Gosh, they came to that part about "Eve, why things did crawl with you" and I just had to laugh." A murmur from the back (could it have been Mr. Thompson?) said, "Oh, you did, did you?"

An exasperated teacher finally lost his patience. "Look here", he said, "I'm not running a school for little children".

The poor student was struggling with the French translation. "Sit down all down. You're too slow with your work." "Yes, especially French only."

Cuff Notes

Gee, we were awful disappointed. Yes, we were picturing a tea dance full of big, bulking football players, but instead we were welcomed (with a puzzled frown) unexpectedly, into the auditorium of Mikobites. So they were the ones who brought us the sounds? Hmmm . . . And now we know what the school stage looks like for Assembly. After having been hidden behind curtains for so long, we can't be sure as to what it looks like—until the next time.

For the last time—it was not supposed to be—Commissioner Newman on her going to the hospital, etc. Now we will welcome (with a puzzled frown) unexpected, into the auditorium of Mikobites. So they were the ones who brought us the sounds? Hmmm . . . And now we know what the school stage looks like for Assembly. After having been hidden behind curtains for so long, we can't be sure as to what it looks like—until the next time.

For the last time—it was not supposed to be—Commissioner Newman on her going to the hospital, etc. Now we will welcome (with a puzzled frown) unexpectedly, "Condolences to Ecanor". Oh, well. That flowers were also sorry. . . . Mr. Thompson met last Tuesday to get the school surveyor signatures. All but eight forms were represented. And we welcome to the Collegiate staff Evelyn Allison, who is covering the girls' sports.

Mr. Hall is also out of having a dull time. Consider: in two months he has had to: Lead the assembly, Rinso Revue, C.C.A. Rem and the Christmas exams and Commencement, and then Christmas holidays. Of course he have a few classes, as well. You can have a dull, time, Mr. Hall—no fear. . . . We noticed in recent weeks several ex-students home on leave in uniform wandering around the school having a farewell chat. We can call to mind Bonnie Gerow, Ron (Bat) Warren, Gerald (Senator) Rose, Lorne Gordon Spafford. The tide grows greater, day by day.

The Red army maintained the initiative in the drive started on November 19 from the Stalingrad and south of Stalingrad, the military communique declared, and it was apparent the Germans were counter-attacking in force on the Stalingrad front in an effort to prevent full entrapment of the 22nd German army in the area of Stalingrad, estimated at 200,000.

Fighting Face Slackens

Estimates of Axis casualties in dead and captured through last night totalled 4,000, the Soviet high command said, however, indicated that the volume and pace of the fighting had slackened and the soviet information bureau, for the first time in five days, did not issue a special report on the Volga-Don offensive.

The German radio reported heavy Russian attacks still going on in the north-western sector between Moscow and Leningrad. The latest communique, however, did not mention this area.

Six hundred Germans were listed as killed in a successful Soviet advance in one sector of the Stalingrad area. . . . A large counter-attack was reported routed, 17 tanks destroyed and several hundred prisoners taken in another area.

Heavy fighting apparently prevailed in the Don River bend some 50 miles west of Moscow, where the Russians said they were holding the German resistance and build up a bridgehead for a new drive on communications between the Stalingrad attackers and possible escape to the west.

French Scuttle Fleet at Toulon

The scuttling of the French Mediterranean fleet at the great naval base of Toulon on Friday will rank as one of the major events of the war and one of the great naval events of history. It follows hard upon Hitler's betrayal and treachery as he violated for the second time his pledges to unoccupied France. He invaded Vichy France two weeks ago, contrary to the pledge made at the time of the collapse of France in June 1940 and then promised not to molest Toulon or the French fleet there. He trusted Hitler a change and under this he has committed his latest aggression. He warned that "I have given orders that all naval and army units of the French forces shall be immediately demobilized."

On Friday the Germans swarmed into Toulon.

The Frenchmen were expecting this treachery of Hitler and were ready. They set about scuttling the magnificent fleet of warships. They fought off the Germans who swarmed into the harbor, trying to board the warships and kill those who had them. The destruction of the French fleet was under way. First the Strasbourg blew up, then ship after ship exploded until the magnificent navy was a smoking inferno of destruction. The harbor was filled with the ruins of warships. Sailors went down with their ships. All the captains stayed on the bridge of their vessels and went down, many of them losing their lives. Practically all of the vessels were destroyed.

The French navy had defied the treacherous enemy. It was their opportunity to deal a mighty blow at Hitler.

It is unfortunate that this magnificent fleet could not have been saved for the Allied Nations but what has taken place is the next best thing these heroic sailors could do—they could make sure it would never be used to fight along with the Hun against France's interest.

Proud of their great navy, the French would not suffer it to fall into the hands of the enemy who had overthrown France. They have wrought a deed which has done honor to the name of France. It has added fresh lustre to what he has sought from the start — to use French ships to help crush freedom of every nation in the world including France. They have shown the heart of France is with the democracies.

A Vichy broadcast tells of French prisoners taken at Toulon. They "maintained a calm and dignified front while their captors stood over them with fixed bayonets." These Frenchmen had shown their disdain and hatred of the Hun. They had a right to be "proud and dignified."

Shop Early

This year, if at any time, it will be unwise to put off the important business of making purchases of what is necessary for the coming festive season for the way of gifts and whatever else will be needed. Owing to the exigencies of war there are somewhat smaller stocks to draw upon and it will therefore require probably more deliberation in selecting just what is wanted. It is then too obvious for words that there will naturally be some clerks less experienced than others who will not be able to carry out their duties with the same speed as long-experienced hands.

The manufacturing and retail trade has done well in providing articles for the season but everyone knows there are certain restrictions today through the need of metals and other material for the all-important task of winning the war.

Today it is easier to make a satisfactory purchase in far less time than when last-minute crowds throng the shops.

Everyone who buys early is showing consideration for the sales staffs and the merchants and acting wisely.

The days ahead will pass quickly for there are only 22 business days and unless shoppers are careful they will realize soon that time has almost gone and they will still find themselves among the worried people making late purchases.

The just, though they hate evil, yet give men a patient hearing; hoping that they will show proofs that they are not evil.—Sir Philip Sidney.

"CROAKED THE EAGLE, 'NEVERMORE'"

(After Edgar Allan Poe)

While the bombers, southward flocking,
Set Italian cities wrecking;
Suddenly there came a knocking at
Il Duce's office door.
He with fiery decision opened to admit a vision,
An expected apparition who had often called before—
Destiny at hand once more.

Into that apartment regal slunk instead a Roman eagle,
Moping, mouthless and bedraggled and extremely sick and sore,
With its plumage torn and tattered, beak and talons badly battered
And morale completely shattered, flapped and flopped upon the floor—
Only that and nothing more.

"Answer" cried the Fascist showman,
"emblem of the conquering Roman
Fowl of fate, and bird of omen, winging from the Libyan shore!
"When shall my Imperial legions drive
the Allies from those regions,
"When shall I through Alexandria lead
the Axis desert Korps?"
Croaked the eagle "Nevermore."

"When will rebel Abyssinians yield up their usurped dominions?
"When will Suez and Tunisia fall as spoils of glorious war?"
"When will Africa be rendered secure to Islam's ordained defender?
"When shall I sweep Mare Nostrum, undisputed conqueror
Croaked the eagle "Nevermore."

"When with Fascist ceremonial entering
Rome in triumph as Hannibal
"Shall I reign from captive Hellas to the fortified Cote d'Or?
"When shall my resolve tenacious lead to conquests more spacious?
"When, shall I Rome's worldwide empire of antiquity restore?"
Croaked the eagle "Definitely, positively, unequivocally, categorically, irrevocably, upwardly, irrevocably and finally—Nevermore!"
—Sagittarus.

A TRIBUTE TO THE NAVY LEAGUE

"But for the work of the Navy League the Merchant Seaman's lot since the war began would indeed have been a very sorry one, for the Navy League has done a great deal officially to ameliorate it. The merchant seamen hostels and clubs, the provision of recreation facilities, of duffle bags, of comfortable accommodation for the survivors of torpedoed ships, and of other services, cannot be too highly praised, and it gives The Montreal Star very much pleasure to pay this tribute to the hard work and unselfish devotion which officials and staff of the Navy League of Canada have brought to bear in these services,—hard work and devotion which have been accentuated through the fact that the War Budget Committee at Ottawa, which handles the budget submitted by the Navy League for its service to Merchant Seamen, could not see its way last year to grant more than fourteen per cent, of the League's estimated budget of $1,8800,000.

"The Navy League depends under ordinary circumstances on private contribution to carry on its work, and its financial resources have accordingly been subjected to an almost unbearable strain . . . The limits of the Navy League's activities on behalf of Merchant Seamen are controlled only by the willingness of the public at large to pay their tribute to the numerous voluntary organizations who are sharing in the work.'

"The League is faced with undertakings of considerable magnitude in the immediate future. These include new officers' clubs at Saint John, N.B., and Halifax; new seamen's clubs at Pictou, N.S., and Shelbourne, N.S., and at Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., and developments at Deep Brook, N.S., in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway establishment devoted to recreation for sailors on leave.

"These undertakings will involve very heavy expenditure, and the Navy League will look to the public, and rightly so, to increase substantially their support of its work. Without the League we should have had a situation develop which no honest Canadian could have regarded with anything but shame. The League has set the public an inspiring example, and we commend it to their increasingly hearty and practical support."

WAR AIMS

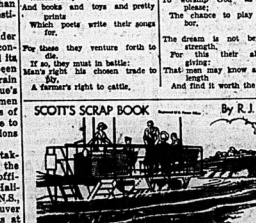
'Tis these they fight for: Glass and Chints,
Which every woman longs for;
And books and toys and pretty prints
Which poets write their songs for.



'Tis these they venture forth to die.
If so, they must in battle;
Man's right his chosen trade to ply,
A farmer's right to cattle.

They do not promise more than these:
The chance to live in peace to labor;
To worship God as we may please;
The chance to play the neighbor.

The dream is not beyond their strength,
For this their all they're giving;
That men may know a full life's length
And find it worth the living.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Weekly War Commentary

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's great counter-offensive in Russia is a masterpiece of timing as well as of concealed intentions. If its initial impetus continues (as it probably will) it will lead to the greatest disaster the Germans have yet experienced.

It seems probable that British and American reinforcements have been sufficiently strong to enable Russia to believe weapons have been forged capable of penetrating the armoured systems on which the Germans have placed their confidence.

Looking back, it is more than ever clear how immensely important was the successful defence of Stalingrad. If the Germans had been able to push eastward through the Volga River cutting the railways leading from Central Russia southwards and prolonging the defensive flank of their great southern salient drive, isolating the Caucasus Valley and Caucasia, would have been completed. Without Stalingrad, Marshal Timoshenko's relief armies could never have been assembled in their present position.

The probable course of action of the German force, now in such a dangerous predicament, is the subject of many discussions. It may be argued that it might still retreat before the Russian counter-attack despite the fact that both railways forming its line of communication have been cut. No doubt the mobile element of the army might get away but it would involve the same manner that Marshal Erwin Rommel withdrew his forces from El Alamein. The retreat, however, would be costly in equipment material and probably much of the less mobile personnel.

Under conditions at this season would militate against mechanized movement in Russia and there would have many opportunities to exploit some fatal blunders by the enemy. I find it difficult to believe the Germans will retreat without grain. The Caucasus is their only source of supply.

It seems more probable that if they cannot recovery the use of the railways they will attempt to force a attempt to follow the Stavgys Rusa progressive and so form a defensive position dependent on supplies accumulated in forward areas, supplemented by air transport.

The battle of Egypt.

Sir Bernard Montgomery's advance in North Africa has been fully maintained and there is no sign of the resistance of Rommel's rearguard and partly by the weather which particularly affects supply services. In any case a pause after such a long and rapid advance might be expected before the formidable battle position at El Agheila is may involve stiff fighting and while burning movements. It is probable that the capture of the Middle East Air Force is taking part in the operations in Tripolitania, for the time being, may reduce air support by the Royal Army.

In Tunisia, little information about the movements of the main forces can be be given. It is obvious the time factor is of great importance in view of the arrival of strong Air Force forces. Attacks on their main airfields will not be delayed a moment longer than it takes to develop an adequate attacking force.

The time required to land and deploy a large army with its transport and reserve bases are considerable for the development of operations if delays at critical moments are to be avoided.

The Allied air arm has not yet developed its full strength. It seems certain that a great battle for air supremacy will ensue and it is a major factor in the situation.

Relative to the Solomons.

In the Far East the liquidation of the Japanese base at Buna, New Guinea, appears to be nearly accomplished, and the enemy's attempts to land reinforcements at or Guadalcanal in the Solomons has failed, having lost good many of the ships and transports.

In Guadalcanal, owing to the airfield of the Island and the defence, it certainly is considered, is considerably less probable now that the Japanese will make further attempts to land reinforcements in sufficient strength to constitute a danger. The great risks the Japanese Navy must accept while seeking to maintain communications with the Island by detachments is becoming more and more evident. The penalty for excessive boldness is going to be heavy.

Dream of Shack on Tropic Isle Comes True at Last for Soldier

East Hampton, L.I., Nov. 28.—It's a long way from the now extinct prison building at the recent Alcatraz Island, in the middle of the South Pacific. But a man's dream laughs at locks and bars.

During the reportorial dog watch on the Alcatraz beat, Lieut. Boughton, when the last visitors were strolling wearily through the exits, the prisoners were lined up for inspection against the flimsy, cardboard walls of Warden Michael Cheyo at that time. They will be at home to their friends this evening. Many friends will call to offer hearty congratulations and good wishes.

Lieut. Boughton's dream, born in the World of Tomorrow, came true Thursday for Secret service men of his received a letter signed Lieutenant Boughton, Alcatraz.

Sent from an island "Somewhere in the South Seas" where he is now stationed, the letter opened with these words:

"The first day I arrived here a couple of native boys turned up and wanted that grass shack—remember?—I started them to work immediately.

"Their names are Timothy and Moses. He added, "and they commenced with vigor to build the shack which, by the way, took the better part of days. Their enthusiasm started to wane about the fifth day. Despite the continuous bribes of cigarettes, I myself never get time to work more four hours a day."

Lieut. Boughton's letter goes on to explain how much goading the job was finally completed and he was ready to move in. Before the front door spread the shimmering Pacific.

"It's a beautiful shack," the letter explains, "and there isn't a piece of material in it that didn't come from within a radius of 300 yards of the spot.

"The shack is described as being twelve feet square and nine feet high, mostly made of bamboo, with vines and covered with plaited leaves from cocoanut trees.

"In their construction work the two natives employed a boy assistant, who gathered bark used to bind the cocoanut leaves to the framework.

The assistant, called Mongooee, because, as he explained, he was "as quick in booch", would disappear in the bush for a few moments and

Dr. Birds Fly South For Longer Day

The flight of birds toward the south, as winter approached was one of the most obvious of nature's curiosity in the ancient world, when people marvelled much less than do birds, all sorts of speculations arose as to annual disappearances. Shy, conspicuous birds like storks were not occasional visitors in Europe, and the reverence was correctly made that they were the same birds that had appeared in the countries north of the Mediterranean during the summer.

Smaller birds, however, had a way of mysteriously disappearing, and more astonishing notions arose about what became of them. Even Aristotle turned a credulous ear to the report that swallows dived to the bottom of the lakes and ponds there to winter wrapped in balls of mud. It's a safe bet that many a Greek boy came across a bird hibernating in any way. Bats do, and there are other birds that do it.

Birds are also migrating south in autumn, some human songsters with an ear for music, and with sentimental fix-ation about "when the geese honk north." Of course it's nice music, but poor ornithology. Swallows and all other sentimental migrating birds are not going home in the fall; they are leaving home to avoid the cold of the nest is. They leave home to avoid starvation. They will be coming back home in the spring to raise new families.

At least a beginning was made, about a quarter century ago, toward getting the facts about what starts birds southward. It isn't chilly weather that drives them away, begin while it is still quite warm. It turns out to be the shortening days. This was experimentally demonstrated by several, researchers who kept wild birds in cages for a few weeks, artificially controlling the length of daylight. Where it was cut down, to confine the poor birds' urterity, starting the migratory impulse, out of southward, simply by adding electric illumination to the daily period and giving them longer days, like those of spring, instead of the shortening ones of autumn.—Edwin Tenne in Science News Letter.

Many people are doubtful whether they should write that a man is "under weight" or "under weigh."

When speaking of an object in motion we correctly say that it is "under way," not "weigh." "Under weigh" in this sense has become a common but incorrect variation of the word "weigh" through confusion with the phrase "weigh anchor" which means to raise the anchor from the bottom of the sea.

The word "weigh" is to carry or lift, and the word acquired its most common meaning from the fact that when we wish to lift an object to determine how heavy it is, "weigh" it. We also speak of a ship as not daring to weigh anchor means simply to lift the ship's anchor. "Weigh" is a nautical term signifying just clear of the ground, and nothing more. Another is "weigh anchor."

Some of Warships Scuttled at Toulon

Hitler's Act At Toulon One of Panic

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

A fast-developing case of defensive jitters not far removed from panic is plaguing Hitler. That is implicit in this dubious move at Toulon either to seize the French fleet for his own use or to prevent it falling into Allied hands.

Whatever his actual motive, that desperate step and new violation of his pledged word to humiliated, collaborationist France is an open confession of weakness. It gives public confirmation to Johnny Allied sagacities that the initiation has been wrested from the foe on all fronts in a global war in a matter of weeks.

There was no immediate invasion danger at Toulon to warrant the Nazi attack. Some other reason drove Hitler to issue the order; but whether it was expectation that the fleet would slip away some nights to rejoin the Allies or fear that it would form the core of a revolt against him in France itself is debatable.

Whatever the reason for Hitler's fears a defensive psychology was its foundation. Dread of what may be impending for him in Africa and Russia today; in the West perhaps tomorrow, goaded him to the step which has by every criterion increased rather than decreased his peril.

Whether all of that French fleet now lies scuttled as Vichy reports, or only part of it as Berlin says, the effect is the same.

Certainly complete or partial destruction of the French Mediterranean Fleet alters the sea odds in that theatre at a critical moment. It must release for offensive rather than defensive uses Allied naval and air power assigned to guard it against any eventualities.

Representation of the Nazi attack at Toulon on the still-unscuttled battleship at Dakar are to be expected. That Hitler act must go far to bring French naval, land and air forces at Dakar, once loyal to the Vichy regime, actively into the battle against the Axis. Comrades of French officers and men who died or were disarmed at Toulon must seek to avenge them.

Potentially the same thing applies to Martinique or any other French colonial outpost. Petain-Laval influence over the thoughts and actions of French countrymen everywhere must be weakened by what happened at Toulon. Hitler's fiat a Nazi military overlord has been appointed for France to destroy the last nebulous wisp of French sovereignty.

The effect on the French public at home, now completely under the Nazi iron heel, is yet to be weighed. That the tide of more than passive resistance in the conqueror in Continental France will surge to new high levels can hardly be doubted.

And Hitler risked all this at Toulon not to achieve any practical loss military purpose that would restore him his lost initiative in the war, but as a panicky defence gesture.

Y.M.C.A. News Notes

R.D.

This week saw the beginning of the winter activities. On Wednesday evening November 18th at 2000 hours about one hundred fellows gathered in the recreation hall. For the opening quix of the winter season Mr. W. H. Herriman K.C., of Kingston, Ont., was present as guest speaker. Herrington is a prominent Kingston lawyer who has made a hobby of quiz programs and has been putting them on in Kingston for the second time in succession for two years. Ten prizes of fifty cigarettes each were given out to the ten scoring the highest points. A consolation prize of a chocolate cake was given as a draw prize. The prizes were presented by Jars. W. M. Keddie, wife of the Commanding Officer of the Station. Although the attendance was not as large as had been hoped, it is felt that as the men get to know about it that it will grow in popularity during the winter months.

The Bowling Club is having a very enjoyable season. Wednesday evening is reserved for 6 R.D. at the alley in Trenton. Twenty teams have been battling it out for over a month now and some nice bowling has been shown.

On Wednesday evening, November 18, the basketball team from No. 9 I.T.S. came here to defeat the home team to the tune of 36 to 36. All 6 R.D. teams are experiencing some difficulty, that of well-standing players being posted on Temporary duty which weakens the teams considerably.

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP)—(Advance)—Suggestion by Rev. W. H. Elliott, religious writer in the London Daily Sketch, that Britain join the United States each year in Thanksgiving Day observance has started speculation as to whether Canada might get back into step with the Americans.

Before the first Great War the Dominion and the United States had a joint Thanksgiving in November, But the holiday was originated to give thanks for a bumper harvest and most cropping a completed, in Canada by October. That was one reason prompting the Canadian government to advance the holiday about a month.

The change from Thursday to Monday in Canada at the same time had vigorous support from the railways since they hoped to profit even when a holiday falls at the week-end.

Proponents of the suggestion for Canada to revert to the American date contend that if Britain should institute observance of the United States holiday, State Department officials here would seriously consider the action.

One of Ottawa's infrequent visitors, here this week, was Hon. H. H. Stevens of Vancouver, former Trade and Commerce Minister in the Bennett government and later leader of the reconstruction party.

He said he is "certainly going" to the Dec. 9-11 Conservative convention in Winnipeg. There has been some talk that he'll be a possible candidate for the party leadership, but he has refused to say on that score.

But Mr. Stevens had some very definite views on what the Conservative platform should be. He once broke with the party on the grounds it was not progressive enough and now declares it's on the same track. One of his ideas is that one Conservative plank should be a floor for farm prices instead of a ceiling.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King exercises more power than any one man in Canada but it's virtually impossible for him to get away from it day, away from entanglements with daily routine.

No matter where he goes in Canada he can't escape the demands made upon him as Prime Minister. And he can't go to the United States because the foreign exchange Board doesn't permit the use of exchange for pleasure travel abroad.

His only holiday for more than a year now the-man-a few hours now and then at his country estate in Gatineau Hills, twenty-five miles far from the office phone and secretarial staff.

Space is pretty tight in Ottawa these war days but executive still can move with startling suddenness. In fact, it got to be just so much for one of our colleagues.

She hustled down to what she thought was the office of Reyne Hoyt Sandon, "Consumer" to the Prices Board.

"Oh, Mrs Sanden doesn't work here any more," said a girl at the door. "She's just moved." So our reporter hushed to the new building—the merest trifle late.

Then she set out to find Mrs. Phyllis Turner, chief and fair administrator.

"Mrs. Turner doesn't work here any more," said a girl at the door. "She's just moved." So our reporter . . . and you can follow on from there.

Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, United Kingdom High Commissioner, went to Detroit the other day to make a speech and took occasion to give a pat on the back to foreign-born Americans. The speech itself, they flattered his assembly.

"Nine out of every 10 of them in Canadian factories are Scotsmen," Mr. MacDonald said. He admitted they made him "blush for shame"—that is, because he doesn't, he can't trust with his own "anaemic Oxford accent."

We're not going to stick our neck out by trying to confirm Mr. MacDonald's figures. But we contend his voice is definitely not anaemic.

That master calculator in the munitions department is here again—old tricks. Last week he told us would need a line across the Atlantic to hang out all the woollen underwear bought by the department. Now he's back with the figure one:-

"A thousand women knitting eight hours a day would require 10 years to make one hand the 2,000,000 pairs of grey woollen socks purchased by the munitions department for Canada's armed forces in the quarter ended Oct. 31."

Obvious note: French Canadian units now serving in Britain are seeing regularly now a weekly newspaper with French commentary, prepared especially by the British Ministry of Information.

Road magnates are used by certain bus companies to clear sheets of nails and metal fragments, also to pick up scrap.

Butter Shortage Likely to Continue Despite Increase in Price of Solids

State Local Creamery Proprietors

Little if any relief in the present butter shortage was seen this morning by local creamery proprietors when questioned by the Ontario Intelligencer regarding the effect which the proposed three-cent-a-pound increase in price for butter solids will have on the market at the end of the month.

The amount of butter in storage at the end of October was 21,000,000 pounds less than that at a comparable date last year, it was pointed out, and doubt was expressed that the shortage would see any appreciable relief throughout the winter months.

Even with the government bonus on butter fat amounting to six cents per pound, thus bringing cream prices to 46 and 48 cents per pound butter fat, returns to the farmer are still less than that received from the cheese factory purchased by the same concern. Some milk will be directed to creameries in the form of cream when cheese factories close but owing to the fact of better prices received from cheese, factories will remain open until the flow of milk is greatly decreased.

Demand Greater Than Supply

Butter will be gradually released from storage, but the amount permissible to establish an equitable spread over the winter months will not meet with the demands, it was claimed.

The shortage in Belleville is not as severe as in certain other localities but retailers are unanimous in claiming they are not getting from creameries sufficient butter to meet with demands.

"The situation yet has not called for the drastic actions taken in Toronto and other centres, but we are limiting our customers to one or two pounds each depending upon circumstances," stated one retailer, "definitely we are not getting the butter we require."

The chain store retailer hoped for butter to be more plentiful beginning December when the three-quarter cent increase in the price of butter fat will come into effect. He prophesized the local butter shortage would last for a little less than two months when supplies would become more scarce.

"Sad Cow" Periods

Several Belleville grocers have sold out of butter completely and lods during the past two weeks but this week have replenished their stocks. On Tuesday, however, at least one chain store grocers were completely out.

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday morning I took a walk out to the Park with Lucky Leroy Shooster, and he was telling me about the time he shot scrapple in off his shoe, and when he got home what did he find but a dime stuck to the chewing gum, and we started to walk through Paris, only it's different way from usual, and all of a sudden Leroy said, Hey, A cave, and right back I, former, I, found a cave.

Meaning a hole in the side of a hill. Just about big enough to crawl through by squeezing, and he crawled through saying, Oh boy, it's bigger when you get inside, I can stand up in here, come on in, he said.

Which I did, saying, O, it's dark in here, and he said, Sure it is, how do you expect I bet we're the first people have been in here for like for hundreds of years. I bet everything in here has been petrified by time. Hey, I tell you what, let's look for all our valuables in here, everything out of our pockets and they'll be as safe as gold, and then on our way home we'll duck in here and recue them, he said.

Which I did, and when I landed on my sitting position on account of slipping on something that wasn't petrified, being a fresh bananna skin and my losing somebody else had been in there much less than hundreds of years ago, the result being we lost our valuables in our pockets where they belonged.

Proving it's pretty hard to find out anything that nobody has found out before.

Trenton Flier With R.A.F. in Kenya, Africa, Enjoys Big Game Hunting

Alan Vandervaeter of Trenton and now with the R.A.F. in Kenya colony on east coast of Africa has written to his parents Mr. and Mrs. Albert Vandervaeter a brief report of a hunting trip he went on near his station. The letter follows:

Nakuru, Kenya, August 13th, Dear Dad and All:

This is Kenya, the land of rain, clouds and great hills. Every time we take off we are ten times as high as Mt. Pellon, and that is 6-300 feet. But I must say when the weather is fine it sure is a nice place. We are only fifty miles from the equator. It is very chilly in the evening. I have had lots of excitement since arriving here a month ago. I have been on four hunting expeditions and have to my credit two zebras, four deer, one water buck, two wild hogs and a rabbit. Not so good, but not too bad for one who has never hunted large game. We see deer from the aircraft and when we are flying and many rare birds. Next to us is a big lake and it's nearly covered with beautiful birds called flamingos. There are many varieties of animals here, Hippopotamus and rhinoceros, water buffalos and leopards, and they are only thirty miles from the spot. There are a few boys here I knew in England. So it made it easy for one to get acquainted with the rest of the people.

I will tell you of one of my hunting trips. Roger Drew, a chap I knew at R.F.P.S. in England and myself were going through some thick bush each of us with a rifle .303. It was very hot and the flies were nearly as bad as they are in Egypt. We came out in a small clearance when a great big head and mouth seemed to appear from the ground, with lots of body attached. It was a great hippopotamus. Roger and I were quite frightened. We both got our rifles ready but shaking dreadfully. But the hippo went in the opposite direction.

On our way out Roger said, "tie up my shoe, will you, my hands are unsteady."

When we returned to camp and told them of our experience, they all see deer from the aircraft, when we are flying and many rare birds. Next to us is a big lake and it's nearly covered with beautiful birds called flamingos. There are many varieties of animals here, Hippopotamus and rhinoceros, water buffalos and leopards, and Fibres of rubber are occasionally found in coal; miners call them "monkey hairs".

In the days of Queen Elizabeth, Englishmen were required by law to eat fish 55 days of the year.

WEDDINGS

'Lord Garbage'

"A Waste Prevention Officer of a Scottish Port" in the London Listener.

When I discovered that human hair was used to give strength to plaster, I went across to the port barber's shop. I asked the barber what he did with his old hair-clippings. He put them in the dustbin with the rest of his rubbish, he said. He now has a special bag, and the hair goes where it can be used, instead of going into the fire.

We also collect soot. The soot from oil-burning ships contains an important property used in the hardening of steel, so all soot from oil furnaces is put into sacks and sent away.

In peacetime I often wondered what happened to old razor blades. Perhaps you did, too. They just used to disappear, and no one ever thought any more about them. Now I give each ship a tin marked "Used Razor Blades." The tin is sealed and has a slot in the lid. When it's full, it is sent back to me, and I pass on the old blades to a place where a use is found for them.

Collecting salvage at a naval port has some special problems of its own. Each ship is an independent unit producing small quantities of pig food, bones, scrap metal, paper and so on. If they have a barber on board they even produce their own small quantity of human hair.

This means that instead of having to collect from one or two central places, I have to get my salvage from a large number of small concerns. I'm a sort of wholesale merchant in reverse. We collect enough pig food to keep about 800 pigs going all the year round. Keeping accounts is complicated, because some of the money goes to the Navy, some to the Port Fund and some back to the ships themselves. Money from the sale of anything that was originally naval property, like old rope, steel wire and scrap metal, goes back to the Treasury. Money from worn-out woollens, and clothes which belonged to the men, goes back to the individual ship. There are some cases where it isn't possible to make an exact allocation, and that money goes to the common fund for providing sports gear or to the canteen fund.

Salvage is hardly exciting for the men who go to sea, and when they've a spell in harbor no one wants to bother them with questions about what they do with their old tooth paste tubes and worn-out rubber shoes. So I try to make the collection of salvage as interesting as possible. My proper title is Command Waste Prevention Officer. That's a bit of a mouthful, so in most ships I'm simply "Lord Garbage."

"Well, I don't mind. They remember that name better, and it helps to make saving fun instead of a burden. My job is to visit ships and make sure they are keeping and passing on to me every single thing that can be used again. It takes a good deal of tact to get the best out of them, so I claim I am one of the few people who call themselves a diplomat as well as a dustman.

BOYD—McKEOWN

A pretty Autumn wedding was solemnized at Railton, on Monday, November 16, when Rev. Father Farrell united in marriage, Mary Bernice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McKeown, Railton, and Lorne Arthur Boyd, son of John Boyd and the late Mrs. Boyd, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was becomingly attired in a street length dress of navy blue velvet with matching accessories and a corsage of bronze and yellow baby 'mums. Miss Margaret Giffin of Belleville, was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of Queen's blue crepe with matching blue accessories and a corsage of 'mums. Mr. Gerald McKeown, brother of the bride, was best man. The wedding music was played by Miss Mary Neville, cousin of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for the immediate families and relatives. The guests were received by the bride's mother, Mrs. McKeown, who wore a gown of back silk crepe with bead trimming and a corsage of roses.

Later the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for Ottawa and points east. The bride traveled in a brown wool crepe dress and a camel hair coat with wolf collar. Upon their return they will reside in Cobourg, where the groom is an employee of the C.N.R. Prior to their marriage several showers were held in their honor and they received a number of beautiful gifts.

Middle-Ear Infections Cleared up by X-Ray

An infected ear may turn out to be a serious condition and should not be neglected. Under certain conditions, the infection can spread to the brain or to the sinuses.

Drs. Leon L. Titche and William E. Lawson, of Monroe, Louisiana, have employed the X-ray in the treatment of infections of the middle ear, known as otitis media. There are various types of otitis media. In some instances there is a great deal of discharge from the ear. This is known as acute purulent otitis media. In some cases the discharge may become chronic. This is known as chronic running ear.

These ear infections are treated in various ways. In the acute cases sometimes the sulfonamide drugs are used. If the ear drum becomes red and bulges it may be necessary for the physician to cut it to allow the infected material in the middle ear to drain out. In the acute middle ear infections there are pain and fever.

A number of patients have been treated with the X-ray by Drs. Titche and Lawson. Altogether they have treated more than 100 patients in this way. They have noted that in the case of acute otitis media the patients respond quickly to the treatment; there are no complications and no bad effects on the ear. As a rule within about three days the ear drum appeared normal. In the acute discharging ear the discharge cleared up in an average of about nine days, following the X-ray treatment; in the chronic cases all of the discharge had stopped in a period of about two weeks. In all instances it appeared that the duration of the disease was considerably shortened by the X-ray treatment.

Chronic-discharging ear is a difficult condition to clear up in most instances but it would appear that with the X-ray speedy recovery takes place. Of course, the X-ray should be used only by one who is experienced with it so that the proper dose may be employed. If insufficient X-ray is used good results cannot be expected, and of course there are dangers of overdoses.

It is not likely that X-ray will be needed for the treatment of all cases of acute middle-ear infection. In many instances the condition may clear up even without cutting the ear drum. However, the physician will decide just when X-ray is required and it will be found of great value in many cases.

Another Report on Electro-Shock Treatment For Mental Ailments

It is known that under routine treatment in mental hospitals about six of every ten patients who enter are able to return to home or business. It is because this routine or regular hospital treatment is so successful that many families hesitate to have their loved ones undergo the shock treatment by insulin or metrazol, they keep hoping that a cure may be affected without shock treatment.

It is however, mostly in cases that are not improving under the regular treatment that the shock method is used, and also to shorten the stay in hospital of certain cases.

Why do patients and families object to the shock treatment? While most patients come through the shock treatment without accident, there are others where the violence of the convulsions caused by insulin or metrazol produces injuries such as a dislocation of a joint or a broken bone. Naturally neither patient nor family like the idea of undergoing more of these treatments.

I have spoken before of the use of electricity to produce shock in mental patients. As this method does not cause such severe convulsions and is not feared by patient or family, it is being tried out in various institutions.

To prevent damage to muscles and bones by electric shock, Dr. Prior Shelton, Kansas City, Mo., in the Journal of the Missouri Medical Association suggests the use of the drug curare before the treatment is given. Dr. Shelton reports 456 electric shock treatments given in 67 patients with satisfactory results. These 67 patients were first put under the influence of curare.

The three advantages of this method over shock by insulin or metrazol are (a) it does not require injection into the veins, which is dreaded by some patients, (b) the convulsion by electricity is less severe than that resulting from metrazol, (c) although some fractures and dislocations have resulted from electro-shock treatments, the percentage of cases is much lower than when metrazol is used. The use of curare before the shock treatment is given not only to reduce the percentage of accidents but to make use of restraints and mouth gags unnecessary.

HERE'S HOW P.O. BEURLING, BRILLIANT FIGHTING PILOT, SPENDS HIS LEAVE

Ways To Cultivate Charm

Delores Del Rio has both charm and beauty.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Predominating virtues and predominating faults classify girls — and women, too. The woman of charm keeps a notebook in her mind. She observes qualities in others that do not make for popularity and these she fights off, won't give in to. When someone bores her with a long tiresome yarn about nothing, she says to herself "I must be brief. What I have to offer must be interesting to the other fellow."

Remember Names

She makes it a practice to remember names and faces. She is kind to her next door neighbour, the cook and the cat. No high-hatting for her; it is stupid and silly. She has pleasing dignity, but is never cold or aloof. She has self-respect splenty, which means that she never forgets her manners. If she has an impulse to say something catty, she counts 10 and doesn't. She keeps herself in hand, trains her emotions.

Cultivate Charm

Cultivate charming personality and friends and acquaintances will consider you lovely to the eye, because charm acts that way. Our loved ones are beautiful in our estimation. Physical perfections are glorious attributes, we all long for them, strive to get them. But sweetness of character is richer beauty wealth, and time can't do a thing to spoil it.

Charm includes an aliveness, tolerance for the weaknesses of our fellow creatures, a power of understanding and an inclination to overlook and forgive.

Women as Cooks Wield War Weapon, Can Strengthen Home Defence Line

Canadian women are being given added responsibility this winter. A nation-wide nutrition campaign is being launched in January which depends for its success on the co-operation of every housewife.

Because food is a valuable weapon of war, women whose main job is the preparation of three meals a day, are an important link in Canada's war machine, Ottawa health officials point out.

"Eating the right foods is one of the most important ways of attaining good health and good health will improve the efficiency of Canada's war workers. More important still it will safeguard the health of children and of future generations" says L. B. Pett, Ph.D., M.D., who as director of Nutrition Services, Department of Pensions and National Health is giving direction to the campaign.

"Faced with the likelihood of supply shortages and consequent changes in the nation's eating habits, it is particularly important that Canadians become familiar with food values and learn how to get the most nourishment out of foods they buy", says Dr. Pett.

Last year successful classes in nutrition were held in many Canadian cities. This year hundreds more are being planned in communities all across Canada. Nutrition leaders can give advice concerning food value and the value of substitute foods. They can advise how best to prepare and cook it, but it is up to the housewives to put this advice into practice, the authorities point out. "This year make every kitchen work for victory".

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Though in Army, Include Son's Name on Christmas Cards.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are three in our family and we have always had our three names on our Christmas cards we send to family friends. But this year my son is in the Army, and I have been told by several people that this year, since he is not at home, his name should be omitted on the cards.

Will you please tell me if this is right? My son will, as in other years, send his own cards to his own friends, but I very much want to abide by our old custom, more from sentiment, than as a matter of correctness. I would so much appreciate your advice about this.

— M. S.

My advice, most enthusiastically, is for you to continue to use your son's name on the Christmas cards you send to family friends. This is a beautiful tradition that should be honored this year especially. And this year you will have high and special pride in including your son's name with yours, and of course your son will want to have you send his greetings with yours to the friends of your family.

And if your cards are on the informal type, as I imagine they are since you are sending them to close family friends, they will give you a fine opportunity to write a friendly note on them telling your friends where your son is stationed and other news they will be longing to hear, news of his welfare and well-being, of his particular branch of the service, and so forth. All our hearts are closely knit together these days, and especially at Christmas-time, in our eagerness to hear the latest news about our friends' sons who are in the service. Including your son's name on your cards and writing news of him to your friends will be a blessed Christmas greeting to them, from you and from your son.

Answering an R.S.V.P.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My husband and I have received a wedding invitation, both for the church and the reception. There is an "R.S.V.P." on the reception card. How should we answer this?

2. Do we take our invitations with us?

— C. L.

1. The formal invitation to the church does not require a reply. But, as you are requested to do, you reply to the reception invitation. Write your name on the first page of the double-sheeted letter-paper, and write in the centre of the page, spacing your words like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clark's kind invitation for
Tuesday, the first of December.

2. It is not necessary for you to take your invitation with you. If, however, there is a "Church Admission" card, you do take this with you.

Courtesy Tip

This Canadian hero, with 29 enemy planes to his credit, was not always the dashing, helmeted airman, but even at 18 months (left) he wanted to get off the ground for a 1st ascent. At 14 (right) he was "in there punching" as now.

CORNWALL TEAM AWARDED GAME AFTER DISPUTE

Referees Dress and Leave Rink After Ordering Teams to Play

GOALIE INJURED

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP)—Cornwall Army Commandos defeated Quebec Senior Hockey League game with Montreal Army Combines here following a dispute in which both teams left the ice.

The dispute started when referee Jean Ragan of Montreal, who formerly was a referee in the American Hockey League.

Ragan had been given a penalty for charging, and Referee Wemmegy boosted it up to a match misconduct when Ragan kept right on going toward the referee, shaking his fist.

Lieut. Albert Lewis of Montreal, who drew a penalty for slashing just before Ragan was ejected, drew a misconduct for his part in the fireworks.

Cornwall was leading 2-0 at the time, near the end of the first period, but previously had been held up for 30 minutes because of an injury to goalie Leaky Bostos of Montreal. Referee Demmeny said he had given the Montreal team one minute in which to resume play, after the argument had been going on for some time, and that Marty Barry, coach of Montreal, had said "all right, go ahead and forfeit the game."

Referees Leave Ice

Both referees then left the ice, dressed and left the rink. The crowd lingered, not knowing entirely just what it was all about.

Lee Cook, coach of Cornwall, later turned down a proposal to have a referee from their club be pressed, game so that it could be completed, on the grounds that such a move would "be ignoring the authority of the referees appointed by the league."

The attempt to resume the game was then effected, officials had spoken to President George Slater in Montreal by telephone. Slater refused to make a decision pending receipt of the report of the referees, but suggested that they might get together and finish the game.

Cook turned down the suggestion, ordered his players to change into street clothes, and said:

"If the President of the league cannot render decision in this case and evidently refuses to back up the actions of the referees appointed by him, I am not going to be a party to any further play."

OTTAWA COACH PREDICTS TEAM WILL WIN GAME

Dave Sprague Says Starting Team "Will be Better Than Hurricanes

RESERVES WEAK

By ALAN MARWEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP). — Dave Sprague never lacked courage in his eleven seasons of bigtime football and he has that quality in plenty today.

The 31-year-old coach, who came out of Smith's, N.Y., Academy to coach of Canada's all-time football greats with Hamilton Tigers and Ottawa Rough Riders assuredly predicts his Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers will defeat Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes today in the first meeting between service elevens in the Dominion Canada final.

"Had you just twelve men, that's all" said Sprague in discussing the team FO. Dew Haynes has reached to nine victories in eleven starts this season. "Man for man, our starting twelve will match any team," he said, and maybe shade them a bit. We're ready to go for sixty minutes, six weeks or six months."

Hurricanes probably have a slight edge in reserve strength, he conceded, but Uplands have got the goods and may not need any more".

Players Reserved

Uplands reached the eastern final by defeating Royal Air Force in the City League final last Saturday and while the three-team league may have affected the competition than Hurricanes faced in the air-team Ontario Rugby Football Union, the team is at full strength. Sgt. Buddy Taylor and Flying Officer Simms of Brockville, Ont., have recovered from injuries, which kept them out of the game on the sidelines today.

The main menace for Uplands will be Sgt. Vince Dittburner, triple-threat halfback who is rated as one of the greatest players in the game. He is assured plenty of support from FO. Bobby Gaudaur, Hamilton Wildcat last year with Hayman's Toronto Argonauts; FO. Doug Kiman of Queen University at Kingston, Ont. and FO. George Sprague, brother of the coach-dropped from the Ottawa Rider lineup in mid-season last year to enlist in the R.C.A.F. Sprague still did not mix. FO. Bob Penland, formerly with Calgary Bronco Intermediates, Sgt. Bill Stukus, Flt.-Lt. Eddie Thompson, AC2 Jack Parry, Cpl. Jack Kilek and Leading AC2 Cpl. Jack Kilek and Leading AC2 Dave Rankin are dynamite is likely to explode in any direction.

Hurricanes will be without A.C.3 Cecil Foderingham, who suffered a head injury in practice last Tuesday and WO. Mike Csarko, hot for the season when he was injured in the game against Rinthster-Waterloo Panthers last Saturday.

Varsity Stadium is expected to be jammed to its 18,000 capacity as the Hurricanes battle to keep alive Canada's third wartime Grey Cup final against Uplands R.C.A.F. Ottawa Rough Riders here Dec. 5. Winnipeg qualified as western representatives by defeating Regina Navy 3 to 2.

'Tilly' Donihee Named Coach Of Belleville Seniors

Coach Donihee

Native of Cornwall

Tilden "Tilly" Donihee, Cornwall's gift to Belleville hockey circles for the past three years, was today appointed coach of the Belleville Intermediate seniors. A capable and shifty centre-ice player in his days with the Cornwall Colts, Donihee possesses plenty of hockey knowledge and is a keen student of Canada's winter pastime. A canny playmaker in his playing days Donihee handles players what's termed a "team player," an attribute that should materially assist him in his new duties.

Born in Cornwall on Oct. 23rd, 1917, Donihee attended school in the "Factory Town" and upon graduating to the Collegiate finished his matriculation before attending Loyola University and later Technical school in Montreal. Upon returning to Cornwall Tilly started playing for the Cornwall "Holy Name" hockey club, Eastern Ontario Intermediate champion in 1938. His advancement in the game from that point was rapid and he played centre ice with the famed Cornwall "Flier", Allan Cup finalists in 1938, Coach Emil Boucher. Aside from hockey, his first sport love, Tilly excelled in the cinder-path average run as a tennis player and also played soft-ball for the Cornwall C. I. this season. A likeable lad with a winning smile, Donihee should make an apt coaching hockey as he proved as a player. He is expected to take charge of the team tomorrow night and the best of luck to his many friends in Belleville in his efforts of coaching.

TRAILING TEAMS HAVE CHANCE TO ADVANCE

Hawks and Red Wings Play Once Others Appear Twice

LEAFS PLAY RANGERS

(By The Canadian Press)

This week-end in the National Hockey League the four trailing teams have a golden opportunity to narrow their positions in the standing. The circuit-leading Detroit Red Wings and second-place Chicago Black Hawks appear but once while the other outfits are scheduled for two games apiece.

At Toronto tonight, the Leafs, in third place, play host to New York Rangers, now in the League cellar. At Montreal the fifth-place Canadiens meet Boston Bruins who hold down fourth position in the standings.

The Bruins were taken, 3-3, by the Canadiens the last time they met, in the season's opening game of the present season. But of late some redfaces raise Bruins as the banner team in the N.H.L. The record credits the Bruins with four wins and one tie in their last five games, along with the notation of a one-sided 9-2 romp in the last four starts.

Canadiens entered the season at a league-leading clip but lately have been elbowed aside in the standing by the others. They've lost three games five points separate Detroit, at the top of the heap, and Rangers, at the bottom. The week-end should see a substantial change in the standing.

The Monday game will resemble a "Tronto Old Boys' Night. No fewer than seven of the players are ex-Leafs. They are Lorne Carr, Sands and Gordon Drillon of the Canadiens and Art Jones, Bobby Jackson, Murph Chamberlain, Buss Cowley and Cy Denneny of the Bruins.

Sunday night will see Canadiens at Detroit, Boston at Rangers and Toronto at Chicago.

Canada's Athletes at War

Blanchard and Raynor were a popular fighting team down Cornwall way and now they hold both posts at physical training instructors in the Air Force.

Robert Louis Stephenson, 20, a former Toronto boy with the Winnipeg Falcons Junior team two years ago, and Morris Sims, 19, prominent Winnipeg Y.M.C.A. athlete have both enlisted in the Air Force for all-air duties.

COACH WARWICK CHANGES STORY

Believes Western Team Will Give Eastern Winners Real Tussle

Winnipeg, Nov. 27 (CP)—Bert Warwick, assistant coach of the Winnipeg R.C.A.F.-Bombers, Western Football Conference titlists, stated his story, and he thinks, for a good reason.

A month ago on a visit to Toronto he was quoted as saying Lew Hayman's Hurricanes could trim any of the three senior Winnipeg teams.

But since head coach Reg Threlfall selected his all-star aggregation from the league to represent the west, Warwick admits he has good reason to change his story.

"If the Winnipeg contingent of the Hurricanes in the National final December 5, he now believes, "they could win by a comfortable margin." The score would be favored over Uplands R.C.A.F. of Ottawa in the final today.

Warwick says the R.C.A.F.-Bombers, regulated to be most deceptive and versatile team in the Western Football Conference, will give the Hurricanes a real battle. The game will be played at Toronto.

He says R.C.A.F.-Bombers this year have acquired the confidence to gain deception, a style of play unfamiliar to the strictly power teams of other years.

Drouin Not Allowed To Play One Game

Montreal, Nov. 28 (CP)—The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, at a special meeting last night, declared that a non-operating suspension against Polly Drouin of Ottawa Commandos should not be lifted and that Drouin will not be allowed to play in tomorrow night's game against Montreal Royals.

Drouin was in line for the signing of a contract with Montreal but he received last Sunday.

At the meeting Dutch Gallatly, manager of Commandos was present when a letter from Drouin was read, asking that the suspension be lifted. The board decided that such a step could not be taken.

In his letter Drouin stated that three of his players had been posted for overseas service and three others were on the injured list.

The Q.A.H.A. ratified the transfer of Doug Calhoun, last season with Shawinigan Falls in the Montreal and District senior B loop, to the Ontario Hockey Association.

Norman MacKay, member of the Q.A.H.A. executive, left Montreal with a travelling set from the branch, and an engraved ring from the Montreal Canadiens, of which he is formerly secretary. He is joining the R.C.A.F.

Defeat Cataracts 4-1 in Good Contest at Niagara Falls

SAINTS WIN

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Majors outstripped Niagara Falls Cataracts to take sole possession of second place in the Ontario Peninsula group of the Senior "A" Ontario Hockey Association last night by downing the Cataracts 4-1 in a game at Niagara Falls. Majors now have 8 points to 7 for Falls. But it is so often dismissed with a mark of scarcely overrated as a national game. New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Even though the armed forces seem intent on taking all the colleges to an even greater extent than they already have—and with all we hope, there must be something cooking along that line—it doesn't necessarily mean the end of football for the duration.

Talking Turkey

Those Canadian Turkey Bowl football classic" wasn't played in New Orleans Thursday and an explanation has just arrived in a letter from copywriter Allen Le Roche and Charley Class (otherwise known as the "Irish Channel Athletic Association"). . . . Writing from a troop train somewhere in the United States, Le Roche and Class explain that 41 of the 50 players who took part in the game are now in the armed services and the promoters, who had hoped to draw a crowd of 60,000 for this year's contest, only say: "We are glad to be on our way to the front and to the Beaches, Berlin and better Turkey Bowl games in the future." . . . We wonder if the other Bowl can come up with a record like that!

Confusion

After taking a softball practice game with a bunch of Americans in Hyde Park, Alan Tompkins of London Sunday Dispatch wrote: "Cricket sometimes provided a type of confusion that drives and dazes for people of unlimited leisure. But it is so often dismissed with a mark of scarcely overrated as a national game. This third-rate pastime, with artificial excitement, or as a means of giving hard, fast exercise for a lot of people."

Pony Loop Adopts Waiting Policy

Batavia, N.Y.—Officials of the Pony League have adopted a "sit tight" attitude regarding forward by the 1943 season. Only routine business was discussed. Directors met in Buffalo with President Robert C. Stedler.

At the moment, there is every reason to believe the Pony will continue operations for the eighth season, Frazy Stadler points to the average attendance of over 30,000 at the 16 league cities this year wartime, Jamestown drew over 130,000 fans during the regular season as indication they could continue in operation during the schedule to establish an attendance mark.

As for other clubs, the officials are proceeding on the theory that the league will continue. Only exception is Hanford . . . has an off-season position with the New York State Defense Authority and is operating out of the Buffalo office. City Judge Philip J. Weis, president of the club, has indicated a slowing down of activity for the duration at least February 1, when a clearer picture of the future is seen.

Baseball notables turned out for the annual Sports Night sponsored by the Batavia Junior Chamber of Commerce. Weis, Weis was chairman of the event.

The men in uniform now eat from silver spoons. To conserve stainless steel for war materials, knives and forks used by the armed forces are silver plated on a special steel base.

by K.J.C.

DOLPH CAMILLI, OF THE Dodgers, probably means what he says in announcing his retirement from baseball. If he isn't able to find a place in the game in California, closer to his home, believed Stanley Frank of the New York Post.

"A ball player's announcement of retirement when he still represents a substantial piece of money is himself usually merits no more credence than one of Joe Cronkhite's bedtime horror stories," points out Frank, "but this time it may be different. It may be Dolph Camilli will have to go out and get a new boy for first base.

"Camilli is quoted in California saying he will quit baseball entirely, if the Dodgers do not release or sell him to a team in the Pacific Coast League. The Brooklyn captain and powerhouse went on to say that salary Branch Rickey pays him (probably $20,000 on the nose) is not sufficient compensation for the long grind from April to his family and ranch during the baseball season. The irresistible temptation it is sons cynically and wink knowingly. It looks like a transparent, traditional variation of the old gag-old ball players usually pull this time of the year. It has all the earmarks of a threat to force the opening of contract negotiations, a piece of business as devious as international diplomacy.

"There are people in the world — even ball players who have the desire to make a million dollars and Camilli apparently is one of them. It takes a lot of soul-searching conversation I had with Camilli. He spoke with the proudest pride of his kids and after the fashion of a man thinking aloud, he said how much he hated leaving the wife and kids behind every year and how unsatisfactory it was letting hired help run the ranch while he was away.

"No, I don't believe Camilli was making an idle threat about quitting. I believe he is dogging it in honest, definite statement of fact and I hope he'll be happy out there in the hills above San Francisco watching his kids and his cattle as saying he will quit baseball engrow fat. He was a good ball player and a good guy. That's determined. Especially in Brooklyn."

WITHOUT FANFARE SKIPPER Ken Sexton had the maidens of the Bellance hockey squad together recently and named Tilly Dunbar captain of the coming season. The amiable "Tilly" sustained a shoulder injury when playing the game last season and at 29 years of age gave out with his cran song upon being named intro and here and now should prove a capable director of play for the bunch. It given a free hand. Dunlop called up the 5s lanes the hard way, pushing pronunciation in his own home town of Cornwall with the "Factory Town" moniker. Allan Cup finalist in 1936. He overcome the adage of—"a prophet is never without honor, except in his own country", to become a playmaker deluxe and now that he has advanced to the directing position, his associates have a man who has proven over the years he was a "team player". A play-maker in his own right, Dunlop needs only the co-operation of all concerned to assure Belleville of good hockey in the coming campaign. There will be at least two new faces in the ranks when the Bellance brew when the season opens and Manager Sexton is angling for a couple of more tried and proven pocketers in order to give Belleville hockey fans the best of hockey as well appreciated locally.

ALTHOUGH THE BELLEVILLE No. 5 J. T. S. hoopsters are unbefazed by the early starts in the Bay of Quinte R. C. A. F. service basketball loop, FO. Burt Horton's Trenton Air Force quintette is following close on the local's heels with only one loss. Next week's Trenton at No. 5 J. T. S. game will doubtless settle the issue definitely. "THAT'S REALLY A FINE sports section the this and, remarked Toots Mondt, America's No. 1 rasslin' promoter after looking over the Ontario Weekly day night. Mondt, who held the world's heavyweight mumbo-bonding title when rasslers were rough, tough and whalebone-you, was surprised when he presented his feature attraction (The Swedish Angel) at the interval shown in wrestling locally. "The fans show here have learned how' than in much larger places. I've seen, so don't be surprised if some good grapplers are strolled your way in the future," predicted Mister Mondt.

The big wrestling power was held in Toronto Thursday night with Paul Bowser, Mr. Mondt, Jack Pfeffer, Frank Tunney and Jack Curley all sitting in, so it looks like fun for the fans and for him in the long and groan business, that continues here next Wednesday.

AT THE BELLE

Ginger Rogers, temporarily disguised as a 10-year-old for purposes of plot in "The Major and the Minor", now on the Belle Theatre screen, moves in on "Major" Milland's tepid romance with Rita Johnson. She doesn't leave the latter the shadow of a chance, however, before the final reel. The comedy features Ginger's own mother, Lela Rogers.

AT THE BELLE

"The Major and the Minor" .

Ginger Rogers is throwing that little-girl sailor hat she wears in her new film, "The Major and the Minor," right smack into the centre of the ring for another Academy Award. As the "minor" who fools "Major" Milland, the Major, into making all kinds of a fool of himself was her, Ginger is said to top any of her many marvellous performances.

The Paramount comedy, which comes today to the Belle theatre, brings the two popular stars together for the first time, and from all accounts that team work fits new heights of humor. The work of each star's comedian is well-known to picture fans; together there is no doubt of the fact that they must be terrific.

Not only is "The Major and the Minor" a first, for Ginger Rogers and Ray Milland, it is also the first directorial effort of Billy Wilder.

It was Wilder and his scripting partner, Charles Brackett, who wrote the screen play "The Major and the Minor," so it is no wonder that the film is as perfectly plotted as rumor has it to be.

The story is absolutely right for Ginger's talents. It shows her as a small-town girl disillusioned with New York. Suspecting that the big city wolves might be too much for her, her kind pal adds the exact scam it would take to get her back to her home town in Iowa. Unfortunately, however, while her back was turned, the big, bad railroad company raised the fare so Ginger finds herself with Central Station four dollars short.

Never at a loss for an idea Ginger takes her suitcase full of fur into the ladies' lounge and after a few quick, deft changes to her costume, emerges in the garb of a twelve-year-old. She manages to get a half-fare ticket, but on the train runs into difficulty convincing the conductors of her "minor" status. In trying to show she takes her refuge in what she believes to be an empty drawing room but which turns out, instead, to be occupied by the very personable Ray Milland, a Major, who because of an eye defect is relegated to teaching at a military school.

The Major is completely taken in by the "minor", swallows her enormously, tall fake hook, line and sinker and puts her up for the night in his lower berth, obligingly taking the upper.

Milland's fiancee, Rita Johnson, comes with her father, a Colonel and head of the military academy, to surprise Ray but are themselves surprised by the female in the drawing room. Rita, in a rage, rushes from the scene of the crime.

Milland, realizing he must square himself with her and her father, begs Ginger to impersonate a niece at the academy so that everyone may see that she is perfectly harmless little twelve-year-old. Ginger, her head already on the skids in the Major, consumes the masquerade for his sake.

The weekend she is forced to spend among the adolescent cadets Casanovas—Milland's embarrassing attraction—pronounce he believes to be a mere child. Ginger's encounter with, Rita's sister, Diana Lynn, a real twelve-year-old whom she doesn't fool for even a minute—are just a few of the hilarious situations which are said to abound in the picture.

Rita Johnson, Robert Benchley, Diana Lynn and Lela Rogers, Ginger's own mother, are featured in "The Major and the Minor."

The Belle Latest News Digest, "Unusual Occupations," and a novel and entertaining film in technicolor complete the program.

Continuous shows will be featured today.

AT THE McCARTHY

Abbott and Costello

Abbott and Costello, rated as Hollywood's best-liked and best-patronized comedians, are again on the run. Following an extended chase that started with "Buck Privates" and hit the laugh ceiling more recently in "Pardon My Sarong," the No. 1 clowns have a new offering called "Who Done It?" which opens here at the McCarthy Theatre.

From Universal studios, which made the comedy, comes the announcement that: "Who Done It?" bears little resemblance to the team's previous laughfilms except that the comics have been provided with funnier material than ever before.

The story, a murder-mystery, places Bud and Lou in the hazardous profession of amateur detectives; and in turn, on the wrong end of a tremendous police drag-net. Action of the plot takes place, for the most part, in a vast radio broadcasting station. Methods by which the boys escape innocent devices from their mass of troubles, are declared to provide some of the most hilarious moments ever experienced by movie audiences, "Who Done It?" is Abbott and Costello's second week at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto.

"The Moon and Sixpence"

Starring George Sanders, Herbert Marshall and Doris Dudley, the most talked-about picture ever made in Hollywood, "The Moon and Sixpence" is now closing at the McCarthy Theatre. This program also includes an excellent screen Vaudeville film, a Walt Disney, Donald Duck cartoon and a splendid travel talk—a two-hour show filled with solid enjoyment.

MURDER ON THE AVENUE

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER 24

Clever Trick

When Fleming Stone was ushered into the cell of "Abe Connors," he found only a young man, who was modestly called "a man about town" by the somewhat spindly young chap.

"Mr. Connors was Cully.

The two men were talking when Fleming Stone entered. The young chap who had brought Stone remained in the cell, which made the place a bit crowded.

Stone said, directly to the prisoner, "Mr. Wiley, I want to ask you a few questions."

"You can ask, but I don't have to answer."

The man seemed more disheartened than angry.

"But it will be to your advantage to answer. Tell me, where is your daughter?"

"How do I know? She left me years ago, I know nothing of her and I don't want to."

"Yes, you do want to very much. Where is Ben Monk?"

"You seem to know a lot! Who are you anyhow?"

"I am a detective from New York and I am trying to find your daughter for her own good and yours."

"Nothing good will ever come my way. Take yourself off, Mr. Detective."

"Why are you holding on to that pack of cards so tightly? I am not going to take them from you."

Wiley looked a little embarrassed.

"I play solitaire," he said. "It makes the time pass a bit."

"Well, Wiley, if you won't tell me where I deserve is, I must find out for myself. You know Jasper Webb is dead?"

"What's it to me?"

"It might be something to your daughter's advantage. You're not very wise to trust her to Ben Monk."

"And what business is it of yours, Mr. Snoops?"

"None, except that I might be of some assistance—"

"Why, I know your kind of assistance!"

"You've been fortunate then—"

Stone was a little surprised to see Wiley look up quickly at this.

Then Wiley, casually, "I know But he said, casually, "I know a new solitaire game. Want me to show you?"

"No, I don't, I say, Cully, I wish you'd bring me some new cards. I want two packs—alike, you know, I want to play Eight Kings and Queens.

All right, Bo—I'll bring you some. Gimme your old ones."

Cully laid out his hands for the cards Wiley was holding, but Fleming Stone neatly lifted them from Wiley's hand himself, and put them in his pocket.

"Just what I want!" he said, "I have to go to New York now, and I'll be glad of a round of solitaire to fill up the time."

"Gimme back them cards, Mr. Stone," Wiley said, who spoke, he looked terrified.

"Nonsense," Stone laughed. "I'll give you a dollar, instead. That'll buy some new cards for Wiley. Well, I must move on." He turned to the waiting guard. "Sorry you don't like me, Wiley. I could have helped you."

"Yes, you could!" Wiley sneered. "Hide the key in a worthless spot than I'm in now. Get outa here!"

Stone left the jail, bought a taxi and was soon back in Cobb's room as a hot hotel with a small table in front of him on which he was eagerly laying out the pairs of cards he had taken from Cully's soiled hand.

"It looks to be" he murmured to himself. "Wiley couldn't have laid out these cards, unless some one told him!"

Stone saw by the way Wiley had manipulated the cards that he was accustomed to sleight-of-hand. Stone could use tricks, and he was known for the famous and popular ones. One of them, a favorite, depended on the performer's knowing by rote the counter:

Eight kings threatened to save. Nine fine ladies for one sick knave.

This patter represented the sequence of cards in a trick well known to magicians, and Fleming Stone shrewdly suspected that he could solve it. It would give him important information. He readily saw that Wiley was trying to tell Cully where Beverly Wiley was, without letting the guard or Stone know.

The trick that he was assuming had been used was a simple one, but almost impossible of detection unless one knew the key.

If a message is concealed in the arrangement of the cards by Wiley, it is necessary for Cully to give Cully the key. This Stone argumed, he had done. He had memorized Eight Kings. For the complet represented the thirteen playing cards, which ran in this order: eight, K-ing, three, ten, two, seven, five, four, four, Jack, Jack.

Deftly Stone arranged the cards in that order and he saw that he placed the suits in order of their value, Cobalt another arrangement might be necessary. But no experiment.

And he was rewarded. The trick was the oldest in the game, and the principle being that if a pack of cards were arranged in a given order, known to both parties, a secret message could be given.

This was done by placing the cards in the agreed order, and then, holding the pack tightly, write the message on the side of the pack of cards, that is, on the surface made by their edges. After this the pack, thoroughly shuffled to present on its edge, a meaningless jumble of specks and lines which cannot convey a message, unless the cards are in the right order.

But since Fleming Stone knew the right order, because of the rhyme mentioning Eight Kings, he found the words he was looking for printed on the sides of the pack.

On one side he read, the name Una Deane and on the other side, a street number far uptown on the extreme West side of Manhattan. Stone's nerves tingled at this confirmation of his suspicion of the card trick.

After his first thrill of excitement, Stone called New York and told Farmer the name and address he had discovered. He advised him to go there at once, to get Una Deane and take her to Miss Malcolm's home, and that he would take care of the girl, until Stone could get back in New York and interview her himself.

He then called Peter Cobb to him. He thanked the young man for his great assistance and told him further cooperation would be accorded when the time served.

Then he took an airplane back to New York, and went first to tell Brand Herrick what had happened. This indomitable young man was taking his hard fate bravely.

Herrick was amazed by what Stone had accomplished, but was most impressed by his finding Jasper Webb's granddaughter by whatever means.

"Largely luck," Stone said. But there was a brilliant mentality at work behind it. "Are you ready to marry the lady, if we have her brought here?"

"Are citizens under arrest for murder privileged to marry if they choose? Would an orthodox minister perform the service? Would she deel marry a felon?"

"Look at it this way, Herrick," Stone said calmly. "There is a great fortune at stake. You are set to gain it. In fact I have strong hopes of proving that you are now a wealthy man all that money to slip through your fingers, to say nothing of the lady's whims!"

"But I don't know what she's like! I don't—"

"Well, don't you think she ought to have some say about it? She is more nearly related to Jason Webb than you are. Is it fair to give her no chance to inherit the money her grandfather wanted her to have?"

"It isn't. What do you advise?"

"I don't think the matter hinges on the personality of the girl. Until you have met her, you will not know whether you are willing you will marry her. If you are willing you will allow and expect her to divorce you as soon as you get to go for her. I feel sure that with the very odd circumstances of the marriage, a decree could be obtained easily."

Herrick looked at him, slowly, "that is a scrubby way to look at it, and I do want to be sensible. But—well, I had thought that romance, if it ever came to me, would be more—I don't know just what to call it, such."

"Well, but this is not romance that has come to you, it may be during the days to know you will meet it as such."

"Of course, I suppose you are right. You have done a big thing, Stone. I don't understand that. Now—yes, I will do my part. You go to New York."

"Do you remember her, Brand? Do you not her, I am told, at the McCleod party."

"Yes, Miss says that's so. I remember moving a Miss Deane, but my mental picture of her is that of a very immature little thing. But never mind all that. I begin to see it as you do, that I owe it to my uncle' granddaughter to help her obtain the Webb fortune. But her I will marry her if she wants me to. I will wait at once that I can get back to New York."

"Yes, I will leave her the greater part of the money. I reserve from that, And that I will present no obstacle to her getting a divorce from me, if she can obtain grounds. But I'm more interested in your getting out of here than I am in my marital affairs. However, I think you may fair with the legal. It may be that she will decline to marry you, in which case all will even to inherit a fortune. In that case she would rise to the occasion."

"Don't be silly! She has seen you, she knows you are presentable."

"All right, then. Present me to her as an old friend if she accepts."

Stone went directly to Miss Malcolm's house, wondering what lay ahead of him now. Surely he had never had such a wildly improbable case before.

IN MEMORIAM

SILLS — In loving memory of Elwyn Sills, who passed away Friday, 29, 1941, on his 17th birthday. EATON

For me a year of grief has passed, Since thou the Face of God didst see;
Yet in the swirl of sorrows cast
There came His comfort to me.

Now thou dost live where time is no more,
But all is blest Eternity.
O Love, we neither have forgot
The grace of life shared mutually.

Across our bourne of time and space
I greet thy spirit eternally;
Thy love and sacrifice trace
Through years of fleeting memory.

—Sadly missed by Father, Mother, Brother, Sister and Grandparents. N26

HARROW — In loving memory of my husband, Alfred H. Harrow, who passed away November 30, 1936.
We make you now, our hearts assure,
As time goes by we miss you more;
Your loving smile, your gentle face,
No one can fill your vacant place.
—Sadly missed by his Wife Ada-bie and family. N28

Nursery School Project Subject of Discussion By Univ. Women's Club

At the regular monthly meeting of the Belleville University Women's Club held at the home of Miss Grout, Victoria Avenue on Thursday evening, the program took the form of a round-table discussion of the creche or nursery schools at work.

It was pointed out by Mrs. Arthur May who was in charge that many of the world's forward movements have come out of calamities and war always promotes medical, scientific and mechanical advances. The fact that 40 per cent of the Army recruits for the armed services have been found physically unfit is causing advances in nutrition. An effort to rehabilitate them is also an advance in adult education. So may the needless wastage due nurseries further pre-school age child.

Dealing with the four to six year old group Mrs. Pringle explained how through companionship and child-size equipment a child of these age learns to co-operate and become a member of society.

For the two to four year old child to learn to accept authority without emotional upset is important, said Mrs. Bews; a fundamental lesson that many a child does not learn entered, the speaker added.

In reply to leading questions put by Miss Ruth Thompson, Miss Robbins gave much timely information as to conditions in Belleville, its necessity or reasons for mothers leaving the home to work and the set-up of Wartime Nursery Schools. Such schools are financed by the government. A community can avert fault of this service by forming a Local Committee.

There must be two trained workers and three volunteer helpers for one unit.

The school age child does not come under this service but is the responsibility of the board of Education.

At present many private arrangements are being made and no one is checking on the case of neglected children.

It was felt permanent values are to be retained from these wartime services.

As a result of the discussion the University Women's Club named a committee to contact other clubs who would co-operate to take up

COLUMN OF THREE'S

Army establishments to Military District No. 3 set aside certain days that week when heads or representatives of prominent civilian organizations were invited to visit the camps and see for themselves the ways in which wastage is avoided and to see also the methods employed to conserve all sorts of scrap that can be converted into war materials.

There was a purpose for these visits.

These are days of rigid self-denial, days when we must do without many of the normal peacetime things. We are being heavily taxed, we are forced to reduce our consumption of tea and coffee, women's styles have been "frozen," sugar and now fires are more precious than gold. It's a long list of things "haven't" and "must not." With all these restrictions, all these demands are voluntarily retrenchments, there can be no tolerance of waste of any kind.

Army is Big Business

The Army of Canada business, is getting bigger every day. Its expansion from the small peacetime Army is big business because the citizens of this country have helped to make it so. It has been the self-denials of men in offices, in factories, on the farms, and of women in homes that have made it possible. The Army has had to be the best equipped, the best fed in the world. It is the best clad in the world. The Army is big business and the public of Canada are its shareholders.

As stockholders the people have a right to criticize, they have a right to protest whenever and wherever there is signs of scrapping and waste in our war effort. This right, in fact, is the right of democratic privileges we are fighting for.

Occasionally, however, zealous citizens let their desire to help become confused with fact or influenced by unfounded rumour. That criticism, sometimes by word of mouth and sometimes by letters to editors, then becomes damaging rather than helpful.

It was to offset such harmful rumours that army establishments in M.D. 3 this week were open to the public.

It may not have been loyal citizens who started it; it may, indeed, have been a deliberate "plant" by enemy agents, but somehow the news has been getting about that there is wilful waste in Canadian army camps, that there has been little or no attempt to salvage—as the public is asked to do—waste materials that can be turned to war purposes.

Visitors Impressed

Scores of people were asked to go to see for themselves. And what they saw impressed them, made them realize that this wastage talk is absolutely without foundation. They visited kitchens, mess halls, quartermaster stores. They saw the food, the meat in cooler cans and other used items carefully stacked, and awaiting disposal by salvage officers. They went away convinced that, while a certain amount of waste is inevitable, there is no wilful waste and that every effort is put forth by conscientious men to see that it is humanly possible to prevent.

They couldn't, of course, see everything. They didn't see extracts from letters to soldiers read by District Headquarters on the subject of wastage and avoid waste and to conserve as the general public is doing.

Their visit served another purpose, perhaps as equally important. It proved that rumour, whether inspired by loyal but misinformed citizens or by the well-authenticated, started by enemies in our midst, must not be treated without until proved correct.

In this instance it was proved wrong.

Assistance of Airmen and School Students Saved Much Hay and Grain

Three thousand tons of hay and a like amount of grain, the result of labor distributed through the assistance of airmen and public and high school students during the past harvest season the Hastings County Agricultural War Committee was told at its meeting in the Shire Hall.

In a report to the committee, Secretary-Manager C. O. Herity of the Chamber of Commerce outlined the work done by airmen and students in the harvesting and saving crops.

In his report Mr. Herity stated the airmen gave a splendid account of themselves. They were ambitious and willing to work; keenly intelligent, brought to the job much brawn and many of them university students. They particularly enjoyed the home cooking of the farm and happy social atmosphere found in the farm homes.

A careful estimate, Mr. Herity said, of the acreage, showed that upwards of 2,000 tons of hay and a proportionate amount of grain was successfully harvested through the assistance afforded here. Much of this would unquestionably have been lost had it not been for this project in Belleville.

The meeting was presided over by Miss A. C. Sweeney.

A very cordial welcome to be guests of the club at their regular meetings is extended to all women graduates of a university who may be residing in Belleville, either in the armed forces or the wives of men in the services.

A communication from the Belleville General Federation of University Women no refreshments were served.

PROGRESS REPORTED

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 26 — (CP) — Progress reports on 1,000 Easter-bound plants of the Ford Motor Company of Canada here passed through picket-lines today without difficulty, while "progress" was made in conferences called by Ontario Labor Minister Peter Heenan in an effort to end a strike situation.

A number of male office workers were stopped at the picket-lines but passed on after no trouble getting through today.

USE BABS FOR BAIT

Kansas City, Nov. 28 — (AP)—Candy manufacturer Harry Sifers was quite pleased with the order he got from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. except for the note, which explained "The hunting season is on and the bears are like your fans. Hunters are using them for bait."

Paved runways built to date by R.C.A.F. flying schools and stations throughout Canada, a 10-foot roadway from coast to coast.

Secret Forts In the Rock Of Gibraltar

Stripped to the waist and pausing only to wipe powdered limestone from their eyes, British soldiers are laboring deep down in the "Rock" to build a secret hidden eye of defence, linked by a labyrinth of tunnels and galleries.

Day in, day out, they work in caverns with glistening walls which have been lighted by solid fuel stoves—in strange tunnels where no bomb could penetrate. This work has been going on at Gibraltar for months.

Most vital part has been finished, but still the men labor, perfecting fortifications which are perhaps the most formidable created in the history of siege warfare.

With "Oh," genial governor and commander-in-chief, Lieut.-General Mason-Macfarlane, as my guide, I stumbled and slithered for three hours on a tour of inspection of these and other defences, glimpsing some of the amazing fortifications in the bowels of the rock, inspecting repair shops, fire and ice plants, an operating theatre, and the forlorn "nerve centre."

When the last charge has been fired and the blasting completed, the whole Rock—underground and top-most—not an "underground metropolis" as some described it—will be connected by means of a circular road.

This will ensure that communications with all parts of the rock can be maintained under the most stringent siege conditions.

From gun-pits to the lowliest dock yard worker, every toiler is inspired by one desire—by makes "Oh" even more impregnable.

Planned as a fort, its residents live like forts. They know that Gibraltar will give more than a good account of itself if the Axis hurls its forces against them.

They know, too, that the Empire's fate may depend upon the toughness of their resistance and the quality of these hidden fortifications below the rock.

Walking tracks loaded with limestone running over narrow gauge railway tracks, I marvelled at the ingenuity of these men; their work, when the full story can be told, will be a lasting monument to British engineering skill and adaptability.

"If ever the Axis attacks he will have a hot reception," Lord Cranborne, the Colonial Secretary, told the troops and residents during a recent visit to Rock. My fear was more than justified that impression.—By Special Correspondent of the London Evening Standard who visited Gibraltar.

Chiropodist Urge Shoe Buying For Fit And Not For Wear

In buying today one of the most important items on the shopper's list is shoes. With the shortages of gasoline and rubber, and transportation difficulties Canadians are finding their feet.

Shoes should not be bought because the real test of shoe comfort is fit and shape, not size. This can be determined by the feet of the shoes when the would-be buyer stands and walks in the shoes at the time of purchase.

Shoes are tight or sink across the ball of the foot should be avoided. Yet there is a definite belief that they will stretch with wear. They should be the correct size and width to ensure plenty of foot room for walking.

For comfort and durability the heel on women's shoes should fit snugly. If very much wider, when standing is expected the heels should not be higher than one inch and a half.

Do not buy arch supports without the advice of a doctor. Contrary to popular opinion they are needed only in rare cases.

BELIEVES IN INDUSTRY

Cape Town, Nov. 28 (CP)—Dr. H. J. Vanderbijl, South Africa's Director General of War Supplies, said the Union's salvation lies in industrial development, and that Verwoerding, 40 miles from Johannesburg, will be one of the world's great industrial centres.

Macaroni, originally peculiar to Italy, is named after the Italian word meaning to bruise or crush.

VALTIN HELD

Richard Krebs, widely known throughout the reading world as Jan Valtin, author of the best-seller "Out of The Night," has been taken into custody by U. S. authorities on a warrant ordering his deportation to Germany.

African Gains Laid To Huge Supplies

How thousands of soldiers, women of the Auxiliary Territorial Service—A.T.S.—and civilians in Britain under strict secret orders worked night and day for months in readiness for the push throughout the country to equip the Eighth Army and supply it with munitions, the British Official Writings.

Under the Quebec vested responsibility for seeing that the two armies backed the Nile Valley were fully equipped so that might hold up the attack at any point. Behind the Eighth Army go into battle with every tank, vehicle, gun and round of ammunition it will need, and the line was able to build a reserve that had not existed in previous campaigns.

Throughout the whole striking force, from front line to base, were essential spare parts required for fight and decentralized field work shops. One 25-pound gun was in reserve for every unit in the line. The last batch arrived a month before the battle began.

The Ordnance Corps responsible in England for the supply of the British and other fighting equipment had devised packing and dispatch systems so that stores would be taken off boats anywhere in definite priority and be immediately ready for action the moment it landed. These were not ordinary methods adopted from other and many man-hours at the docks.

American Forces Assisted.

The First Army, on landing in French North Africa, was able to set up a supply system of spares and equipment in fighting trim the moment the first landing craft touched shore. Ordnance Corps beach units with special packs had been lent to the American land forces for servicing troops in the initial stages of the campaign.

The success of the Eighth Army and First Army was dependent on the quantity of stores and the speed of supply. Ordnance organizations in the field, following lessons learned in Madagascar and in France, achieved the essential speed.

Other ordnance men at home, with specially trained A. T. S., assembled, tested and despatched supplies in huge quantities. It was obvious a great striking force was being built up, yet it was kept secret.

The initial demands from the Middle East were met by air freight. Co-operation between the R.A.F. and the D.O.C. kept air traffic to the Middle East set the pace for future requirements. Initially, pieces of mechanism which had fallen behind in production were flown.

Concurrent with the building up of the Eighth Army in Egypt was the building in Britain of the First Army. One of the biggest tasks was to speed the making, assembling and the thousands of vehicles that would be mating beach landings. This preparation of vehicles was another closely guarded secret.

Tanks For Factory Workers.

The victory in Egypt is reported to have been a tonic for the millions of workers in British munitions factories. It was a great blaunt, which broke five records in the past six months, has produced the highest output in its history.

The output of gun factories helped make possible the great through. One royal ordnance factory achieved in a month the record of producing one gun, a 6-pounder or larger, for each hour of work, including the office staff.

In other gun factories, this factory in recent months upset all ideas of the time required for producing guns. Production rose month by month, each month ahead of schedule.

Women with no previous workshop experience are 40 per cent. of the workers in the factories. In doing most of the precise engineering work in royal ordnance factories. In some shell-filling factories 90 per cent of the workers are women.

In most fields the scheduled peak has been reached. Only the strongest allied ground of victory could give more and that has now been supplied for the troops in the field.—N.Y. Times.

Nazis' Emblem Of Treachery is Plain

Nice people, the Nazis—they even double cross their own spies.

The public shouldn't astonish anybody, the general Nazi reputation for skullduggery being what it is, but it does seem a bit unusual from the standpoint of the well-known Nazi efficiency.

The tale was told by a 21-year-old British girl secretary whom who was hanged recently in England as a traitor and spy. He confessed betraying convoy secrets to German agents in Lisbon, Portugal. He said the Germans gave him £72 and promised him more. But instead of keeping him on the payroll they forced him to work for nothing by threatening to report him to the British authorities. Finally he was caught, tried and executed.

The British are making no secret of the case for good and sufficient reasons. One is they hope to give courage any other defections by publicizing the big risks and small returns involved. The idea seems to be that it would be a very weak-minded individual indeed who would stoop to treason at the risk of his life for such small potatoes as $72 and an excellent chance of being double crossed.

The sailor who did so stoop must have belonged to a particularly gullible category because we thought almost everybody knew by now that you can't do business with Herr Hitler. The Nazis wear the emblem of treachery on their sleeves for all to see, but unfortunately it took some of us a long time to recognize it.—Buffalo Courier-Express.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Nov. 27—(CP)—A small, well-organized and united group of southern senators, wise in the ways of parliamentary obstruction, is ready to beat the Administration Bill to abolish state poll taxes in federal elections.

To understand the intensity, almost the ferocity of the fight, it is necessary to set this question of poll taxes against a background of Southern history. It goes back to the Civil War when the federal government gave the freedmen the ballot to safeguard their rights to slaves by force, over the protest of southern whites. This led to Negro majorities in some state legislatures and the rise to power for a time of the original Ku Klux Klan. It forced into politics southern state constitutional gerrymander causes (you can't vote if your grandfather didn't) and poll-tax clauses and other methods of disenfranchising most of the Negroes.

By these devices, white voting majorities have been maintained in the South from about 1870 to the present.

Filibuster In Sight Stales

The Poll Tax survives in eight states, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia. Of these, only in a head tax of $1 to $1.50 a year and it must be paid, plus all arrears, in order to vote. The result is that thousands of people, who otherwise could vote, cannot or are too disinterested in public affairs to pay the fee.

Although aimed at Negroes, the poll taxes keep many poor whites from the polling booths and in that sense are not an instrument of racial discrimination. The actual voting population of the eight poll-tax states flutters around seven or eight per cent. of the total population, a remarkably low percentage, but politically organized, sage and the machine almost impossible to beat.

The southern senators were determined to maintain this system, not only for political reasons—that it has put them in office and they don't want it changed—but because they present federal interference in what they regard as a state matter and also, because they believe the federal bill to be unconstitutional.

Leaders Female

Every day in a while, when you get them in a critical mood, the representatives of other congressional particularly Australians, take a shot at Canada and also at Britain for Canada's $1,000,000,000 gift to Britain and how the fund is handled in London.

Canada put up the money to enable Britain to continue to buy Canadian products but, in effect, Britain could part of it to the other dominions and asks repayment in sterling. The Australians say to Canada, in effect, you made a gift to Britain, why don't you make a gift to us? Britain, we also, have no Canadian dollars and we, too, buy Canadian goods"

According to information here, this is how the $1,000,000,000 fund is handled by London: Australia, for instance, buys from Canada $40,000,000 more than she sells. Canberra gets those dollars from London by crediting the $40,000,000 her "London Fund" which consist of bank balances, treasury bills and other short-term securities. Thus, in effect, Britain charges Australia for the share of the fund that Canada volunteered and the transaction has many financial ifs and buts.

Roosevelt Twelfth Egg

The Federal Treasury of the United States carries great burdens on his shoulders, perhaps greater than any other man in the world. Would you imagine he could be fined even under the law, to concern himself with damages for Mr. Bucklin's turkey egg?

The tale of Mr. Bucklin's turkey eggs can be told here. It seems that D. Roosevelt's words, as contained in a wire message to Congress: "I have withheld my approval of S. 2178, entitled 'An act to amend section 2744, 'an act for the relief of J. O. Bucklin.'"

The bill proposes payment to the claimant for an amount of $616.13 for destruction of 213 turkey eggs caused by blasting in connection with a project of the Works Progress Administration near the premises of the claimant. Of a total of 300 eggs there were only 17 hatched.

Payment of the amount proposed assumes that but for the blasting, each egg would have hatched which is extremely questionable. Even if that had occurred, there would have been a loss of only one half of the total number of fowls raised to a marketable growth which is also questionable. The bill was based on the market would have brought an average of $6 which is further speculation. I do not feel that I would be justified in approving a bill based upon such speculative conclusions."

Not That Make News

It is generally agreed that if Major James Roosevelt, is not a son of the president, he would have been decorated for his part in the Marine Corps raid on Makin Island. The president has four sons on active service and not one has had an easy job behind the fighting front.

The United States Government has purchased 12,500,000 acres of private property since the start of the war for army, navy and air force camps, bases, bombing areas and other purposes. Of this total, only slightly less than the land surface of Nova Scotia, and it is reported 30,000,000 acres will have been purchased by the end of the week—more than the land surfaces of all three Maritime Provinces.

3rd Sidney

Third Sidney, Nov. 26.—Under the auspices of the Women's Institute, a Missionary Society, a "Family party" was held on Wednesday evening, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Westover. The pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott, acted as chairman for the evening's program. Mrs. Lee Grills sang for the community sing-song and Mr. Stanley Spafford and Murray Jeffrey were song leaders. Instrumental music was given by Master Ray Scott, Mrs. Sam Marshall, Mrs. Lee Grills and Mrs. Hannah Hobbs. Musical numbers included a solo by Mrs. Scott, and two numbers were rendered by Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton and Mrs. Lee Grills. The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. Cyril McMullen. The Roll Call, Minutes and the benediction by Rev. Scott closed the program and lunch was served by the ladies. The collection amounted to twelve dollars and was amounted to $13.90.

Hannah's Scotch Bakery Makes A Specialty of Fine Christmas Cakes

With the Yuletide season "just around the corner," the time for celebrations is drawing nearer. And such anniversaries and celebrations are never complete without the pleasant gathering of the traditional Christmas or Anniversary Cake.

The planning and baking of such a cake, however, takes the spirit and delight from it unless the appetite of the many and discriminating guests is satisfied. What the average housewife would much rather entrust to one making a business of culinary masterpieces.

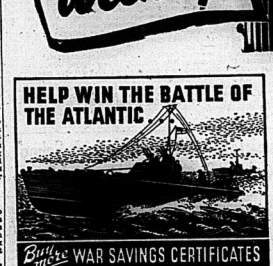
Such a combination were all the fast and better in the home where possibly the equipment necessary is not available and the hostess is assured of presenting before her guests a beautiful as well as delicious masterpiece of culinary artcraft.

And besides freeing the hostess of all the responsibility, there is now added convenience in that we permitting the baking of anniversary and Christmas cakes to be done by a special bakery.

The reason is that wartime regulations have limited the supply of sugar and other ingredients which each household may use during a specified time. If extra baking by individual there is possibility the regular sugar rations may not last the required time. As a result the regular baking activities may have to be curtailed. How much simpler merely to permit a specialty bakery to do the job.

The baking of just such cakes as would win the admiration of any hostess, regardless of the occasion to be celebrated, and which would please the appetite of the most discriminating guest, is the art in which Hannah's Scotch Bakery, 224 Front Street, has long specialized.

Only the most carefully chosen ingredients are used in Hannah's Christmas cakes and these ingredients are mixed with all the artcraft of one long experienced in culinary methods.



Hannah's Scotch Bakery has been known in Belleville as the place which specializes in all kinds of baking needs. Don't forget to call at Hannah's when planning for your Christmas cake. Their's is a culinary expert who has long catered to special occasions. Phone 95.

Tankers Get Fuel Overseas

Behind every British aircraft carrying its deadly load of bombs to drop on Germany, there is an ugly, legitimate ship of Britain's merchant navy—a tanker with her great yawning holds filled with oil and petroleum.

Those tankers act as Britain's heart, pumping the life blood of Britain the very lifeblood of her war effort.

In the British Isles there are no oilfields, no great pipelines. The only pipelines are the little white ships that shuttle back and forth across the oceans carrying their stubborn, warship bases and munition works, with the oil everything depends.

Every drop of aviation spirit in the tanks of British based bombers, every drop of oil in British warships, has come by oil tanker. Three years men have risked their lives to bring it to them.

Neat Plot Failed.

Carrying oil by sea is a dangerous job even in peacetime. In war the risks are multiplied. There is always the danger of mines exploding near that highly inflammable cargo. The flash of a torpedo, the explosion of a bomb or a shell can bring death to men and ships in port until nothing remains.. And, above all, valuable fuel with which to fight the Nazis may be lost forever.

A single tanker can transport as much as 15,000 tons of oil. Many of the she crosses the oceans—and 15,000 tons of oil is enough to keep an army lorry going for 30,000,000 miles. The Nazis know this—and they know, too, that if they could destroy the supplies they would stifle the British war effort. So, using submarines, aeroplanes and surface raiders, they have tried to prevent that supplies getting through.

Now the less they have failed.

Admittedly, some tankers have been sunk. Some have been damaged, repaired, put to sea again, damaged and repaired again. But the oil fleet stands. It still always gets on.

Here is a typical story of how the men of the tankers say to themselves "The oil comes first, whatever the danger, and whatever the cost."

A British cruiser was attacking an enemy coastline and all enemy ships had orders not to interfere.

Re-Fuel Warship.

So that she could go on fighting she needed to be re-fuelled. A tanker on her way to pump thousands of tons of oil into the cruiser had been seen by the Nazis, had been bombed, and had her decks and sides raked with machine-gun bullets.

Another tanker received a signal on her radio asking her to leave the trades routes and change her course towards the cruiser. Within five minutes she was obeying that order, and racing full speed ahead to refuel the warship.

Another, and after the transfer of oil had taken place, the tanker's engineers made holes in the damaged tanker were soon alongside each other, and the process of refuelling began.

The pumping of oil from one ship to another was a dangerous operation. Two stationary ships, locked together, make a sitting target for enemy thrust. But they took the risk, and thousands of tons of oil were saved.

There are countless stories like this to be heard at Britain's airports. There are countless stories of men fighting for days on end to keep their ships together from the oil-filled holds of their tankers. It was only when they were forced to abandon ship and take to the boats that they gave up the position of their tanker.

The other day I sat in the cap-tain's cabin of a tanker which had just brought home 12,000 tons of oil and petroleum for the Royal Navy on the radio. Over the air came the news that again British bombers had bombed a great German armament centre.

The tanker men smiled. They knew that, without them that raid could never have been achieved. They had carried the oil and the explosives for planes which had wrought destruction amid the Nazis.

RUSSIANS PRESS FORWARD WEST OF MOSCOW

Overcome Enemy's Resistance And Steadily Advance

Also Capture New Stronghold on Don River West of Stalingrad

THREE RAIL LINES CUT

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Nov. 30 — (AP) — Soviet shock troops have reached the Don River stronghold from the German under clearing skies on the Stalingrad front and are moving westward through a blizzard in the parallel offensive west of Moscow, the Russians said today.

Germans were declared to be losing at the rate of 10,000 daily as Red Army divisions pushed across the snow, utilizing tactics perfected in the 1941-42 winter drive.

While clouds swirled, cold prevailed in the Stalingrad area. Winddriven snow cut down visibility on the central front, but Moscow dispatches said the joint operations were the greatest undertaken by the Russians in their 17 months of war.

Red Army scouts wearing white hoods crept around with automatic rifles patrolled snow-covered pine forests and the supply lands west of Moscow to locate enemy positions for the artillery which blazed the paths for the general advance.

Reds Reoan Skies

Russian fliers, warmed up frosty motors and roamed the skies on the Stalingrad front in support of cavalry and tanks slashing at the enemy lines. Fifty loaded trucks and 12 Nazi planes in hands were destroyed by Soviet squadrons in that area yesterday.

Hundreds of thousands of panzerplatels in the German language were dropped on enemy positions, informing Nazi soldiers of the new situation which exists "at Stalingrad and the Allied drives in North Africa."

Pravda said "The iron ring of our troops is closing around the German" in the Stalingrad area. Another situation on the central front, where Red Army vanguards are slashing west of Rzhev, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, was summed up with the declaration that the Red Army men "rigorously overcome all obstacles, overwhelm the enemy resistance and steadily advance."

The midday communique announced the capture of several communities on the central front. An area of 40 square miles was cleared from Rzhev along the Rzhev-Vyazma railroad, 30 miles eastward from the rear the advanced Nazi stronghold of Vyazma. There is the latest highway 100 miles from Moscow.

90 Miles From Luiria

This was but one phase, however, of a drive by Russian troops, dispatches said has cut three German-occupied railroads in the area of the central front and isolated Velikie Luki, a contested communications center 90 miles southeast of the Latvian border.

Elsewhere on the Stalingrad front said the Germans, after losing the battle above the Don, now were seeking to form a new line to the east, 90 miles from Nazi-held corridor, to protect their divisions massed before the city.

Two towns were also captured in last night's communique are Peskovka and Vyazovoye, 40 and from 30 to 40 miles northwest of Stalingrad on a line that parallel with the Don roughly three miles east of the Don, and connecting with railroads to Stalingrad.

Pravda said many German troops were concentrated in the area northwest of Stalingrad behind dense minefields and antitank barriers, but the position was broken by a three-pronged attack against the enemy rolled south, abandoning its fortifications.

Advance Toward Rostov

The Red Army fanned out southwest of Stalingrad along the railroad running through Kotelnikovsk toward Rostov.

Newly-reported captured were Oberleutn. 90 miles south of Stalingrad, and Verkhne Kurmoyarskaya, on the east bank of the Don at its junction with the Kurmoyarskaya-Kotelnikovo railroad, 'under the German corridor, and from Stalingrad.

Pravda said an entire heavy artillery regiment was captured by Soviet troops before the German could remove the covers from the guns.

A German infantry regiment overwhelmed after a brief fight was declared moved practically intact into the lines of prisoners throwing the roads to the Russian rear.

1,000 IN CLUB

Boston, Nov. 30—(AP) — State and county law-enforcement officers were this morning questioning today to determine whether any law violation had contributed to the Saturday night fire that suddenly converted the Cocoanut Grove night club into a blood flaming death for 477 merrymakers.

Meeting under instructions from Acting Public Safety Commissioner John F. Stokes, State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity turned over to District Attorney William J. Foley of Suffolk County a preliminary report of the fire that flared from a match applied by a 25-year-old busboy as he sought to replace a light bulb removed by a club patron.

Meanwhile, 100 bodies lay unclaimed and unclaimed in the city's morgue, pomp a terrific problem of identification to officials who hoped that many might have been burned almost past recognition.

In undertaking establishments throughout the New England states, notifications were under way for the funerals of funerals that will carry the bodies of the victims to their graves.

(One Canadian was believed to have died in the fire. At Montreal the mother of Gray Miller, Jr., received word that he was a victim. Miller, a student at Harvard and the board of Imperial Tobacco Company.)

Hospitals Treat 170

Hospital staffs ministered to more than 170 trampled and burned persons—many of whom breathed close to death in the wake of one of the worst fires in the country's history.

As he entered a conference with the State Fire Marshal, District Attorney Foley declared, "If some one is responsible for this awful thing we'll get him."

Fire Marshal Garrity's preliminary report made no information given at inquest, which will be resumed today, including the testimony of the first Boston fire officials to reach the scene.

Stampede Exits

They testified that after searing flames spreading through paper decorations on the ceiling, panic-stricken sent a 1,000 patrons stampeding in a fighting frenzy toward a few doors. Stampede Exits

Many fire chief said that finding bodies near a closed door pathway and others piled around an open under pressure—was out-of-the-ordinary.

F. Timilty indicated in an interview that a 25-year-old busboy, year-old boy "isn't supposed to" work in a place where liquor is sold.

The busboy whose match started the fire, Stanley Tomaszewski, Deputy Police Superintendent James P. Hurley said, was "scared stiff."

The boy related, Claflin said, that he was trying to replace an electric light bulb which had been removed by a club patron for a recently-opened melody room of the lace Cocoanut Grove, standing in the flimsy palm and set off the decorations above him.

The Boston Committee on Public Safety said the death toll might reach 470. More-than 300 of the dead were identified.

Flames swept through the highly-inflammable decorations as panic-stricken patrons fought for ton to signal for the National Anthem as a prelude to the Saturday night floor show. Within seconds the packed night club was a holocaust.

Canada has also led the way in developing armor-piercing shot.

"Canadian armor-piercing shot has revolutionized the making of this type of projectile," Mr. Howe told the House of Commons. "Canada is the only country in the world which has made of high-grade tool steel," he said, "and the only one being made from a low-alloy type of steel, which is not a strategic or deadly job than steel costing four times as much."

Vanier Represents Canada to French National Committee

Ottawa, Nov. 30. (CP)— Brig. Georges P. Vanier, recently appointed Canadian Minister to United National governments in exile, has been designated as the Canadian Government's representative to the United National Committee in London, the External Affairs Department announced today.

Brig. Vanier will consult with the French Committee "on all matters of mutual interest relating to the conduct of the war," the announcement said.

He is expected to leave in about three weeks for his new overseas post.

Brig. Vanier, 54, now is officer commanding Military District No. 5 (Quebec). He is officially "on leave" from his post as Minister to France, a post he held when France fell to abandon in 1940 just before the Republic capitulated to the Germans.

A week ago it was announced in Ottawa Canada Casette he was to go overseas again as the Dominion's First Minister to Chando-Slovakia, Greece, Norway, Poland and Yugoslavia, and he succeeded Jean Desy, now Brazilian Minister, as Minister to Belgium and Netherlands.

The French National Committee in London has no diplomatic status, and hence Canada appointed a "representative" instead of a Minister. The committee is managing the interests of France until such time as a representative French Government is established.

The United States some time ago appointed military officers as representatives to the French Committee in Canada and the United States now are on a comparable basis insofar as the French Committee is concerned.

CHURCHILL WARNS ITALIAN PEOPLE TO GET OUT OF WAR

Promises War Will be Carried to Italy in Devastating Manner

REVIEWS WAR

London, Nov. 30 — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast warning to the Italian people — to get out of the war or expect a "procession of disasters" — was pounded home again and again to the Italians today by the BBC.

The BBC preceded Mr. Churchill's victory speech Sunday with broadcast analysis by Ida Haslam to make a separate peace and following up by broadcasting all Italian radio the full text of the Prime Minister's 30-minute speech, addressing Germany and Italy, which he said is true.

Mr. Churchill promised that the war would be carried to Italy "in a manner not hitherto dreamed of by its guilty leaders" and added:

"It is for the Italian people to say whether they want the long agonizing thing to happen to them or not."

He reviewed global strategy on the African and Russian fronts, discussed what he called a "reunion" with France and the "resurrection," and spoke sombrely of the portents of 1943 as holding new tests "in the face of victory."

"I promise nothing. I predict nothing," Mr. Churchill said. "I cannot even guarantee that more successes are not on the way.

Most Powerful Explosive of War Made in Canada

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—Canadian scientists have developed the most powerful explosive of the war and it is now being made in Canadian plants, Munitions Minister Howe said today.

Mr. Howe mentioned the new explosive in an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Club.

"It may interest you to know," he said, "that the most powerful explosive of the war now is being manufactured in Canada by a process developed by Canadian scientists, and that the Canadian product will be just as good as the Allies."

Canada has also led the way in developing armor-piercing shot.

"Canadian armor-piercing shot has revolutionized the making of this type of projectile," Mr. Howe told the House of Commons. "Canada is the only country in the world which has made of high-grade tool steel," he said, "and the only one being made from a low-alloy type of steel, which is not a strategic or deadly job than steel costing four times as much."

"Other bombers attacked railway communications in Belgium," the Air Ministry announced.

It said two planes were missing.

The Italian High Command acknowledged in a communique broadcast by the Home radio that Turin was a target, but said that the attack had been heavy and that only one British bomber fell there.

This was the first raid on Northern Italy since the beginning of the war and the 12th since the opening of the new aerial offensive with an assault on Genoa Oct. 22.

More than 100,000 Britishers in addition to 8,000-pound "blockbusters" were dumped on Turin in the Saturday night raid.

"Nevertheless, the very fact that he mentioned them at all was encouraging. For there are many who think that we can solve all our world problems, as they concern not only Europe and Asia, but Africa and Asia, must be well under discussion and formulation before the war is over."

Willkie criticized Mr. Churchill in a speech before the Herald Tribune Forum Nov. 16. While not mentioning the Prime Minister by name, his reference was to a remark made by Mr. Churchill on Nov. 10 at a London dinner in which he said: "I have not become the King's First Minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire."

THE WAR TODAY

By GLENN BABB
Associated Press Staff Writer

Winston Churchill's broadcast yesterday was the most optimistic he has yet given Italy, delivered in that voice of doom he employs only when he speaks of victory. But the richest flow or scorn he has ever poured on Mussolini.

But the warning: Britain's Prime Minister says Germany can be defeated "while it is still time." Britain and the United States to the end of the war, he says, will be "the sworn foes of aggression in the Pacific as well as in Europe."

"It may well be that the war in Europe will end before we have finished with Japan," Churchill says, "but should such a course we should, of course, bring all our forces to the other side of the world to aid the United States, to aid China, to aid Australia and New Zealand in the struggle against the aggression of Japan."

Among men who know the situation in the Orient there is a growing belief this second chapter of the war may be a long, bitter and costly one, in which will and with the United States and British armed forces, which does defeat Japan, but with formidable array of sea and air power the world has ever known.

Japan's conquests, the occupation of the United Nations, Mr. Churchill says, are opposed by "the unconquerable resistance of the Russian armies." Of this resistance he says:

"Their fiftieth wedding anniversary was just another day in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Palmer, 15 Everett Street, who today celebrated their half century of happily married life.

Although the actual anniversary today, the couple's golden jubilee celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Palmer's daughter, Mrs. Cyril Bowerman, 15 Everett Street, a quiet dinner was served in the presence of the immediate family, which included the principals of the marriage celebration. Mrs. Palmer was also presented only with their everyday tasks, Mrs. Palmer presiding at the tea table and Mr. Palmer working at his profession as a blacksmith.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer are both natives of Prince Edward, county where their parents were engaged in farming in the Bay of Quinte district. It was there he married Miss Annie Palmer was Miss Annie Jenks, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Jenks, while Mr. Palmer, now 74 years of age, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Palmer of Consecon.

Although his parents were followers of the Anglican faith, Mr. Palmer early in life became attracted to black-smithing and for the past 55 years has been occupied as a "smithy". Mr. Palmer has lived in Belleville for 36 years the family have resided in Bellevue Park for 30 years.

Interviewed at her home this morning, Mrs. Palmer revealed that she and Mr. Palmer met in Australia and were married in the struggle against the aggression of Japan.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Palmer Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Their fiftieth wedding anniversary was just another day in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Palmer, 15 Everett Street, who today celebrated their half century of happily married life.

Fraises French Actress

Those who knew Mr. Palmer "well should of course bring all our forces to the aid of the United States, to aid China, to aid Australia and New Zealand in the struggle against the aggression of Japan."

The self-demolition of the French fleet, he declared, "will live in honor" and from the flames and smoke of the scuttling "the French nation will rise again."

The Prime Minister's threat to Italy today was the strongest he has given that Italy's morale is shaky and he points to the fact that Italy has sent the German Gestapo ruled Italy's state police to control of the warplanes.

Rome radio, commenting on Mr. Churchill's manifesto, asserted that it reveals "a profoundly perfectly truncult."

Discuss World Peace

Mr. Churchill reached into the Napoleonic era for comment on the possibility of peace.

Canvassing the possibility the European war would end first and a common front would be erected against Japan, he said:

"It seems to me that should the war end thus, there will be a far higher sense of comradeship around the table of victory than around the victors at Versailles. Then the danger had passed away. The coalition which had saved it had not been snapped. There was no sense of corporate responsibility.

"I should hope, therefore, that we should be able to settle all policy questions, more far-reaching and more lasting, of the problems of the world at the end of this war than was possible a quarter of a century ago."

OVERCOME

Rail Centre Isolated

Russian dispatches from the front said today that German-controlled rail lines on the central front, between Moscow and Smolensk and that Velikie-Luki, a much-contested communications hub 100 miles south from the Latvian border, has been isolated.

A jubilant Russian said "the German army is facing the blackest moment since the start of hostilities."

The Soviet newspaper Izvestia said that in the ten days ending yesterday 100,000 Germans had been killed and the communique reported that in the Stalingrad region alone 68,000 Germans had been captured in the same period.

From November 19 to 29, the Russians said, 234 German planes were destroyed in the air and on the ground for the loss of 97 Soviet aircraft. Of the German planes destroyed, 76 were said to be transport planes.

Reich Mustard Gas Feared

The following material was reported captured in ten days: 3,000 guns of all calibres; 1,935 machine guns; 1,379 tanks; 20,700 horses and huge military supply dumps. In addition, more than 6,000 motor vehicles and 4,678 cars with military equipment were reported damaged.

The Germans continued to strike back and Ushev in reserve to stem the Russian advance, but the Russians said they were sweeping aside this resistance at most points.

Northwest of the city, 1,400 more Germans were reported to have died trying to break through a ring of iron so dearly during the summer. New German penitentiaries are being established, the Russians said. Bitter fighting also accompanied the drive southwest of Stalingrad where the Russians were reported to have recaptured several thousand more dead bodies of more than 1,000 Nazis.

CHURCHILL WARNS

"The dawn of victory may be far off," he said, "and we must brace ourselves to cope with the trials and the sacrifices which will be a stern and terrible year."

No Hailing Place

But he emphasized that "now at this moment the 1st. British Army is striking hard at the last remaining German and Italian forces in Tripolitania in Tunisia."

"American, British and French troops are pressing forward side by side. We expect to expel the enemy before long from the last remnants of African coastline. But this is no halting place. It is not a seat but a springboard. We shall use Africa to come to closer grips."

"Our operations in French North Africa should enable us to bring the weight of the war home to the Italian people. It is for them to act hitherto dreamed of by its leaders, or will they still be the unfortunate people Mussolini has led, exploited and disgraced."

Subject to Hard Treatment

Mr. Churchill pointed to the series of punishing raids the R.A.F. has inflicted on Italian industrial and shipping centres, the most recent Saturday night when heavy bombs were dropped again on Turin, and remarked: "Already the centres of war industry in Genoa and Italy are being subjected to harder treatment than any we experienced in the Winter of 1940."

The Russian battle cry "morte aux fresteurs to se-climax" and weakened German divisions must prepare themselves, he said, for "a heavy dose of what they got last year."

But he also warned: "There is nothing that has happened yet which will prevent Hitler from making a war will not be long or that bitter, bloody years do not lie ahead." He said the Nazis were in a position to come to an end before the war is ended."

Re-organize Boy Scouts In Marmora

Marmora — A reorganization meeting for the local Boy Scouts was held in the council chambers on Thursday evening with an attendance of twenty-seven boys who expressed a desire to see the troop reorganized. In addition about thirty younger lads were attracted to the meeting in the hope that a Wolf Cub pack could be formed. Hogarth Sabine, a former assistant scoutmaster outlined the preliminary steps for the formation of a troop and explained the Scout law and promise.

Percy Fletcher who is teacher of a boys' class at St. Andrew's Sunday School also was present in the interests of boys of his class who had expressed the wish to ethn that a troop be formed. The next step to be taken will be the procuring of a sponsor organization after which there should be little difficulty in obtaining leaders from the youth represented at this inaugural meeting. Patrol leaders temporarily appointed until organization is completed are Glen Lavender, Maurice Seeley and Ronald McCarvey.

The November meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. D. R. Sanderson with Mrs. W. P. Fletcher presiding, opening with "God Save the King" and the hymn "Our Loved Dominion Bless". Mrs. Fletcher read the call to prayer and the lesson of the secretary, Mrs. Wallbridge. She is a patient in Nicholl's Hospital, Peterborough, and Mrs. D. R. Sanderson acted in her place. The Roll Call and minutes of previous meeting were read. Mrs. M. Brown took the record of books read and sick calls made. Mrs. Fletcher named a committee to meet at the parsonage about December 1st to arrange for the Christmas program and also to draw up a list of officers for 1943.

The topic to be considered at this meeting was "Reconsider Security" and although unable to be present, Miss Gunter, the investigator for C.A.P. and Mother's Allowances for this district prepared a very interesting paper on phases of Social Security work that come under her supervision. A lively and worthwhile discussion followed along the line suggested in the Study Book under the direction of Mrs. Ryan and with Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Sanderson, Mrs. Sabine and Mrs. Sweet taking part and Dr. Fletcher concluded the program with a short address. The meeting closed with the singing of "Where the Cross Crowded Ways of Life" and a short prayer.

KEEL FOR NEW TANKER LAID IN SECONDS AFTER

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 30 —(AP)— The largest seagoing vessel ever launched from a Great Lakes shipyard slid down the ways yesterday at the Barnes-Duluth shipbuilding company yards. The ship, the tanker San Joaquin, is the first of seven of its kind built here. The keel for another similar vessel was laid 1¼ minutes after the San Joaquin hit the water.

WHY not send your Christmas Greetings by mail this year?

And, to ease the load on the Post Office people, mail them early.

War never takes a holiday — even at Christmas. Vital wartime messages will be crowding telephone lines far beyond their normal load. And thousands of boys and girls in camp will be calling home. Long delays will be inevitable—unless you decide to avoid your usual Christmas telephoning.

So please ask yourself now—why can't I send my greetings by mail this year and leave the telephone lines free for war and wartime uses? And mail them early! The postal workers will appreciate that. Thank you!

CHEMISTRY HELPS TO WIN THE WAR

Oil (like dirt) Can be "Matter in the Wrong Place"

Oil—used in machining metals—must be removed before finishing can take place. In the language of the trade these metals must be "degreased."

Time was when degreasing was a slow, tedious process. Today, a product of industrial chemistry does it better, does it faster. The product has a long name — trichlorethylene — but its work is done in seconds. Metal parts are now dry-cleaned by passing them through a controlled vapor of trichlorethylene. Oil and dirt fall away—even from the deepest crevices—leaving the surface chemically free of foreign matter . . . ready for plating, painting or any other finish.

The use of trichlorethylene means time saved—a boon to Canada's war effort. In aircraft and mechanized transport trichlorethylene cleans engines and moving parts of oil, grease and dirt, making possible quicker, close inspection.

Introduced to Canada a few years ago by Canadian Industries Limited, trichlorethylene is produced from domestic raw materials by the Organic Chemicals Division of C-I-L at Shawinigan Falls. Production of this important chemical solvent is adequate for the demands of war-stimulated industry.

Cheese Makers and Empire Show

Belleville today welcomes the Fifteenth Annual Convention and British Empire Dairy Show of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association. Such a gathering and exhibition assume first importance in the light of the responsibility which has rested upon the dairy industry in the past three years and more of war to produce and produce for Britain's market and to raise to the highest the quality of the product in order to fill the larders of Britain with this highly concentrated product which is one of the most popular of foods of man.

The awards show with what spirit the cheese makers have answered the call. There is a marked improvement in the quality. The grand championship award emblematic of the British Empire goes to Donald Howes, Atwood, maker of the cheese which scored 98.5 per cent. The other four awards in the British Empire special scored 98.1, 98.0, 98.0.

Of note is the greater number of awards to Central and Eastern Ontario cheese makers than in preceeding years.

No fewer than 447 entries have been brought here through the efforts of the Central Ontario cheese makers.

The convention and the dairy show show a patriotic and national purpose and cannot fail to be of the utmost interest to the cheese maker, the dairy farmer and the cheese industry.

Hitler's Blunders

Hitler has never learned how to deal with free nations and does not know the spirit of liberty and what it means. He has made mistake after mistake, colossal blunders which have affected the whole course of the war. His misunderstanding of Russia's power is being brought again to his and the world's attention as the Russians are beating his armies back on the eastern front for the second winter with all the memories, rich to Russians and bitter to Hitler, even while he has committed his latest blunder, his culminating treachery over unoccupied France, the seizure of Toulon and his foiled disposition of the French fleet in that naval base.

The personnel of the French navy anticipated the act of treachery and the sailors of the fleet were ready and went about their self-sacrifice when that was the only step left open to them rather than to betray the French navy into the hands of the Germans.

This is a great moral lesson for the reunion of France and for the Allied cause while it is a terrific blow against Hitlerism, which knows only treachery, deceit, force, aggression and brutality. It is a real blow for the liberation of the world these gallant seamen of France struck when they scuttled their ships. It successfully disposed of "collaboration" with Hitler and proved, what did not need proof—the devotion of the Allied nations now under Hitlerist oppression that these nations of Poles, Czechs, Norse, Belgians, Hollanders, Danes, Greeks, Yugoslavs and others foresaw just such an event for the United Nations.

Hitler's act was the act of panic or desperation, a mood which steady and reliant nations like the United Powers welcome as indicating the maddened anxiety of the enemy over his plight in the whole Mediterranean situation.

In this act Hitler could not in his methodical Hun way realize that there is such a thing as the spirit of the Marsellaise singing in the hearts of the sailors of the French fleet, a hating of everything smacking of oppression and tyranny that they could sink their lives for the name and honor of France.

Hitler is but an example of the man of crime and evil whose arm is raised against justice and mankind and finds all the forces of right fighting against him and relentlessly driving him back to the wall where he will be crushed.

There never did and never will exist anything permanently noble and excellent in the character which is a stranger to the exercise of resolute self-denial. — Sir Walter Scott.

A great deal of knowledge, which is not capable of making a man wise, has a natural tendency to make him vain and arrogant. — Addison.

MISSING

He was so strong and fearless, thrilled with life
And eager for adventure and the strife
With Britain's foe; eager to go
To fight for freedom's cause and liberty
That the oppressed and prisoned might be free.
From time to time word came that he was strong
Fighting for right against the force of wrong;
But just a year ago a message came—
"Missing"—but he has left an honored name,
A name high-written in the scroll of fame;
But oh! the anguished hearts of folks at home
Hoping and dreaming that he yet might come,
And that some day with fond and tender years
They'll welcome him—he surely will return!
No footstep breaks the silence deep, so deep,
While loving hearts a constant vigil keep.
But solace comes to cheer the friends who weep—
The words, "He giveth His beloved sleep."

THE PERFECT WARTIME SHOPPER

She does not expect a peacetime standard of service from the stores.

Most storekeepers are struggling with the problem of fewer and less efficient salesmen and women.

She does not get peevish because the particular line, size or color of goods that she wants is not in stock. The storekeeper would undoubtedly stock them—if he could.

She remembers that restrictions on delivery, changes and refunds are by Board Order, and not just a storekeeper's whim.

If she is a housewife she avoids shopping in the midday hour which is the business girl's only chance to do so. She also avoids using the street cars and buses during the morning and evening "rush."

She takes a basket or shopping bag to market and carries home her own parcels.

SHE ONLY BUYS WHAT SHE ABSOLUTELY NEEDS FOR IMMEDIATE USE.

Her reaction on hearing a rumour that there will be a shortage of hats is NOT to run out and buy every hat within sight, but to brush up her last year's supply.

She does not go from store to store buying up scarce commodities to make a hoard so that somebody who can't afford to do that has to go without a fair share later on.

She accepts shortages, rationing, reduction of services and other wartime measures without grumbling.

At the back of her mind she remembers those other women of the United Nations who stand in food queues in the rain in order that their children may have just enough to keep them from death by starvation.

A fortnight later, Parrino heard a rap on his hotel door in Cairo. He opened it. There was Wendell Willkie with a letter.

The Sixteen Days

New York, Nov. 30.—

"To be or not to be, that is the question;
Whether 'tis better in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?"

—Hamlet's Soliloquy.

Let those who with to regard the scuttling of the French fleet as a victory, relishing in the cold calculation that Hitler has not got the ships, and that among the officers and crews there were Petainists, Fascists, Nazi agents, De Gaullists, Communists, Democrats. The fleet was the France of 1940.

And as in 1940, the rifts were irreconcilable, Darlan, from Hitler's standpoint, "betrayed" them to join him—without ever once taking a clear stand for the Allies, without ever once saying a word against Hitler, without by his surrender to Hitler, again that of neutrality — sail out, get away—but for what purpose? Escape, not battle?

The French officers, educated in Petainist collaborationism, still entertained the illusion of neutrality. They thought they could escape destiny by doing nothing. From inaction, they could, they relied, being an instrument, they reduced themselves to a symbol. But to what symbol? What is paralysis in the inexorable moment of decision? It is death! They chose death. And they got what they chose.

In their death there was grandeur—if there is grandeur in the death of Hamlet. They were men. But let us not call it a happy ending.

Let us rather be quiet, filled with pity, and terror, and awe. In this war, destiny is inescapable. Act or not act, is the lesson of the scuttling of the French fleet.

And I implore all those who speak in France and in Britain in awesome event as a victory. The mourning and despair in France should be terrible beyond tears. Only if we can see the real roots of the tragedy—of our State Department—can see the roots of the tragedy—will realize that the last remnant of collaborationism and indecision has been rooted out by the clean sea, then a new clean policy may emerge.

Our Darlan policy is a continuation of what perished with the fleet.

Let us give his due, his just place, and our confidence to the man who is the Grave Digger of defeated France: General de Gaulle!

BOOBY TRAPS

To dead men's hands the strings are tied
Which burst the waiting grenade
And thus are lured, from mercy's side,
The brave who, dare to offer aid.
This trick is called a "booby trap,"
A method practised by the Jap.

A flag of truce is sent ahead.
A signal all will be secure.
Now blood has stained its surface red
And left it just another lure;
And all is brave, "Excuse, sir, please!"
Indulged in by the Japanese.
Well, once the booby trap is sprung,
And once the flag of truce is stained,
And each believed the lying tongue
Respect can never be regained.
Far down the years the wily Jap
Will rouse the regret their booby traps.

THE KRA CANAL

Rumors are again in circulation because of international political reasons, technical difficulties and the cost of digging the canal.

Most of the terrain in that region of Thailand is hilly covered with jungle, and populated by monkeys, tigers, elephants, crocodiles, snakes and other beasts.

One of the early engineers who worked on the project estimated it would require the blasting and removal of 300,000 cubic yards of rock and would cost billions of dollars.

During the last 20 years the British, French and Dutch because Thailand might grant permission to build the proposed Kra Canal and thus destroy the strategic and commercial advantages of Singapore.

Whether Japan ever had serious intentions of building the Kra Canal is unknown. Before the present war Thailand repeatedly declared she would never give any foreign power permission to confirm the Japanese.

Now that the Japanese control Thailand, the Malay Peninsula and Burma, as well as the Singapore fortress, it is doubtful if Japan is hardly probable that the strategic and commercial advantages would justify the enormous expense. Reported to contract what is somewhat known as the Panama Canal of the Orient.

But rumors persist that Japan desires to shorten her communication lines for operations against India and that she is again seriously considering the construction of an inter-ocean waterway across the Kra Isthmus.

The history of Kra is a narrow strip of land that connects the Malay Peninsula with the mainland and separates the Bay of Bengal and the Gulf of Siam.

At its narrowest point the Isthmus of Kra is only about 40 miles wide.

A ship canal across this isthmus would shorten the water route between Tokio and Burma by many hundreds of miles.

The practicability of cutting a ship canal across the Isthmus of Kra has been discussed for nearly a hundred years.

As early as 1863 two British army engineers surveyed the Kra area to determine the practicability of constructing the proposed canal. These engineers reported that the project would be impractical from the standpoint of engineering and cost, and they recommended construction of a railroad across the isthmus instead of a canal.

About 1881 Count Ferdinand de Lesseps, who had built the Suez Canal and who later started the Panama Canal, toyed with the Kra project, but got nowhere. Two years later a British naval officer named A. J. Loftus in the service of Siam cooperated with a French expedition in surveying the isthmus with a view of building a canal.

All of these early proposals to build a ship canal across the isthmus of Kra were abandoned

Christian Church In China Virile Says Padre Hooper

S/Ldr. R. J. Hooper, R.A.F., Padre, was the guest speaker and entertained a large congregation at Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, on Sunday night as he told of the progress the Christian Church is making in China, where he had spent seven years as a missionary.

Illustrating the incredible sufferings through which China has been passing, Padre Hooper said the Christian Church in that country is not suffering from the hardships which have wrought and the large congregations in the churches, whose willing labors and efforts, he declared, were helping to enlighten the work of the pastors in the fields to them of considerable detail.

Many Chinese Christians have performed many wonderful acts of heroism. They won't get any medals, Padre Hooper said, Padre Hooper "but when the history of this war is written, the Christian Church will record a glorious chapter about the Christian Chinese, Christian martyrs, who calmly go about their duties in the face of merciless bombings, and who pray and sing hymns with the patients".

The bombings became so bad in the unprotected city where S/Ldr. Hooper was stationed, that the hospital became untenable and patients had to be moved to hospitals in the interior, where a church was usually found and a hospital with the power setting up. Even then, as the bombed houses were used as hospitals to convey victims of the brutal air raiders. And yet, stated Padre Hooper, "I marvel how these Chinese pray for their bombers".

"There are fifty million refugees in China. This blesses the population of Canada", declared the speaker. "These people have endured the rude hardships of misery, yet they are carrying on in a way that is truly wonderful. The Christian church has not only held its own, but has actually advanced in spite of all difficulties. Two-thirds of the government personnel are either Christians or were educated in Christian schools. I think China is destined to become one of the leading Christian countries of the world."

"People sometimes ask: "What did they ever do in China?" Padre Hooper asked. Many people outside of the church have very little idea of the sacrificial giving of the Christian Church in England, Canada and the United States, for the maintenance of foreign missions to save souls for Jesus Christ".

In closing S/Ldr. Hooper appealed to his hearers for earnest and support and interest in mission enterprise. The guest speaker was introduced by Rev. H. O. Eastman. The anthem was effectively rendered by the choir and Miss Muriel Jobson was heard in a vocal solo.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Feed Affects m Physically, Mentally and Emotionally

Wives and mothers have known for many years that if they want to talk about a new dress, some painting or decorating for the house, or anything else in which the husband has no interest, he or father is needed, the matter should not be discussed while the family is eating. It was no news to them, therefore, when some research workers a couple of years ago showed that hunger so affected the nervous system that the individual would not be his or her real self and would do or say things which he would not remember shortly after the eating of a meal.

That plenty of the proper foods would increase the size, health and life span of small animals was shown about five years ago. Research workers on nutrition kept a colony of albino rats on a standard ration of food for about 27 generations. The rats thrived, had large families, and lived the usual rat's life-span, by eating certain foods containing adequate vitamins to this standard ration. Then it was improved in quality by the tearing of young, and in their life span.

Dr. James S. McLester, Birmingham, Alabama, and Dr. Edward E. Pound on Foods and Nutrition of the Health Department of Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the Associates Journal that, despite the abundance of all kinds of foods, many of the individuals who do not eat enough of their body requirements, do not handle properly various food stuffs, and do not eat the proper foods.

Children, whatever their age, are what they should be physically, mentally and emotionally. Every individual has no outstanding symptoms such as bleeding gums from pyorrhea, decayed teeth, heart-beat, or the skin eruption of pellagra. They have, however, mental depression, nervous irritability, and other vague forms of ill health such as fatigue and irritability.

After watching these patients, one is impressed by the truth of the statement that the body is a chemistrophe comes to man than the loss of appetite, or lack of hotidities, and the mental depression that follows the failure to obtain proper nutrition".

How can we be sure we are eating enough of the proper kinds of foods that will keep us well physically, mentally, emotionally?

We must continue to eat plenty of the milk, bread and cereal, potatoes—foundation foods, and then evening out the balance with one day of the protective foods, that is dairy products, fruits and green vegetables.

Great Disaster Threatening Nazis in Russia

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON)

A year ago this weekend Hitler moved to the Russian front under pressure of a Russian winter to order the Nazi retreat from Rostov. Twenty months later there is no sure sign that he has yet ordered a Nazi retreat from Stalingrad to order a retreat from Stalingrad; but if he has not yet done so there is no many never get the chance. His fate may be sealed by the early and deadly Soviet trap.

That changed scene in the crucial Don-Volga salient in Russia highlights the war news of this Nov. 30 as tremendously important. Illuminated the same day last year, that event proved the greatest of the threatening Hitler elsewhere in Russia.

By Nazi admission, another shaking Red Army attack reaching for Rzhev, German communiques portray as far to the north has advanced toward or to within 50 miles of the Vyazma-Yelnia line on the Lovat. From a communications angle, this northern salient thrust could be more critical than the Russian advance in the Don loop.

Before Hitler's unstable, base at the Prussia fleet at Tuckerhad declared his increasing worries, authoritative Berlin circles could discern no cold weather to obligated help foreseen in nothing that the nature of the war had changed, with the initiative passing from the Axis to the Allies on all fronts.

British spokesmen like Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, and General Sewell, authorized British military commentator in Washington, dealt with the situation in Russia, Africa and the Mediterranean. War Secretary Henry Stimson added the Pacific theatre to the picture, but all three were unanimous in being impressed by the strategic importance of the present.

Both Russian spokesmen stressed their initiative by the enemy as the outstanding factor in the situation, and Stalin himself put out it this way:

"Hitler's east wall has been breached, the threat to his west wall remains as before, and at this critical moment he is trying to build up his south wall in the Mediterranean.

"It has been suggested that by making a move in some new direction he may take the initiative from the Allies. But when one considers the great military problems which face the Germans itself on the steppes of Russia and on the shores of North Africa, it is obvious that it isn't in a position to make a diversion at any other point".

Sinclair, Sewell and Stimson agreed that by revealing official estimates of the size of the forces Hitler put in Russia had been shifted to the Mediterranean and the Anglo-American threat from Africa.

Stimson declared that Soviet reports Tuesday Russian losses were 12,000 to 15,000 enemy troops are in a trap in the Stalingrad area, around the Gulf of Tunis with General Eisenhower's forces on the resources for the final assault. He said that the Axis forces appear although predicting a stiff fight.

From all sources it could be deduced Allied commanders are following a careful policy of consolidating their gains, bringing up adequate forces and equipment for the concentrated drive forward step. It is the foe who must make extraordinary efforts to retain the Nazi attack on Tunion to meet the ever-widening and deepening Allied threat.

Goldup Wastes No Time In Making Presence Felt With New Club, the Rangers

Scores Three Goals and Two Assists in Weekend Games

LEAFS WIN, LOSE

By The Canadian Press

Henry (Hank) Goldup, one of the principals in the National Hockey League's first important trade this season, has wasted no time in making his presence felt with his new club.

Toronto Maple Leafs traded Goldup and one of their minor league chattels, Dudley (Red) Garrett, to New York Rangers Saturday noon for defenceman Cecil (Babe) Dye. Goldup, delighted to get off the bench, celebrated by scoring three goals and assisting in two others in two weekend games.

Goldup's performance against his former team-mates in Toronto Saturday didn't affect the outcome, but he was awarded a silver spoon as one of the pre-game stars, individually, he was overshadowed by Syl Apps, who contributed three goals and three assists for six as Toronto's 22 scoring points in an 8-6 victory over Hershey.

In Sunday's game against Boston Bruins, Goldup contributed 14-karat hens that the Rangers will wear on their jerseys. He also made by scoring two goals in a 3-3 New York triumph that lifted the Broadway shirts out of the cellar for the first time this season. Lynn Patrick contributed the odd Ranger goal while Harvey Jackson and Bunz Bell tallied for Bruins.

Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks travelled only one-fifth both took advantage of their Sunday engagements. Wings' strength was displayed to full by first beating by conquering Montreal Canadiens 7-3, rolling to victory on a five-goal first-period splurge. Mud Bruneteau's team topped Detroit scorers with two goals with the others going to Carl Liscombe, Don Grosso, Mike Goodfellow, Joe Carveth and Cully Brown.

Hershey Brothers Frowned

The Bentley brothers, Doug and Max, teamed to give Chicago a 2-0 verdict over Leafs that put the winners one point ahead of Toronto in second place. Dave Schriner and Mel Hill scored second-period goals to give the Leafs a two-goal set back before Doug and Max to cash the winning counters in the final 20 minutes.

Boston Bruins defeated Canadiens 6-3 in a Saturday contest at Montreal, rookie Don Gallinger setting the pace with a goal and two assists. The game attended the first Bruins' unbeaten string to six games, a winning streak brought to an end by Rangers Monday. Canadiens' two weekend defeats meant that they have now failed to win a game in eight starts since Nov. 12. Rangers' win upped a record of going through six contests without being shut out.

WEEKEND STARS

By The Canadian Press

Donnie Gallinger, Bruins, who counted one goal and two assists as Boston turned back Canadiens 6-2 ... Hank Goldup, Rangers, who provided two goals for New York in 3-2 victory over Boston.

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—Three veteran players with Flin Flon Bombers in the Saskatchewan senior hockey league were working 75 miles from town when word reached them that Pinky Davis had called Bombers together for practice. A searing winter wind swept the north country and all transportation was tied up. Undaunted, Syd Brown, Ernie Westbury and Freddy Bowman walked the 75 miles and were on hand for the first workout.

Dave (Regina Leader-Post) Dryburgh says: "Bowman is known as the little guy who is always there. A year ago he was out in the wilds when the season opened and hadn't turned up when bombers played their first game. But next afternoon a foal-covered dog team staggered into town and there was Freddy."

Dave says Bowman, Flin Flon goal veteran, "will probably be all pepped up this season because he can spend Christmas at home with his family for the first time in seven years. He's been on the road with Bombers on Dec. 25 every season and Buddy's youngsters were beginning to suspect their dad was the guy who drove the reindeer for Santa Claus."

"The trajectory of Ray Murry's sportsmanship and ability proved a great inspiration for this year's team," said Rev. L. O. McKenna, who coached St. Francis Xavier College, Antigonish, to the Nova Scotia senior English rugby title this year. Murry, one of the college's greatest all-round athletes, captained St. Xavier rugger teams in 1936-39-41 and led them to the provincial title last year. He was killed in an automobile accident last September soon after entering his Royal Canadian Navy commission.

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Nov. 30.—(CP)—Boosting many luminaries of Canada's ice organized hockey among Royal Canadian Air Force teams overseas is set to its greatest season.

Some games already have been played and an inter-league playoff at the season's end will decide the R.C.A.F. championship.

Played with a generally increased personnel over last winter, hockey interest has mounted accordingly not only from the viewpoint of the players, but from that of the British who look to the game as a big way before the war when many Canadians migrated here to play such teams as Wembley Monarchs and Harringay Racers.

So great is the enthusiasm that in the southern league, comprising eight teams from fighter squadrons and London headquarters, players are flown down each Sunday to travel to practice sessions in a suburban London rink.

This league will be operated in two series, the first to start in December. The second series is scheduled to open Jan. 15. Such is division of play established to offset distribution of schedules which might be occasioned by movements of squadrons to other sections of the country.

A big pool of hockey equipment will be maintained for use of various teams but many players, with an eye to the future, brought along their skates at least when they departed Canada.

Sloner of scoring the season victoriously went to a Canadian fighter squadron which defeated a Canadian team from a R.A.F. Lancaster bomber station 5-4.

Star of the opener was LAC. H. C. Jolley of Toronto with three goals and an assist. The other marksmen for the winners included LAC. J. R. Lytle of London, Ont.

HURRICANES WIN EASTERN TITLE OVER- UPLANDS

Fliers Score 18-13 Win but Were Lucky to Emerge Victorious

COULTER STARS

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Nov. 30 — (CP) — Hamilton A. F. Hurricanes just can't please the public. They have scored three times as many points as their opponents in 10 league and two playoff games, but nobody is impressed — not even P.O. Lew Hayman.

"They were terrible," said coach Hayman Saturday after Hurricanes shaded Uplands R. C. A. F. Flyers 18-13 in a two-game-total-point final to enter the Dominion championship contest against Winnipeg R. C. A. F.-Bombers here next Saturday. "They just struggled through to victory."

In that contention Hayman had the backing of most of the 10,000 fans who watched Uplands roll for 14 first downs compared with six for Hurricanes, kick an average of two yards further than the Ontario Union champions, complete a greater percentage of attempted forward passes and gain 31 more yards on kick runbacks.

Uplands, in fact, had an edge everywhere except in the fumble department. All but six Hurricane points were set up by an Uplands fumble or some other piece of misfortune. The bad luck started soon before the game began, with lineman P.O. George Sprague removed to hospital after suffering a severe stomach cramp.

Hot Operator Price

Then he operated again in the first quarter when P.O. Tony Golab, kicked from behind the Uplands' goal-line, sent a short punt off the side of his foot which Flt. Lt. Eddie Thompson carried 12 yards for a touchdown which he converted himself to bring his season's point total to 61. Again in the second quarter, Hurricanes took possession at midfield on a fumble by AC2. Thain Simon and struck for a touchdown almost a minute later on a forward pass from AC2. Bill Stukus to Cpl. Fred Kilek. AC2 Don Crowe converted.

Uplands stayed in the ball game with nine first-half points, all well-earned. Simon raped 35 yards for a touchdown on one of Uplands' fast-breaking, two-man end runs with Sgt. Victor (Buddy) Hellyer converting. Golab's attempted placement rolled deep for a single and a safety touch was scored when Sgt. Ed. Justice blocked Kilek's kick and the ball rolled to the dead-line.

Just Missed Touchdown

LAC. Jack Buell just missed a touchdown on the play, but was declared out of the game when he strenuously protested the official decision that the ball reached the deadline before he obtained possession.

Kilek's single and an unconverted touchdown by AC2. Jack Parry on a 15-yard Stukus pass made victory safe for Hamilton in the third quarter, although Uplands added four points in the same quarter on a single and placement by Golab.

Golab was one of the stars, but his performance wasn't any better than that given by P.O. Doug Turner, Uplands centre and secondary defence star who contributed perhaps 75 per cent. of his team's tackles; P.O. Bobby Coulter, whose hitting running and passing gave Hurricanes plenty to worry about; and Justice, who played 60 minutes with his broken left hand in a cast. Hurricanes derived most of their offensive spark from Thompson, Stukus and Parry, but they were less effective than usual.

Hershey Bears, Buffalo Bisons Still Hold Lead

(By The Canadian Press)

Pre-season predictions which labelled Buffalo and Hershey as the teams to beat in American hockey league still hold true today with both teams enjoying commanding leads in their respective divisions.

The Bisons moved five points ahead of the idle Pittsburgh Hornets in the western division by blanking Washington Lions 5-0 last night. The five goals were divided among as many players, and 17-year-old Gordon Bell achieved his second shutout in the Boston nets.

Hershey picked up two points on the second-place Providence by slipping the Reds 4-3 in Hershey to increase its margin to six points. It was the 15th triumph in 16 starts for the Bears. Their first line of Harry Frost, Wally Kilrea and Jimmy Sullivan accounted for all their goals, Frost bagging two of them.

New Haven Eagles tripped Cleveland Barons 2-1. New Haven jumped a 1-1 tie in the second period on goals by Joe Levandoski and Ken Smith, which proved enough of its margin to win.

Three games also were played Saturday night. Pittsburgh stopped New Haven, 3-2, Buffalo and Hershey played to a 3-3 tie and Washington and Cleveland deadlocked with the same score, 2-2.

DID YOU KNOW —FOOTBALL, south of the border, moved out of the 1942 sports picture Saturday carrying the biggest guests of its career in years. . . . Army was a decided favorite over Navy, but that "minor" item, and all had the ball in the "odds" some most of the day. . . . As Boston made the biggest surprise when a "medium" Holy Cross squad beat the previously untied, unbeaten Boston College eleven by the unbelievable score of 16 to 13. . . . Thus Boston College fell from grace as the No. 1 team in Eastern college football for 1942. . . . Down south Georgia beat Georgia Tech for another upset, not-so-much in winning, but in the fact Georgia blasted the "Tech Wreckers" 34 to 0. . . . Dixie after the game Georgia was offered the spots at both the Rose and Sugar bowl games on New Year's Day. . . . Of course the players voted to make the trip to Pasadena for the colorful Rose Bowl game . . . Another new Jan. 1st bowl game was announced over the weekend when it was announced that the N.Y.U. would stage the "Corn Bowl" game at Chicago on New Year's Day. . . . Holy Cross will be one of the teams playing in this new bowl game, but Notre Dame refused the offer spot . . . In the United States professional football picture the powerful Chicago Bears won the western title, while the Washington Redskins scalped all in the eastern section. . . . On December 13, these two top-candidates for the championship, the Capital City of the U.C.A., where it is nothing short of a pity what will happen to the Redskins. . . . In Canadian rugby circles the Toronto R.C.A.F. "Hurricanes" eliminated the Ottawa "Fliers" via the Hurricanes and Winnipeg "Bombers" in an all-Air Force Dominion final next Saturday. . . . Steve O'Neill, former Detroit coach, was named manager of the Tigers yesterday and will replace Del Baker.

A GLEAM OF ENCOURAGING light came out of Peterboro today when it was learned the Petes are endeavouring to formulate plans whereby the Brock Street rink may yet open its doors to hockey in the 1942 season. It is a last-minute effort on the part of sportsmen and players alike in the Terraced City and our guess is Jim Ellis and Fred Scales will yet get over the deal.

According to the drafting of the O.H.A. group last week, the Hume Arena here is in the "better" than its share of organized hockey. Aside from the regular district loop of Oshawa, Peterboro and Belleville, the Quinte R.C.A.F. service hockey loop applied for a grouping and were granted an intermediate category. All games in this group will be played at the Hume Arena, and for a tremendous crowner to the football coaching before next season (if there is a next season). . . . On the news that Dick Harlow of Harvard and Jock Haggerty of Georgetown had joined the army gave a hint of what you can expect. Dartmouth's Tuss McLaughry and Syracuse's Cosie Solom both are looking for commissions and plenty of others will pursue the same search now that the season is practically over. . . .

AT THE McCARTHY

"Who Done It?"

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are at it again, spreading hilarity with their eighth comedy for Universal and their ninth since they created a minor earthquake with "Buck Privates."

Their new laugh film is "Who Done It?" now at the McCarthy theatre the same time that it is in a second week a the Uptown theatre, Toronto.

Bud and Lou have the roles of amateur detectives in the current achievement, subject of their quest is the solution of some devilish murder mysteries and the crimes take place in a huge broadcasting station. Dramatized by the police as impostors, the two lads lead a chase which obviously has been manufactured as the movie pursuit to end all movie pursuits. It is a riot that will have you screaming with laughter. The cast "Who Done It?" also includes Patric Knowles, William Gargan, Jerome Cowan, Louise Albritton, Don Porter and William Bendix and Universal News rounds out an excellent musical comedy revue featuring Hot Breathtones and his band and a technicolor Andy Panda cartoon, complete a program that Belleville and vicinity theatregoers will long remember. Please be early for choice seats.

AT THE BELLE

"The Major and the Minor"

If ever there was a picture to put one in high humor, it is Paramount's engaging comedy, "The Major and the Minor", which opened into the Belle Theatre Saturday with Ray Milland and Ginger Rogers in the title roles.

The sight of vivacious, exciting Miss Rogers masquerading as a pigtailed twelve-year-old and in one scene even pretending to be her own mother is really hilarious across fun. The masquerade started with Ginger's determination to see New York and return to her home town in Iowa. Not having enough money to take her there, the resourceful Ginger makes a few changes in her clothes and bobs and buys herself a half-fare ticket. The conductor isn't convinced she's only twelve years old, so Ginger, instead of fighting it out, hides out in Ray Milland's compartment.

The Major —Ray Milland, of course—is on his way back to his teaching post in a military academy. He's very nice to the little girl, even lets up his lower berth to her. But when his fiancee, Rita Johnson, carries him at a station en route and finds a night-rowned female in his compartment, she doesn't stop to listen to explanations.

Milland pleads with Ginger to accompany him to the academy so everyone can see she's not a siren, but just a harmless little twelve-year-old.

The Mayor and the Minor" stands head and shoulders above most comedies this reviewer has ever seen. Everyone in the cast delivers a sorting performance, and everyone includes Rita Johnson, Robert Benchley, Diana Lynn and Ginger's mother, Lela Rogers, who plays her mother in the film.

An interesting newsreel and novelty film in technicolor, precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"My Gal Sal"

Hold on to your hearts boys, Rita's back in town! Yes, it's Rita Hayworth, America's Inspiration Girl, whose picture is now at the Capitol Theatre in Mitchell Leisen Fox's Technicolor musical "My Gal Sal." And as inspiration she certainly is!

Rita's starred with Victor Mature, John Sutton and Carole Landis, in this gay and up-to-the minute story of the life of Paul Dresser, famous composer of "My Gal Sal" "On The Banks of The Wabash" and a hundred and one other hit tunes. The picture has been mountained lavishly with nothing spared to make it an outstanding film musical, and Director Irving Cummings has seen to it that everything flits neatly into place so that the film is geared to delight all moviegoers.

The story deals with the trials of Mature as Dresser, during his struggle to get his songs published and played. His inspiration is Rita, and what better inspiration does any man need?

A cast of excellent supporting players including James Gleason, Phil Silvers, Walter Catlett, Mona Maris and Frank Orth round out the huge cast.

"Sweater Girl"

(First Belleville Showing)

Southern California's "sweater girls," the one-who originated both the style and the nickname, had their chance to exhibit their dancing and dramatic talents in Paramount's tuneful film about campus life, "Sweater Girl," now at the Capitol Theatre with Eddie Bracken and June Preisser in the leading roles.

CHAPTER 20

Una Mentioned

Miss Malcolm greeted him smilingly, and held out both hands to him.

"You dear man!" she exclaimed. "You are a wonder! To think of your finding Una!"

"Is she suffering from shock?"

"Yes, that; and there is something more. It's about that will. She is still stone deaf and bewildered."

"I don't wonder. Where has she been? With whom?"

"Oh, with a very strange set of people. They tried to make her sign papers and, well, I wouldn't let her tell me. She grew so excited over it. I said she must wait for you."

"She was in charge of some woman?"

"Yes, a woman who was common and illiterate, but who was careful of the girl, too. She told Una she was Monk's sister."

"I'll find she was decently treated. Will she see me?"

"Yes; but please don't excite her more than is necessary."

When Una entered the room, Stone was surprised at her calm demeanour and self-control. She greeted her quietly, and said he was glad to see her in such happy surroundings.

She smiled; said said Miss Malcolm was her guardian angel, and there never was such another.

Until me, please," said Una, judging direct and short speech would be best. "How many people were in the house where you were held?"

"They were coming and going," Una told him, "I seldom saw them, except Mr. Monk. He was of horrible appearance, but he was truly unkind. He told me that matters which I could not understand had made it necessary for me to stay there with his sister for a while. He said if I would sign a paper I could leave there much sooner. He said all he wanted was for my own benefit and if I refused I was an unnatural daughter.

"I was unmoved by that argument, and I refused to sign anything at all, unless I had someone I knew personally, to be with me when I signed. He asked me whom I knew, but they were either people connected with the art school or people I have met here at Miss Malcolm's. Naturally, he knew none of these and as I wouldn't sign without them, that ended it. I was through.

"It seemed to me things were not progressing as they had hoped, for some reason, and then they began to appear frightened about something. Mr. Monk became a little less polite to me, tried to be more dictatorial. I was afraid of him, but I did not show it. At least I tried not to, but he is a shrewd man and I can tell you I was glad to see a policeman, Captain Raynor was a friend of a friend of his house, in care of a most polite officer. And that's about all I think."

"It's all I what bother you about now, Miss Deane, except one other matter. You are the granddaughter of Jason Webb?"

"I am, yes. But he disinherited my mother when she eloped with my father."

"Still, you are his granddaughter. Do you know the contents of his will?"

Una Deane looked vaguely troubled.

"Not exactly," she said. "I have heard different stories and the one told me by Mr. Monk, I am sure is not true. Will you tell me?"

"The terms of the will," Stone said, "are of a kind often used in the fiction of the last century, though not often in real life. However, it pleased Jason Webb to make his will in accordance with his own inclinations, and with this result."

Then he told the girl the provisions the will had made.

She listened thoughtfully.

"Yes," she said, "that's about the way I heard it, but I couldn't believe it. What ought I to do, Mr. Stone? What do you think, Miss Malcolm?"

But both her friends declared that she must do according to her own wishes; that no one could or ought to marry without knowing her feelings about it all.

"There's one thing, sir," she then she exclaimed, with a sudden burst of indignation, "no matter if the fortune is a hundred million dollars, I would not marry a murderer to obtain it! Please tell Mr. Brand Herrick that I resign all claim I may have to my grandfather's money, if it is to be acquired only by my marriage to a murderer!"

Miss Malcolm was deeply touched, she sat down by the girl, putting an arm around her.

But Fleming Stone looked at Una Deane with an expression of grave reproof.

"You are unjust," he said coldly. "Mr. Herrick has not been proved a murderer and you have no right to call him one. I bring you the message he asked me to deliver for him."

"What is "I"? asked Una Deane, her face exhibiting only scorn.

Stone told her what Brand had asked him to tell her.

She listened closely and when he had done she said, in a scornful voice, "Please present my compliments to Mr. Brand Herrick and tell him I declined his suit. I do not marry a man I do not know, for the purpose of acquiring a fortune, especially when that man is —may be— murderer."

"If you did know Mr. Herrick," Stone said, "you would not speak like that."

"Why would I not?"

"Because he is trying to do only what is best for you. He made the plan I told of, since he could think of no better way for you to secure the control of the Webb estate."

"Yes, Una," Miss Malcolm said, "I think you are unfair to him."

"I don't care! He can take his money or leave it alone. I don't want it, with a marriage certificate tied to it!"

"You have seen Mr. Herrick," Stone said, marveling at this display of temper. "How can you think he is anything but fair?"

"I have seen him," Una stormed on. "But he scarcely spoke to me. He paid me no more attention than if I were a block. Besides, Mr. Murray was present; Mr. Raynor was at least polite but Mr. Herrick is outside the pale!"

"You know," Stone reminded her "you can get a divorce at once."

"And spend my girlhood as a divorced? No, thank you!"

"But, dearie," Miss Malcolm was almost angry at her then, "that is not Mr. Herrick's fault. You can't get the money without him, and money has no right to get the money without you."

"Then let the money go to Edith's Corners! What do I care?"

Una Deane ran out of the room already in tears.

"Nerves," said Fleming Stone, as he rose to go.

"Wounded vanity," said Miss Malcolm, as she said good-bye to him.

Y Y Y Y

"You are a marvel, Mr. Stone," Raynor said, after he had listened to the details of the detective's find of Una Deane. "Without your help I doubt we would ever have found Jason Webb's granddaughter."

"Oh, yes, you would. It was a mere stroke of luck on my part, and much credit belongs to young Mr. Bob."

"We'll look after him later. Just now, Mr. Stone, what are we doing about our second-McCleod case. I insisted on having one of our men at the autopsy, though Doctor Larkin conducted it."

"What caused Mrs. Emily's death? Was she smothered, as Mrs. McCleod was?"

"Not quite the same. Miss McCleod died from asphyxia caused by strangulation. There was evidence of intense pressure on the carotid artery, and a congested condition of the brain. She was murdered in her bed, by a strong determined hands and as she had been drugged, her death was easily accomplished. It occurred between 1 and 2 o'clock, and Captain Murray is known to have been there during that time."

"Motive?"

"He had been trying to sell the lady some worthless stock. There is the possibility that there was a quarrel, in which Miss Emily McCleod would hold her own and if in case he blows, he would, of course, win by superior strength. Miss Emmy has strings, and perhaps he knew, and she was afraid of no man."

"I can't think there was a rough and tumble fight," Stone said, aloof. "I think young Murray would be too wise to commit a murder in circumstances where he must necessarily be the only suspect."

"When a man loses his temper far enough to murder, he doesn't stop to think of the consequences."

"No further evidence, I suppose? And no clue?"

"We haven't found any yet. Do look into this matter, won't you, Mr. Stone?"

"Yes, I mean to do so. Have you any reason to think that the murderer of Miss Emmy is the same one who killed Miss McCleod?"

"No especial reason, no. You see, the method used in both cases is of—"

"Well, he isn't," Stone interrupted, "and I expect to prove it. Now, Mr. Raynor, Miss McCleod murders were done by the same person, that lets Herrick out."

"Yes, of course; but we haven't said the same hand struck twice."

"You're not going to arrest Murray, are you?"

"We haven't quite enough on him for that, but unless you can find a way to help us, I think we'll detain him for further inquiry.

"Give me twenty-four hours more, Mr. Raynor, you know and the Una Deane complication is pretty troublesome.

"All right, then, I'll hold off Murray till tomorrow and you bring us one of your magic solutions to our troubles that will take our breath away."

"If I find out what I hope and expect to find out, I will do just that; and I'll guarantee it will be startling."

From Raynor's office, Stone went to the McCleod house.

He was shocked when he saw Emily's appearance. The man seemed a mere ghost of his former self. Stone had never seen him before without the spruce air that made him, at times, insufferable.

Today he was pathetic. His large sad eyes expressed hopeless sorrow and his whole demeanour was that of one who has nothing to live for.

from an original smuggled French postal and there's not another hat identical in the whole city and perhaps in the whole country.

Nothing is so rare as personal distinction in this machine age when conformity is the rule and individuality is the exception, pop said, and ma said, That's exactly how it makes me feel. Just think, William, I could wear a hat like mine, she said.

What was it the poet said about the beauty of a star when only one is shining in the dark? pop said. Why it is with you! new hat, he said, and ma said, Why William! I'm not one haunting idea that bothers me. When I see other women intently eyeing my hat, how can I be sure their glances dont concern a hidden flaw of superiority or pity? What I mean is, if a certain average of well dressed women look fairly similar to mine, then I could be sure that mine was the cost of the fashionable swin. But as it is, I hardly know whether to keep it or exchange it. So what do you think, William? ma said.

My dear, you're on the horns of a dilemma and I should be charmed to classify life you off, but the whole problem more than ever convinces me that this is a women's world, so perhaps you had better consult some woman, pop said.

Which she probably will.

FIGHTING GROWS

that the all-out Allied attack upon the naval base at Bizerte and Tunis, the capital of Tunisia, might soon be forthcoming.

Similar activities in Sicily, jumping off place for much of the supplies and reinforcements the Axis has been sending into Tunisia, again was the theme of the R.A.F. two weeks of bombers struck there.

In Tunisia British airmen pounded on the docks, the railway yards, supplies and troops and both were left burning. Another was left badly damaged off the coast.

Sardinia, Sicily and Malta were hit and set afire in a Saturday night R.A.F. raid on Tripoli and more docks were severed in daylight Sunday. One merchant ship in port and others was left afire.

Blasting Second Wind

British Middle East headquarters said there was nothing to report on activities of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th. Army, getting its second wind since the start of last month's Africa corps' foe miles across North Africa.

The victorious British desert forces presumably were bringing up fresh troops and supplies for an assault on the German and Italian armies dug in up in the natural fortifications of the El Agheila defile.

A roundabout account broadcast by Moscow and controlled to Tass reported that a Geneva datelline that Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief, had arrived at Tunis to deal with the aftermath of the destruction of the French fleet by its own officer and men.

Fighting for the last toehold of the Axis in Tunisia apparently was growing in intensity in the Mateur-Tunis area and a Berlin radio reported that fighting also was in progress near Sousse, on the coast at mid zone 70 miles southeast of Tunis.

French troops under Gen. Henri Giraud have been reported active in this region earlier, apparently in an effort to prevent Axis forces in Tunisia from reaching the German and Italian strongholds at Bizerte and Tunis.

Casualties According to Plan

The Moscow radio broadcast a despatch from Pyrnich based on Germanic sources which said "Operations continued to develop according to plan."

"In collaboration with our Allies progress was planned, on the contrary all raid zone 70 miles southeast of Tunis.

DEATH TOLL IN

lam as screaming women and horror-stricken men dashed for cover, tumbling over each other on the jam-packed stairways.

District Fire Chief William Mahoney said that tangled and frightfully-burned bodies were found four and five deep and that mattresses and chairs were piled on and flung into a shambles among the dead.

A hoard of inquiry, including fire officials, United States navy representatives—Navy Secretary Frank Knox

Iss Sulfa Drugs

As many as possible, physicians and specialists in the treatment of burns, mustered at the Boston Commonwealth Pebble Society, ministering to the injured, using blood plasma from Red Cross in Washington and pain and poison-relieving Sulfa drugs.

Meanwhile, long lines of relatives and friends joined ten abreast outside the city's morgues throughout the cold night waiting for a chance to identify bodies, many of them charred beyond recognition.

Seven members of the city and two representatives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which began its probe yesterday, reconvened today.

The death toll mounted only behind the Steamship General Slocum fire in 1904 in New York's East River in which 1,021 died and the Chicago Iroquois Theatre fire of 1903, which claimed 603 lives.

Equipment Out of Order

Deputy Fire Chief John F. McDonough told investigating officials that he found a number of bodies some within ten feet of a door equipped with a panic lock designed to open under pressure, but it was out of order and had been secured by another lock.

The death of many of the victims was ascribed by Medical Examiner Timothy Leary to monoxide poisoning and smoke inhalation. He said a number were "terribly burned" after death.

The stampede for the exits began, fire officials said, when a girl, spotting a thin wisp of smoke curling along the walls, shouted "Fire", and within seconds the crowd broke for the doorways.

Two students, Seymour Stein, resembled a huge brick oven after the flames had been extinguished, while hardly a scorched spot on the outside walls and roof, but with the interior a mass of debris.

Actor Terribly Burned

Among notables who escaped from the inferno were Charles (Buck) Jones, Van Nuys, Calif., cowboy star of the motion pictures, who was badly burned, and Scott Dunlap also of Van Nuys, motion picture producers, who was injured and among those in hospital.

A number of those who escaped leaped from the roof of the low building to the tops of automobiles and thence to the street. The clothes of some were in flames.

A night club singer, Billy Payne, saved 10 patrons by leading them into a huge basement ice box.

"I was getting ready to start the show," Payne said, "when I suddenly heard screams. I thought there was a fight. Then I saw flames racing along the wall.... Everyone started running. If only others had followed me they would be alive."

8,000-POUND

"The Air Ministry announced that "the weather over the target was good and the attack was heavy and concentrated. Good results were seen."

The Italian high command added a revealing footnote: "Damage was great, especially in the centre of the town," its broadcast said and the number of persons killed not been ascertained nearly 24 hours after the raid.

Reuters news agency carried a dispatch datelined from the Italian frontier, which reported that 200,000 of Turin's 630,000 population had fled the city under repeated air attacks.

Fiesta Fosters at Turin

Turin long has been the principal automobile manufacturing centre of Italy, it was second in importance only to Milan as a textile centre, and large aircraft factories had been situated there for many years.

Milan and the port of Genoa have suffered heavily in R.A.F. raids but Turin was the target of the heaviest pounding in August of Britain's long-distance bombers was massed in an almost hour-long attack Nov. 20 and two-ton bombs were dropped at the rate of one a minute.

One pilot, whose stick of bombs dropped directly over a factory in Saturday night's raid, said that he brought his plane down through heavy anti-aircraft fire to 1,600 feet.

The long factory sheds looked "like a small egg" he carefully drawn in figures across the sands," he said.

Then the bomb load was released.

"After the bombing it looked as if the same egg had smashed flat into the lot."

While the bombers were completing their mission, with the pilots of the fighter escort which announced loss of five planes, the Germans had struck at transportation in Occupied France and Belgium, forty one planes, the Air Ministry announced. Four more planes were missing after these raids on targets in France and Holland.

Attack Locomotives

The R.C.A.F. said the Aleskons of a fighter squadron formed a substantial part of the force attacking locomotives and goods trains in Belgium and France, All R.C.A.F. planes returned.

"Two enemy fighter planes did attempt to intercept the small force of southeast England Sunday afternoon, the Air Force Home Security Ministries said, but no German aircraft were reported over British territory."

The morale-shaking effect of the cities had a promised sequel in R.A.F.'s long sweeps against Italian cities, it was promised last week by Prime Minister Churchill's threat Sunday that unless Italy quit the war the bombers will be coming shorter distances from the Allies' terminal parts' bases.

Parsons recently arrived in Turkey from Tripoli said that Germans are building fortifications along the Italian-German frontier and along the Balkan side of the Adriatic against the day Italy quits the war.

Meantime, in an attempt to hold the Italian front, it is reported that 60,000 of Germany's noted "Hurricane Jets" and party Mussolinians have been rushed into Italy.
